Patrol say DeWine's daughter driving too fast:

XENIA -- Lt. Gov. Michael DeWine's daughter was driving too fast for the wet road conditions when she was killed in a collision, the State Highway Patrol said Monday.

Trooper D.T. Heard at the Xenia post said the patrol determined that Rebecca A. DeWine was driving 55 mph on Aug. 4 when her car went across the center line on a curve. The car hit a pickup truck going 39 mph on U.S. 42 north of Xenia, Heard said Monday.

The speed recommended on the curve is 25 mph, he said.

Heard said Ms. DeWine probably could have avoided the crash if the pavement had been dry. He said she was used to driving the stretch of road in dry conditions and she didn't adjust her driving habits to compensate for the wet pavement. The patrol found evidence that she was using her brakes as she went into the impact.

Ms. DeWine, 22, was the third oldest of the DeWine's eight children.

DeWine's wife, Fran, said the family had not seen the results of the crash investigation and had no comment.

Still on the loose:

BUCYRUS, Ohio (AP) -- A Plymouth-area man who walked away from the minimum-security area at the Crawford County jail was still loose Monday evening, the sheriff's department said.

Charles R. Osborne, 29, was in jail for misdemeanor traffic violations when he walked away about 9 p.m. Sunday, said Deputy Gail Cochran. Escape charges were pending, she said.

Local and state law enforcement authorities were notified.

Hurricane aid to increase

Clinton pledges increased emphasis on reconstruction

The Associated Press

HOMESTEAD, Fla. -- President Clinton walked a street Monday where leafless palm trees tower over boarded-up buildings as he pledged ongoing federal help to people still recovering from Hurricane Andrew.

"We will be with you from now on," Clinton said after an emotional town meeting with South Florida residents who recounted their yearlong struggles to restore homes and communities. "Give us a chance to help. We can make this come out all right."

Clinton brought no new federal initiatives on his Labor Day visit, but said the government has a "long-term commitment to helping people here deal with the aftermath of the hurricane. We are in this for the long run."

He said the reconstruction work offers a Labor Day lesson that "the government and the people ... can work together as partners."

Later Monday, he was visiting a boarded-up apartment complex in South Miami Heights that is being rehabilitated as a joint project of organized labor, the federal government and private enterprise.

Clinton said the ongoing recovery work in Florida demonstrates "we have to look at these things not as a one-month or even a one-year project. We have to ask ourselves -- and be honest about it -- how long does it take for people to recover from something like this and structure the national response accordingly."

Clinton praised the residents' tenacity and said he hoped people in the Midwest who have been flooded out of their homes will see "how far you can come in a year." "It's very moving to me," he added.

Clinton brought along Labor Secretary Robert Reich and Housing and Urban Development Secretary Henry Cisneros to demonstrate the administration's broad-based efforts to help in the recovery effort.

Clinton's visit came one year after he came to Florida as a presidential candidate to survey damage from the nation's most expensive natural disaster. The storm on Aug. 24, 1992, caused an

Arafat tries to gain support for peace plan

The Associated Press

CAIRO, Egypt -- Yasser Arafat brought his campaign to sell the PLO-Israeli peace agreement to Egypt on Monday after receiving lukewarm support in Syria.

The agreement calls for Palestinian self-rule in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank town of Jericho -- a small portion of the Arab land Israel has occupied since 1967.

Before arriving in Egypt, the only Arab country that has given wholehearted support to the plan, the PLO chief picked up endorsements for the accord from the Gulf Cooperation Council, a six-nation group lead by Saudi Arabia.

It called the accord "a first step toward reaching a just, lasting and comprehensive settlement to the Palestinian problem and the Arab-Israeli conflict."

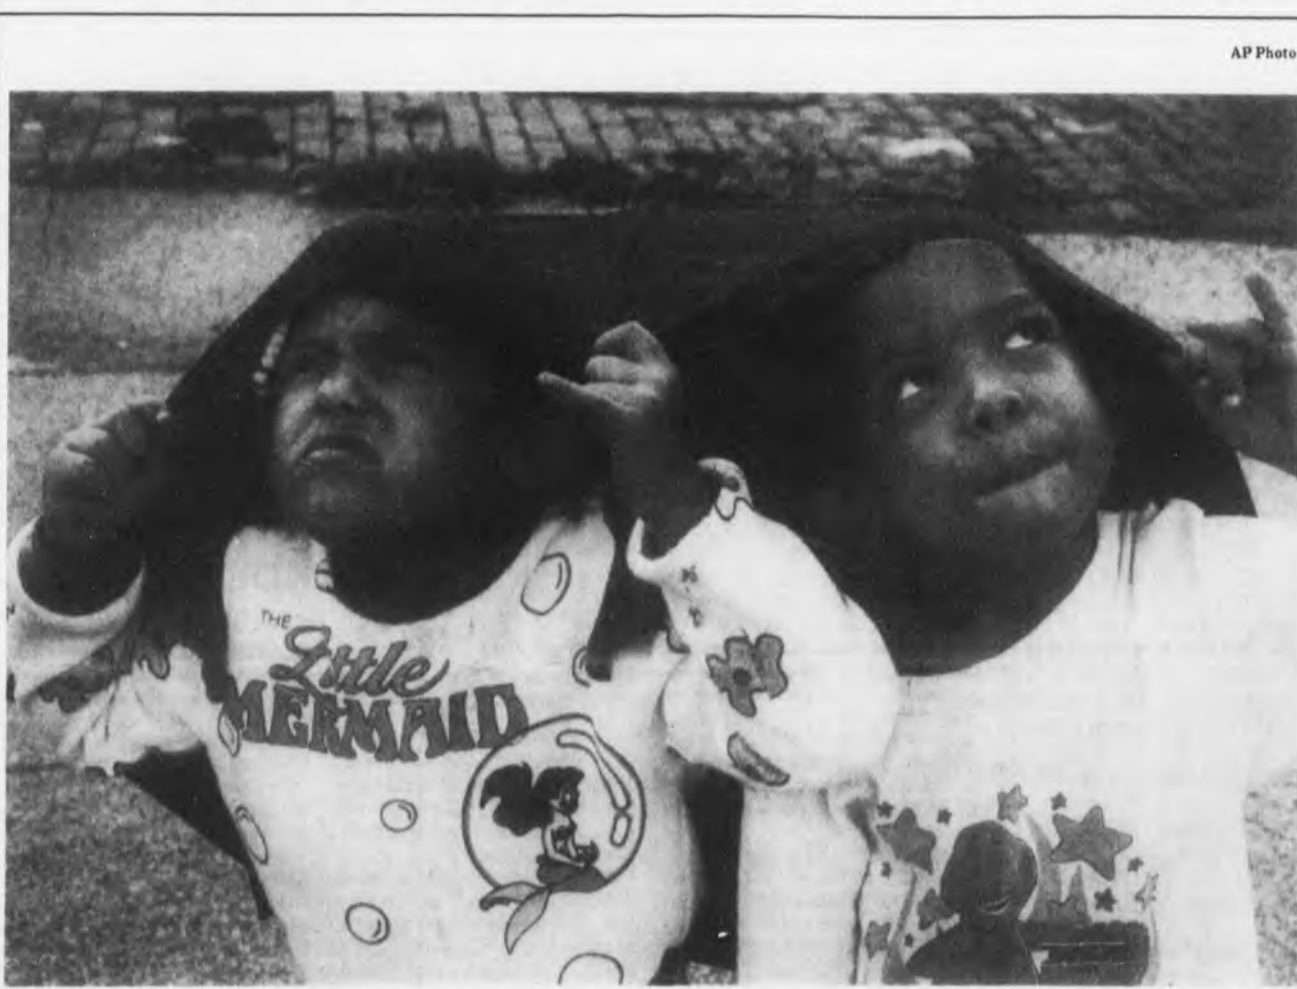

In Syria, Arafat met for 6 1/2 hours with President Hafez Assad, who asked to study the plan more fully. The Palestine Liberation Organization took Assad's request as an expression of support, with reservations, a PLO official said in Cairo, speaking on condition of anonymity.

If Assad's backing materializes, it could help Arafat secure approval for the plan from the PLO's ruling Executive Committee. Hard-line PLO factions based in Damascus are represented in the ruling body, and Assad has influence over them, although he does not control them.

The PLO Executive Committee meeting could begin this week. Israel has already approved the deal.

Radical Palestinian groups and even members of Arafat's own faction have said the agreement contains no guarantees for a Palestinian state and avoids dealing with the status of Jerusalem, Israeli settlements and the 3.5 million Palestinian refugees who live outside the occupied territories.

Copyright suit filed against Wood Cable TV

by Shari L. Veleba
courts reporter

Eight entertainment companies are suing area cable television companies including Wood Cable, Inc. and Wood TV Corp, 118 N. Main St., for alleged copyright infringement.

About 40 other Northwest Ohio cable companies and systems operators are named in the complaint, filed Aug. 3 in U.S. District Court in Toledo.

The suit is one of 90 filed across the nation against cable companies that seek a total of $15 million in compensation.

In the complaint, Columbia Pictures, Tri-Star Pictures, MGM, Paramount, Twentieth Century Fox, Universal, the Walt Disney Company and Warner Brothers allege the cable companies did not pay royalties that should have been paid to them for programming. They have filed similar suits in federal courts across the United States.

Larry Miller, general manager of Wood Cable, said the case stems from a time period of one and one-half years when the cable companies did not have to pay royalties for channels.

When the royalties payment system was changed due to a reversal in a court decision about the issue, cable companies were required to pay the studios -- but the studios say they did not do it quickly enough.

According to the complaint, the defendants paid the remainder of the total royalty fees owed for the 1986 and half of 1987 periods, but did not pay any interest with their late royalty payments for any of the periods.

"I don't know what they hope to accomplish by this," Miller said. "It's not that they weren't paid. It's that they weren't paid in a timely manner."

Charles Rosenberg, an attorney for the studios helping with the Ohio case, said the timeliness of the payments is important.

"The whole issue is whether they were paid on time," he said. Miller said the suit will not affect cable TV rates.

Federal improvement plan set

Gore to unveil sweeping government changes today

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON -- Vice President Al Gore said Monday the administration's "rock 'em, sock 'em, shake 'em up" plan to change the federal bureaucracy will make the government work better and cost less. Government as it exists is "failing the American people," Gore said.

The vice president, point man on the proposal to make sweeping changes in the federal government, is scheduled to unveil the blueprint in a White House ceremony this morning with President Clinton at his side.

The White House estimates savings at $108 billion over five years, according to administration officials who spoke on condition of anonymity. Slightly more than half the proposals require congressional approval. The plan would eventually put 252,000 federal employees out of work, their services no longer needed in the streamlined government envisioned by the White House.

That would reduce the federal work force by 12 percent, bringing it below the 2 million mark for the first time since 1966.

Layoffs, although not expected, are possible, Gore said. The White House plans to offer displaced workers buyouts, early retirements, transfers and training for other public and private sector jobs.

Some key recommendations would:

□ Cut wasteful and duplicative programs. Examples: merge the law enforcement functions of the Drug Enforcement Administration with the FBI; close dozens of Department of Agriculture field offices; eliminate the Food Safety and Inspection Service by consolidating all food safety responsibilities under the Food and Drug Administration.

□ Treat taxpayers like customers. Example: Allow people to pay taxes by credit card.

□ Get more technology involved in government operations. Example: Study how to extend electronic mail to every agency and to every employee.

□ Cut "pork barrel" projects. Example: Urge Congress to reduce the number of restrictions it puts on agencies. These often are designed to ensure that money "flows to favored programs and hometown projects," a draft of the report says.

□ Find ways to collect more money. Example: Change the law to allow agencies such as the IRS to hire collection agencies to go after delinquent taxes and fees.

□ Give federal bureaucrats more flexibility to buy cheaper equipment, streamlining the current system. Example: Allow agencies to make purchases under $100,000, instead of the current $25,000 threshold.

□ Give managers more power to hire and fire employees, decentralizing the current system. Example: Reduce by half the amount of time needed to fire federal managers.

Many of the changes would upset labor groups and step on the toes of legislators whose influence would be diminished by changing the budget, personnel and purchasing systems they now oversee. Gore said he is ready for the backlash.

"The way the government operates presently steps on the toes of the American people. We're trying to lift that dead weight off their toes," Gore said.

He said the "political center of gravity has shifted" in recent years "in favor of those of use who want to see this change come about."

Asked if he could guarantee that the plan would not force layoffs of federal employees,

Give Falcons a fair chance

Falcon football fans don't dismay. Don't throw in the towel on a third straight Mid-American Conference championship, at least not until the team's next two games can be evaluated. Sure, Virginia Tech soundly spanked the Falcons 33-16 Saturday in Blacksburg, Va., but the real indicator of what kind of team the Falcons will be should come during the next two games.

Bowling Green will host Cincinnati this Saturday and will travel to Annapolis, Md., Sept. 25, to face Navy.

These two non-conference opponents resemble more closely the caliber teams of the MAC than Virginia Tech, which competes in the stronger Big East conference.

Virginia Tech coach Frank Beamer said in the week leading up to the game that "the Falcons would have no trouble playing in the Big East," -- this is a misnomer. By saying this Beamer gives his team more credibility if they win, and he also has an excuse if the Falcons do win.

Virginia Tech, which will be very fortunate to win four conference games, was only 2-8-1 last year. Their performance against the defending MAC champions and the play of other MAC schools this weekend is evidence of the gap between the MAC and larger conferences such as the Big East and Big Ten.

The Cincinnati and Navy games will be a much more accurate yardstick by which to measure the Falcons, a team which can only get better with so many new faces and inexperienced players in key roles.

BG should make significant progress during the next two games as they prepare to challenge for a third straight MAC title against an even field, with as many as five other teams that all have legitimate title shots.

However, if in the next two games the Falcons fail to move the ball, or to stop their opponents on defense as they did this weekend, then it may be time to push the panic button.

"The talent is there and with a little game experience this will be a very good football team," coach Gary Blackney said.

Even if the Falcons are not able to "three-peat" this season it won't be the end of the world. Many students and fans seem to only mention the "three-peat" when discussing the team and they don't understand the difficulty of staying on top for so long.

One of the hardest parts of being a college football coach is the constant rebuilding which must occur.

Coaches strive to have a veteran nucleus, complemented by talented younger players, who will mesh neatly into the program, but the process is often anything but smooth.

The Falcon football team has some "meshing" to do to stay at the level they have been the past two years. The team has been one of the best in the country in the past and has a chance to set several league marks this year, but fans may have to be patient as the Brown and Orange find out what works for them.

NAFTA threatens local laws

The president and his family are back from their Martha's Vineyard vacation for Act II of his presidency.

In Act I we were given a few hard pills to swallow. Some of these bitter pills were the "Don't Ask, Don't Tell" policy, a compromise nobody liked. Flip-flopping on what to do in Bosnia, and playing hokey-pokey in Somalia. The president has said he was going to pull the troops out, then puts more in. Isn't that what Vietnam was all about? Then lastly before Act I ended we were given the largest tax increase in history.

George Bush is probably now relieved that he no longer holds the title for passing the largest in history. We can only hope that history repeats itself in 1996.

Now that Act II has started the plot is revolving around the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA). NAFTA should be killed and not allowed to pass. President Clinton is luring Sen. Robert Dole, Kansas, and the Republican party to ratify NAFTA. Clinton needs Republican party support because his own party isn't supporting NAFTA. The Republicans should not support it either because it will not help the American economy or its small businesses.

NAFTA is 2,000 pages of rules

Weekly columnist Rick Hackbarth

and regulations that will restrict and harm American businesses, rather than enhance businesses. NAFTA is more full of environmental and labor protectionism than it is free trade.

NAFTA will create a supranational EPA that can impose fines on businesses and individuals. It will also have the right to search the premises of private businesses. I can imagine Al Gore tickled pink about this. The Clinton administration is seeing that a "environmental trust fund" is set up with NAFTA, which amounts to $525 million. The U.S. (i.e. taxpayers) will fund 85 percent of the trust fund.

NAFTA will threaten current state and local laws that businesses currently abide by. Minnesota lawmakers came up with 30 state laws that NAFTA will affect or overturn. Canada formed a panel of non-lawmakers that found laws in more than 40 states dealing with the distribution of beer and wine to be in violation of international trade laws. Can college students imagine the distribution of beer and wine being tampered with?

Laws affecting businesses should be handled by state and local authorities. It's local lawmakers that knows what's best for local small businesses and its economy. Not some big bureaucratic governmental body.

The Economist comments "A GATT (General Agreement on Tariff and Trade) panel ruling last year confirmed that states' laws could be successfully challenged under trade agreements." So if Canada doesn't like one of our local or state laws they can then challenge it in court.

Ross Perot once said that NAFTA will create a "giant sucking sound" and he is probably right.

For NAFTA will not create jobs, especially jobs that will produce exports.

More than half of U.S. trade is what is called intercorporate transfers, that is parts and components shipped out and assembled products shipped back. We need to create more Made-in-America products not more Made-in-Mexico or Canada products. Right now we export to Mexico things like telecommunications equipment and electrical machinery only to import them back. Companies are also going to find it hard to resist Mexico's cheap labor, if they haven't gone down there yet.

The more research is done about NAFTA's 2,000 pages of rules and regulations, the more you find that it isn't good for the United States and its economy. Let's do away with rules and regulations that restrict businesses. Let's do away with more environmental laws. Let's be sure that we are the ones that create our own business laws and not some outside governmental body. Kill NAFTA and secure our future and our jobs.

Rick Hackbarth is a columnist for The News.

Students defend their rights as residents

The BG News: In response to Mrs. Miller's letter in the August 30 edition of The News, we would like to know why you chose to live near the University if you need to avoid noise and wish to avoid all things that happen around a college campus?

The University was founded in 1910. Since that was 83 years ago, obviously you knew that you were buying a house near the college campus. If you have a medical condition that is triggered by noise you should have taken this fact into consideration.

As for you being a native of Bowling Green, you should appreciate the amount of money that the University provides for your economy, and make us feel more welcome.

We shop at your stores, we eat at your restaurants, and we frequent your bars. All of which provide jobs and revenue for your town. If it were not for this University in the middle of a cornfield, you would not have many of the national chain stores that are in this town and 99 percent of America would assume Bowling Green is in Kentucky.

Finally we would like to address the issue of the "curious" students that seem so bothersome to you. Student housing is not at a premium, therefore students are always seeking new housing alternatives, so asking a simple question does not merit a rude reply. You should be flattered that people are admiring your home.

In college we are taught to plan ahead. Although it is a little late in coming, we suggest that when making a major monetary decision, one should weigh all the possible problems and plan ahead.

The BG News

Dear Mrs. Miller: We congratulate your father on his retirement from 25 years of cleaning up messes made by students; however, we would like to point out that no one forced him to keep the job.

We would also like to remind you that while SOME students persistently participate in juvenile destructive behaviors, there are an awful lot of us who carry ourselves in a mature and socially acceptable manner.

We are not, nor have we ever been, freaked-out druggies. We've also never tried to set our dorm rooms on fire.

You have implied that all college students are freaked-out druggies who light their dorm rooms on fire. You have also stated that you went to college for three years. Logically then we can assume that for at least three years you were a freaked-out druggie who tried to set your dorm room on fire, set off sprinklers, and flooded your building so your dad could come clean it up on a regular basis.

The point we are trying to make is that your letters seem broadly aimed at a large number of people whom you have no business accusing of anything.

We agree that your neighbors should be understanding of your condition and keep the noise down.

However, we disagree with the attitudes you exhibit in your letters. We feel that you have judged us as being unworthy of sharing your town without ever having met us simply because we attend college here.

The University is here for people like you and us to enrich our minds, not fry them. Just because a few idiots choose to do so does not give close-minded people like yourself the right to judge us sight unseen.

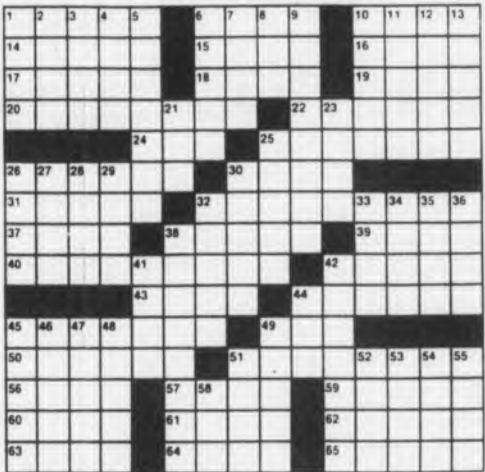

You cannot presume that we are self-destructive vandals simply because we are college students.

Open your mind and see us all for the individuals that we are.

Conference lacking meaning

GUEST COLUMN Jeff Billman

In Chicago this week, a major, earthshaking event took place.

No, Michael Jordan did not announce that he was leaving the NBA for the greener pastures of the PGA. Nothing of the sort. In fact, depending on how much emphasis your news source placed on this event, you may have missed it.

A conference was held which included most of this world's religions. This is earthshaking in that people who normally look with disdain upon one another's spiritual beliefs met under one roof. Jews met with Moslems. Christians met with Rastafarians. Sinead O'Conner met with the Pope. (O.K., maybe not.) Yet, for all the potential good that could come from the Parliament of the World's Religions, I predict that we shall find this conference nothing but a useless "Spiritual Expo '93".

I am not opposed to a meaningful dialogue between religions. The key word here, though, is meaningful. This Parliament falls short of meaningful dialogue because it is non-binding. Although it would be a mistake to have the Parliament's decisions enacted without vote in all attending religions' executive councils, the conference becomes a meaningless charade when one realizes that nothing from this Parliament will be implemented anywhere.

Cymbals are being rung and chants being made in the Buddhist tradition. The pipes of Native Americans are smoked. These are nice gestures, but some may come close to sacrilege in the setting in which they are performed.

I, as a Christian, would be offended if the Sacrament of the Holy Communion was served expo-display-booth style to people for whom Communion would not have the lasting spiritual bond with a Judeo-Christian God that was intended. This would not be merely a waste of good wine, it would be a satire of Christian belief. I'm sure there are ceremonies that could be performed at the Parliament that would have similar destructive effects upon other religions as well.

Another item that will decrease the effectiveness of the Parliament is that most in attendance cannot be 100% honest in what they believe. According to the report by the Detroit Free Press, one Christian speaker "took great pains to avoid using the name of Jesus Christ."

I realize this was done to avoid conflict, and all in attendance probably used the same care with concepts in their own respective religions that aren't universally accepted. Still, there may be some teachings of Jesus that could be of use to the Parliament. Others will no doubt have useful items to share from the teachings of their religions. They, too, may need to suppress sharing these.

Even if the Parliament were effective in beginning to solve the world's ills, (which, as I explained, it will not be) it cannot be totally successful so long as it ignores important parts of the religions represented.

The Parliament of the World's Religions will be unsuccessful in spite of its lofty goals of world unity and auspicious start. No world conference will be successful so long as its representatives check their cultural beliefs and interests at the door for the sake of some feel-good, vague and culturally empty version of "world unity."

When people come together with clear-cut problems to be solved, and when they work at these problems with respect to the nations, cultures, or religions that sent them, then it follows that they shall return from these conferences with clear-cut, agreeable solutions. Then, and only then, will there be progress on a world scale.

Movies offer opportunity to earn credit

by Ginger Phillips
human diversity reporter

During the next couple of weeks students will get a chance to not only see some entertaining movies for free, but also earn college credit while doing so.

The second annual International Film Director's Week will bring four different international directors to campus for seminars during the day and discussions after the evening showings of their movies Sept. 7 to Sept. 17.

According to Henry Garrity, chairman of the romance languages department and organizer of the event, students may sign up to receive one credit hour if they attend the nightly scheduled movies and keep a journal of what the movies are about.

For an additional credit hour students may also attend the scheduled seminars during the day, Garrity said.

"We can make exceptions," he said. "Some students do have conflicts and we can accommodate them."

Garrity said the event fits well into the curriculum and is a good opportunity for students who are interested in movies.

"Bringing in film directors adds a dimension to the film studies program that it does not [normally] have," Garrity said. "[It is also a good opportunity] for the general student population to see films they might not otherwise see and actually have the directors in front of them to answer questions. That's very unusual."

Gino Balducci, director of the film studies department, said students in the film studies program will benefit greatly from the event, but he recommends it to others as well.

"It will reflect the cultures of different countries so everyone will have some interest," he said. "This is a unique opportunity."

All movies will be shown in Gish Film Theater beginning with French director Bertrand Tavernier's films "Clean Slate" on Sept. 7 and "Round Midnight" on Sept. 8.

According to Garrity, both films were nominated for Oscars in the category of best foreign film at the American Academy Awards.

Tavernier's film "Life and Nothing But" will be shown on Sept. 9.

American director Joseph Zito's films "Missing in Action," starring Chuck Norris, will be shown on Sept. 13 and "Red Scorpion," starring Dolph Lundgren, on Sept. 14. Zito specializes in the action and horror genre, Garrity said.

A film by Great Britain director Lindsay Anderson will be shown on Sept. 15. "Glory! Glory!" Anderson's latest film, was a production for HBO television about televangelism, Garrity said.

The final film to be shown will be "Wise Cracks" by Canadian director Gail Singer on Sept. 16.

All films are free and open to everyone and will begin at 7:30 p.m., with the exception of "Life and Nothing But" which will begin at 6 p.m.

4-H Club returns to campus

by Leah Barnum
environment reporter

After nine years, the effort to reinstate the University Collegiate 4-H Club has paid off.

The organization officially began meeting this semester with the purpose of promoting leadership and community service at the University. The club is designed for those who want to enhance their lives through leadership, personal development, volunteering and recreation, according to Kurt Landes, president of the organization.

"We have four purposes," Landes said. "We want to provide service to the community and to try to enhance our personal development and leadership. We also want to promote social interaction, fun and recreation."

An overall goal is to expand the meaning of 4-H, Landes said.

Unlike Junior 4-H, which is for people 18 years old and under, Collegiate 4-H members do not do projects or participate in a county fair, but the same objectives apply, according to Jayne Roth, Wood County 4-H coordinator and co-adviser of the club.

Although there was a similar collegiate 4-H club on campus in the 1970s, membership declined and eventually the club dissolved around 1986, according to Doug Michaelis, the club's co-adviser and a former member of the original club.

"I hated to see it fold, so I tried to keep finding new members through activities and recreation leadership groups," he said.

Through one of those activities, Michaelis met Landes who was enthusiastic about starting a new club, Michaelis said.

Landes has the kind of energy it takes to keep the club going this time, Michaelis said.

The club, started by Landes and about 20 friends, is now one of three clubs in Ohio that belong to the national collegiate 4-H organization. The other clubs are at The Ohio State University and Ohio University.

This year the club plans to send members to the regional collegiate 4-H conference in South Dakota, as well as the National Collegiate 4-H Conference in Columbus, to exchange ideas with other clubs across the country, he said.

Other plans include community service projects and social activities, Landes said.

"We're going to have a leadership training program with Jr. Leadership [a branch of junior 4-H] for the community youth," Landes said. "[And also] we hope to work with other organizations on campus that do community service."

Roth said she hopes the current membership of 20 students will double or triple.

"It is a group of people with the same kinds of [interests], and they have a bond that brings them together — especially on the collegiate level," Roth said.

Christian rock group 'Pray for Rain' to perform Friday

by Larissa Hritsko
student government reporter

The Pray for Rain advertisements seen in University classrooms had nothing to do with summer dryness, but a Christian rock group scheduled to perform at the University Friday.

Pray for Rain, the 1992 Dove Winner for rock album of the year, is in good company with other winners such as Amy Grant and Steven Curtis Chapman.

The three-man band from Minnesota which includes Joel Hanson, Patrick Andrew and Mark Nash has been travelling extensively throughout the country, according to George Loper, the concert promoter.

"This is one of the hottest bands in contemporary Christian music and they are making their first big splash in Ohio at the University," Loper said.

According to Loper, the band's style is reminiscent of the early Beatles and The Police.

"Pray for Rain is a top-notch group with a unique sound and strong vocal harmony," said Everett Gagnon, off-campus director of Chi Alpha. "The concert is going to be a lot of fun, but not a 'churchy' experience."

The group will be performing songs from their past acclaimed album and future December album, Loper said.

"The purpose of the concert is to have fun listening to loud rock music, by a talented group," he said. "The opportunity to hear these guys without going to a 'big city' is rare along with a $5 ticket."

If the event, sponsored by Chi Alpha and the Fellowship of Christian Services, is a success similar events could follow, Gagnon said.

"If the event is a highly-rated positive event, Christian groups will be working together to do it again," he said. "We hope to have more events more often, if possible, instead of a year span."

The concert is at 8 p.m. Sept. 10 at the Lenhart Grand Ballroom in the University Union. Tickets are available at Finders Records and the Village Preacher for $5.

Nebraska students in Bosnia released

College Press Services

LINCOLN, Neb. — Two University of Nebraska-Lincoln students working as relief volunteers in Croatia were released this summer after being held in a Bosnian detention center for about 18 days.

Abbas Ali, a senior engineering major, and Suleman Ahmer, a graduate student, left the United States in November 1992 to work in the Bosnian relief efforts, said Zahid Nazir, Ali's roommate.

"They are collecting things that are needed in Bosnia," he said. "Sometimes they need medicine, sometimes they need food."

The two students, who are natives of Pakistan, were distributing supplies from a relief office in divided Croatia when they were captured. Constant battles in the area made the situation extremely dangerous, Nazir said.

"Anything could have happened with the war going on there," he said. "Their parents were really worried. Bad things have been going through my mind since they were missing. They're back safely now, but I haven't been able to talk to them."

Arshad Syed, information systems manager for the College of Business Administration, went to Croatia in July to help negotiate the students' release, said his wife, Lucretia Syed.

Study says soot harmful

by Pam Smith
general assignment reporter

The Environmental Protection Agency has released a new study linking smokestack soot to deaths among people with respiratory problems.

But University and environmental officials say despite those ominous "park at your own risk" signs, soot from the University heating plant is no threat to Bowling Green.

The study says soot particles smaller than 10 microns in diameter - the size released by many coal-burning facilities like the heating plant - can aggravate asthma and sometimes lead to premature death.

However, Chuck Coddling, assistant director of the heating plant, said as far as he knows, the plant poses no danger because a filtering device at the plant removes 99 percent of the soot from its emissions. An American Lung Association representative said such devices filter about 95 percent of the soot.

The signs near the Union and Commons warning drivers about falling ash are outdated, Coddling said. He said the signs were put up 10 years ago, before the latest filtering device was installed.

The new study, done by the EPA and the Harvard School of Public Health, reports that soot from ash fallout can be harmful to people with sensitive respiratory systems.

Particles smaller than 10 microns (PM10s) are a threat to allergy sufferers and an even greater threat to asthma sufferers, according to John Summerhays, an environmental scientist for the EPA who specializes in PM10s.

"The population most at risk is asthmatics, old or young," Summerhays said. "There is clear-cut evidence that (PM10's) exacerbate health, including hospitalization and premature death."

Ronald White, director of environmental health for the American Lung Association, said some small pollutants do get by today's regulation practices.

"For someone that isn't already sensitive, (PM10s are) not likely to cause allergy (problems)," White said. "That's not to say that healthy people can't be affected."

There are not many people with asthma in Bowling Green, University Health Services Director Joshua Kaplan said.

People who experience respiratory irritation after moving to Bowling Green in the fall are probably reacting to the city's unusually high pollen levels, he said. He said last week, he treated more allergy and hay fever cases than any other ailment.

"Bowling Green has a very high pollen count," Kaplan said. "We're in the middle of farm country."

Environmental officials realized only after the study that small amounts of PM10s - including soot particles - may be a health risk, Summerhays said. Several previous studies by the EPA indicated low concentrations had no significant health effects.

"The question is 'At what concentration do we start to get adverse health affects?'" Summerhays said.

The study's findings might mean changes in state regulations, he said.

White said the lung association plans to sue the EPA if it does not include smaller particles in regulation requirements.

Coddling said the University's heating plant uses a device containing hundreds of wires that capture soot particles with static electricity.

The device works much the same way as rubbing a balloon against hair and then picking up bits of paper with the static electricity in the balloon.

White said a new invention, the "bag house filter," is only slightly more efficient than the electrostatic method.

In the past, soot and sulphurous gases were a bigger problem, Coddling said. In the mid-1960s, the plant's three short stacks were replaced by a single 250-foot stack to keep emissions from drifting over the campus.

"Before the tall stack, we had short stacks," Coddling said. "The sulfur smell was all over campus."

He said emissions from the tall stack are diluted in the upper atmosphere.

The plant process 21,000 tons of coal every year, but soot generated by the plant is only emitted once a day.

"You'll only see something come out of the stack for a few minutes a day, when the employees at the plant dump the (filter) grates," Coddling said.

According to University and environmental officials, the smoke stack across from the University's Administration building poses no health hazard to residents of Bowling Green.

estimated $30 billion in damage in Florida, left 41 dead and destroyed 47,000 homes.

Today, 50,000 houses have been repaired, but thousands more are still being rebuilt. Many businesses are closed forever and an estimated 100,000 people have moved from the area.

"It looks a lot better than the last time I was here," Clinton said after walking down a street where homes were still being rebuilt with new roofs and windows. Leafless palm trees lined the boulevard.

After touring hurricane-damaged neighborhoods in Florida City and Homestead, Clinton met with local residents at a senior citizens center and listened to their stories.

"All of us learned humility overnight," said restaurateur Frank Ambrose, who fed hundreds with donated food daily after the storm. He said the storm united blacks, whites and Hispanics and gave his community new pride.

"I'm happy to be from Homestead today," Ambrose said.

Javier Solis said he lost his job when his employer went under after the hurricane but received training in carpentry was able to get a job building homes.

"We turn around," he said. "We keep going forward."

Clinton showed particular concern when told that the stresses of the hurricane had caused an increase in suicides, divorce and domestic violence.

He also said the decision to rebuild Homestead Air Force Base on a scaled-back level was "exactly the right one" to help the community recover. The base once employed 8,000 people.

State temporary employment tax may be dropped Bill looks to protect policyholders

The Associated Press

COLUMBUS - A proposed Senate bill could eliminate a sales tax enacted in December to help balance Ohio's budget. The state Office of Budget and Management estimated that the tax on employment services would produce about $100 million during the budget period. But companies that provide temporary employment said the tax is hurting business. The average gross payroll of temporary help companies dropped by 18 percent immediately after the tax took effect, the Ohio Temporary Service Association said.

Companies are not hiring temporary help because the tax adds between 5 percent and 7 percent to their operating costs, Jay Mattern, legislative consultant for the group, told The Columbus Dispatch for a story published Monday. More than half of the tax revenue is from temporary help, Mattern said. Sen. Robert Cupp, R-Lima, proposed a bill to repeal the tax. The legislation is to go before the Senate Ways and Means Committee Sept. 28.

Gore

Gore said, "There is no iron clad guarantee but there is an iron clad commitment to do everything possible to manage this transition extremely well so that

"We're going to listen to what people have to say," said the committee's chairman, Sen. Richard H. Finan, R-Cincinnati. "But if they want to repeal anything we enacted in House Bill 904 (the budget-balancing bill) they're going to have to come up with something to replace the lost revenue."

Budget Director R. Gregory Browning said the state enacted the tax because temporary employment is a growing industry. He said it makes up 25 percent of the U.S. work force and will increase to 50 percent because companies do not want to pay employee benefits.

Mattern said 59,500 Ohioans were employed as temporary help workers in 1992. He said the tax has cost 2,300 jobs, according to projections in a report issued in June by the Office of Federal Tax Services.

The report said the job loss would cost the state $2.1 million in individual income tax receipts.

Browning said he sees no signs that the industry is in decline but is willing to review the issues.

"If there's information out there that we need to revisit this issue ... I'm all ears," he said.

those who are effected have other jobs and any exceptions to that rule will be few and far between."

The report is the first step in a slow process to "reinvent" the government, Gore said.

The Associated Press

CLEVELAND - Blue Cross of Ohio has begun a mailing campaign to support a bill that would restrict investments by insurance companies owned by policyholders, a newspaper reported Monday.

The Cleveland-based Blue Cross has mailed thousands of letters to voters asking them to urge elected officials to support the bill.

The bill would affect Blue Cross of Ohio, Community Mutual Insurance Co. of Cincinnati and Columbus-based Central Benefits Mutual Insurance Co., said The Plain Dealer.

The three companies cover about 3.6 million Ohioans.

State Rep. Paul Jones, D-Ravenna, who sponsored the bill, said Monday it will protect the rights of policyholders.

He said he was concerned that some Blue Cross plans were veering away from their traditional role of providing health insurance to low-income people.

He said a company that spends much of its assets buying capital stocks of for-profit subsidiaries is risking policyholders' interests if the investment fails.

Aside from cutting operating costs or raising premiums, an insurance company wanting to strengthen itself generally has two options -- invest in profitable subsidiaries, or make the insurance company stockholder-owned by giving stock to policyholders, then selling more stock to investors.

The newspaper says the bill would practically forbid the three Ohio companies to do either. It also would forbid any of the three to buy a for-profit subsidiary.

Blue Cross of Ohio has said that if a plan writes insurance carefully, prices fairly, and manages effectively, it does not need big for-profit subsidiaries.

Michael Canter, a Columbus lawyer who represents Community, said the bill could deprive Ohio policyholders of a potential $1.9 billion investment.

Community bought Florida-based Home Life Financial Assurance Corp. on June 30. The for-profit company was purchased for up to $120 million.

The bill has been assigned to the House Health and Retirement Committee, which is chaired by Jones. It meets Sept. 29.

Blue Cross mailed 15,000 pieces in the Cleveland area, 13,000 in the Toledo area and 1,500 in Butler and Franklin counties to randomly selected voters with phones, said Neil S. Clark, a Blue Cross lobbyist.

Recipients were asked to send pre-addressed cards that urged support for the bill to Gov. George Voinovich and state senators. Telemarketers then call recipients and offer to connect them with legislators' offices.

On Friday, Voinovich's office received 1,158 reply cards, the newspaper said.

Egypt

Muslim fundamentalist groups oppose any deal with Israel.

After Arafat's visit to Damascus, Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk al-Sharaa went to Lebanon, apparently to try to soften Lebanese outrage over the PLO's separate deal with Israel. Israel was exchanging mortar fire with Lebanese militias less than a week ago.

Sources at the headquarters of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine and the Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine -- the two largest groups in the PLO after Arafat's Fatah faction -- said they rejected Arafat's request for meetings in Damascus.

In Egypt, Arafat was likely to have an easier time.

Egypt's foreign policy is based on its peace with Israel, which President Anwar Sadat signed in 1979, and friendship with the United States. Arafat and most other Arabs broke relations with Cairo because of that peace agreement.

The draft Arafat is ready to sign with Israel grants Palestinian autonomy in the Gaza Strip and Jericho. The fate of the rest of the Israeli-occupied lands, including Arab east Jerusalem, is left undetermined for as long as five years.

Arafat was greeted at Cairo International Airport by Foreign Minister Amr Moussa and was to meet on Tuesday with President Hosni Mubarak.

Stunt pilot dazzles crowd

Wagstaff takes to skies for Cleveland Air Show

The Associated Press

CLEVELAND -- Hurling toward Earth from 2,000 feet in the air may be scary for most people, but for one person who participated in the 1993 Cleveland National Air Show, the experience was not worrisome.

"I don't get afraid, because I don't like to get afraid," said Patty Wagstaff, who flew in her Extra 300 aircraft. "Besides, I have an acute sense of my aircraft. I know its heartbeat, I am so in tune with it. And, I don't do anything near the ground that I haven't done a thousand way up in the air."

Ms. Wagstaff, the U.S. National Aerobatics competition champion, said she always wanted to do aerial stunts ever since she laid eyes on other stunts pilots in 1983.

After taking flying lessons, the aerobatic pilot who was once a waitress, an office worker and an art student, was on her way.

"None of those things fit me," Ms. Wagstaff said. "There is something in my nature that loves speed, and tumbling through the air. ... It's in the family. My father flies and my sister is an airline pilot."

As part of her routine, Ms. Wagstaff performed "vertical snap rolls" and "tailslides" and turned off the engine of her

1,350-pound aircraft while plunging the aircraft toward the ground. Seconds before an apparent crash, she turns the engine back on and pulls the aircraft out of the nose dive.

"She's quite a gal," said Col. Raymond Hendershot, a World War II Marine veteran and member of the Confederate Air Force, a group that collects vintage planes.

Despite all of her experience as an aerobatic pilot, Ms. Wagstaff said she has never flown in a rocket.

"I'd love that, I'd just love that. In fact, I'd go in an alien vehicle. I would do that in a minute."

Women seek Illinois' top offices Courts consider lesbian custody

The Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.— It could be the Anita Hill thing. It could be a fluke. Or it could be that women have paid their dues.

For the first time in the United States, according to two national groups, women are pursuing all of a state's five top elected posts.

In the 1994 election, women want to take over the Illinois offices of governor, treasurer, comptroller, attorney general and secretary of state. And some said privately they would consider a run for lieutenant governor.

"This is an important state to watch. Anytime you have a record number of women running ... you can change the face of government," said Pat Reilly, a spokeswoman for the National Women's Political Caucus in Washington, D.C.

"Illinois was really the first state out of the gate to mark the 'Year of the Woman' in politics," she said.

Susan Carroll, senior researcher for Rutgers University's Center for the American Woman and Politics in New Jersey, cites a combination of factors, including Anita Hill's testimony at the Senate confirmation hearings for Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas.

"A collective click took place, and people realized that when women are not present the sensitivity of certain kinds of issues is just not likely to be there," she said.

Kansas state Rep. Jo Ann Pottorff, former chairwoman of the Women's Network for the National Conference of State Legislators, said voters consider women accessible, and female candidates are capitalizing on that.

"The public sees women as almost closer to the people," she said. "Women have run a household; they've raised families. Although a man's part of that, women are the more nurturing individuals."

In Illinois, some women formally announced for the 1994 race, and others say they will announce this fall.

Democratic Comptroller Dawn Clark Netsch is running for governor. Democratic state Sen. Earlean Collins and Loleta Dirlickson, Republican director of the Department of Employment Security, want the comptroller's chair.

Democratic state Sen. Penny Severns and Republican state Sen. Judy Baar Topinka are up for the treasurer's spot, along with Democrats Sheila Smith, a businesswoman, and Nancy Drew Sheehan, a commissioner on the Cook County Metropolitan Water Reclamation District.

Kane County Coroner Mary Lou Kearns, a Democrat, announced a bid for secretary of state, and Chicago lawyer Anne Burke said she will run for attorney general.

"I don't know of any other state where that number of candidate spots are being contested by women," Carroll said.

Donald M. Totten, campaign manager for attorney-general hopeful Jim Ryan, said that depending on the office sought, female candidates can capitalize on some policy issues. He pointed to Carol Moseley-Braun's successful campaign against U.S. Sen. Alan Dixon.

Angered by the Hill-Thomas controversy, Moseley-Braun flaunted her feminist credentials and promised to send a message to the nation's most exclusive club.

The candidates, political analysts and voters differ on what led to the wellspring of women running in Illinois.

Topinka said that women have been in the political pipeline for years and that the increased number this year "is normal evolution." Netsch said the Hill-Thomas controversy broke the barrier.

Whatever their reasons for running, the Illinois women candidates all say they plan to change the way government works.

The Associated Press

RICHMOND, Va. — Gay rights advocates are closely watching a potential landmark case in Virginia, where a judge this week will consider whether a woman may retain custody of her lesbian daughter's 2-year-old son.

It is a highly unusual custody battle because it pits a nonparent against a mother whose only alleged parental shortcoming has been her sexual relationship. A trial is scheduled for Tuesday in Henrico County Circuit Court.

Sharon Bottoms, 23, lives with her partner, 27-year-old April Wade. Kay Bottoms, 42, contends that fact makes her daughter unfit to be a mother.

"The question is whether a parent should be disqualified because of sexual orientation or lifestyle," said Donald Butler, Sharon Bottoms' lawyer. "We don't think the law should allow people to lose a child on that basis."

A different answer to the question Butler posed comes from Anne Kincaid, spokeswoman for the Family Foundation, a conservative Virginia group that says it has 30,000 members.

"Is it discrimination based on sexual orientation or is it child protection based on the mother's sexual behavior?" she said. "It looks like there would be a compelling state interest to protect the child."

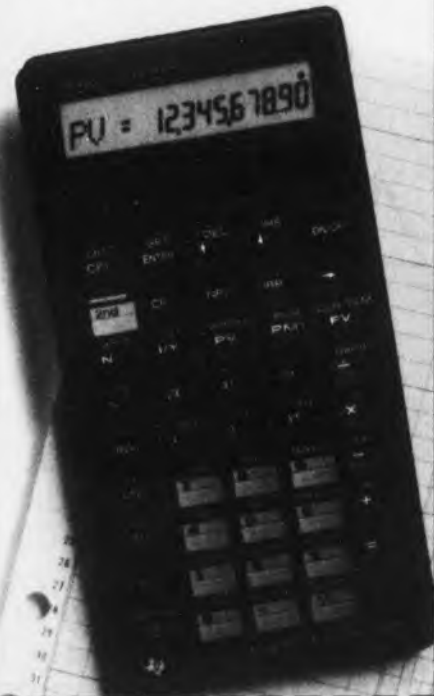

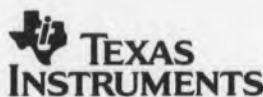

"It's important to note the difference between sexual orientation and sexual behavior," Kincaid added. "Historically, society views homosexuality as immoral behavior, and that's always been a criteria for removing a child from the home."

Mexicans intend to avoid intervention

The Associated Press

MEXICO CITY -- The new U.S. ambassador has been front-page news for weeks -- not particularly good, either -- and he isn't even here yet.

After James R. Jones told the U.S. Senate he would be willing to pressure Mexico on such domestic issues as election fraud and government corruption, politicians and the press fretted that he would be an interventionist.

They have calmed down since, but intend to keep an eye on him.

"We think the statements were unfortunate," Mario del Valle Fernandez, a legislator from the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party, told The Associated Press last week.

"For us, these are domestic issues, issues of sovereignty. Mr. Jones needs to respect us and listen to our point of view. And he needs to be careful what he says."

Mexico's relations with American ambassadors often have been difficult. Jones says he will be different, but he may have to prove it.

John Gavin, who once held the job, likened it to walking through a minefield.

In a telephone interview, Jones said the news reports did not bother him and that he would not interfere in Mexico's internal affairs.

He said his comment to Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., during his confirmation hearing in July was blown out of proportion by the Mexican press.

"Once the reporters get to know me and my way of operation, there won't be any problem," he said. Jones is scheduled to arrive in Mexico Tuesday to assume his new job overseeing Washington's largest diplomatic mission.

Life has never been easy for U.S. ambassadors in a country that has an Intervention Museum dedicated to teaching children about how the Americans have tampered with Mexico over nearly two centuries.

The relationship of the two countries has been a complicated, contentious one conducted over a 2,000-mile border. Mexico has accused numerous U.S. ambassadors of meddling.

Historians blame Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson (1909-13) for the overthrow and execution of President Francisco Madero and Vice President Jose Maria Pino Suarez after Madero replaced dictator Porfirio Diaz, a U.S. ally.

Mexico's rejection of John Slidell as ambassador was a pretext for the war with Mexico in 1846. The treaty ending the war in 1848, which ceded much of what is now the U.S. Southwest for $15 million, is viewed by Mexicans as a national humiliation.

"I understand that there are historical reasons for the positions they take," Jones said of the Mexican press. "In the past, the United States has had a paternalistic attitude toward Latin America."

"I hope to show that I am a member of a new generation of political leadership that wants to develop a new relationship with Mexico."

Jones, 54, was chairman of the American Stock Exchange for four years, a congressman from Oklahoma in 1973-86, and President Lyndon B. Johnson's chief of staff.

"During my time in public service, I've found that the good stories about me make me out to be better than I am and the bad stories about me make me out to be worse than I am," he said.

The Mexican press also accused current Ambassador John Negroponte of being interventionist before he arrived in 1989.

Negroponte was accused of involvement in the Iran-Contra affair while ambassador in Honduras from 1982-85. He denied the charges.

Bosnian war draws father, son closer

The Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina -- It's a story as old as mankind, a story of an aimless son and a worried father, a tale of hardship and growth and love.

Nedim and Maid Rifatbegovic were like many fathers and sons before war broke out in Bosnia 17 months ago. They couldn't quite find the time to get to know each other.

Now they are like few others. Separated by hundreds of miles, they are bound by shared hardship. Maid, 23, strong and healthy, became the protector to his 56-year-old father, a journalist crippled by polio, before his father sought safe refuge elsewhere.

"Before the war we lived our own lives, but when the war started I saw that he was lost and helpless," Maid said, sitting in a rocking chair in the family apartment surrounded by his father's books. "I realized how much I loved him. I would give 100 lives for him."

Hundreds of miles away, the eyes of Nedim, a refugee sitting at a cafe table in Frankfurt, Germany, misted over and he turned his head away frequently as he talked about the son who kept him alive for eight awful months.

Maid, with his closely cropped military-type haircut, is a young and healthy version of his father. But Nedim said his son was lazy as a teen-ager, the type of student who would sleep until 1 p.m. When the rest of the family fled last year, the father said he was worried how the two were going to survive.

The polio has left him with almost no use of one arm and limited use of one leg.

"For me, opening a can or washing myself with a few liters of water in a pot is impossible. But Maid did the laundry, cooked, took care of me and spent night after night fighting in the trench," the father said.

Nedim has documented his eight months of horror in a book dedicated to his son. The one time he walked across Sarajevo to collect water himself was a terrifying experience.

"Snipers were shooting all along the way," Nedim said. "I felt so alone with this damned canister, the can and one arm."

He would pick up the canister, carry it a few steps along the street, go back for the can, then repeat the whole process.

Thus they survived together, the soldier son and the writer father.

"It is amazing how capable he is in civilization," Maid said of his father. "But in this wildness where there are no rules, he is helpless. He is perfect for a world where words count, but this is not a time for words."

"Weapons are talking now, and I had to stand in front of him," the son said. Finally, with winter coming, the crippled father was smuggled out of Sarajevo to join the rest of the family in Germany.

The younger man did find himself a wife, 23-year-old Dijana, whom his father has never met. But he is convinced that "she must be a good girl if my son decided to marry her."

What remains for the relationship is reunion when the war is over.

"I'd like to see him again," Maid said of his father. "I'd like to see him sitting next to a fireplace, reading and writing. I'm stronger, I'm a soldier. He is a poet. He was not made for war."

Pope stresses focus on values

The Associated Press

KAUNAS, Lithuania -- Pope John Paul II urged Lithuanian young people on Monday to safeguard their newly gained freedoms, voicing worry they will slip from Communism into a society without Catholic values.

In the central town of Kaunas, where he addressed his largest crowds since the start of his Baltic tour, the pope lashed out at "false prophets" preaching a message of consumerism and moral permissiveness.

"The long years when you were deprived of fundamental liberties are over," the pope told the youths gathered in the rain at a sports stadium in Lithuania's second-largest city.

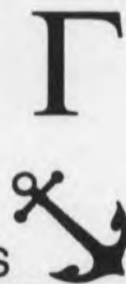

"Where authoritarianism once reigned, now there is room for responsible freedom."

He warned of such risks as drug use, "the marketing of sex and pornography" and "the search for artificial paradises."

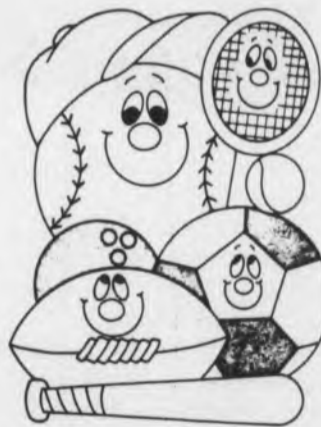

"Young people of Lithuania: Open the doors to Christ!" he urged.

start, was finally able to get the ball in the end zone.

The drive started on the Falcon 25 with Henry connecting with junior flanker Ramier Martin on a 15-yard pass over the middle. Martin caught seven passes for 132 yards.

Another Henry-to-Martin connection, for 24 yards, and a Virginia Tech penalty, put BG on the Hokies 32 yard-line. Four plays later Henry threw a four-yard scoring toss to Ronnie Redd with one second left on the clock. BG's try for a two-point conversion failed.

Henry completed 17 of 39 passes for 237 yards and one touchdown.

"I've got a lot of improving to do, but now that I've got my feet wet I expect to play a lot better next week," Henry said.

"They are a very big and fast defensive team, they did a lot of things that we expected them to do, but we were just off a little bit here and there."

Blackney said one of the major things that disappointed him was the play of the offensive line.

"I was hoping our offensive line would have given Ryan a little more protection and a little more security so that he could have gained confidence as the game went on," Blackney said. "I think the last drive, even though it had very little to do with the outcome of the game, should help the offense gain confidence heading into next week."

The Bowling Green loss broke a nine-game winning streak dating back to last season, while the Hokies win was their first in eight tries.

school, but I never did it in a game except for little league," Henry said. "It's just another wrinkle that we threw into our offense."

Another first-time defensive starter, George Johnson, would prove to be the focal point of Tech's next offensive series.

Johnson, a converted running back used to scoring touchdowns, had the tables turned on him as he got beat deep in giving up his first score when Antonio Freeman hauled in a 46-yard DeShazo bomb.

Tech used a series of running plays to set up the long pass as Johnson bit on one of DeShazo's play-action fakes.

However, Johnson would later get his revenge on DeShazo as he also came up with his first collegiate interception towards the end of the first half.

"It was pretty exciting at the time because it stopped their drive," said Johnson. "I played both ways in high school so I had a few interceptions then, but of course college football is a totally different level. It was sweet because it was my first one, but I wish we would have won."

At the time Johnson's pickoff was a key play in the game as it ended a late Tech drive. After the turnover Henry was able to engineer a six-play, 55-yard drive that culminated in a 42-yard field goal by Brian Lever, cutting the Tech lead to 14-10.

It was, of course, Lever's first kick of the year.

Zips pull upset of MAC favorite Central, 23-13

The Associated Press

MOUNT PLEASANT, Mich. - Petu Ieli ran for two touchdowns and quarterback Marcel Weems scored one TD and rushed for 124 yards Thursday night as Akron opened its season with a 23-13 victory over Central Michigan.

Ieli opened the scoring with a one-yard run with 1:52 remaining in the first quarter. Central Michigan (0-1 overall and in the Mid-American Conference) tied the Zips 7-7 when Joe Youngblood connected on a 50-yard pass to Eric Johnson with 8:04 remaining in the first half.

Jozsef Jakab made a 36-yard field goal to open a 10-7 Akron lead at the 9:35 mark in the third quarter. The Zips led by 10 with 2:46 left in the third when Weems scored from one yard out.

Akron closed out its scoring after a nine-play, 80-yard drive that ended with a one-yard scoring leap by Ieli with 10:11 to go.

Johnson scored again for the Chippewas with 1:06 left in the game.

Akron outrushed Central 244 yards to 104 yards, but the Chippewas had the passing yardage advantage, 366-123.

Weems made nine of 22 attempts with no interceptions, and ran 23 times for 124 yards.

Youngblood made 21 of 34 attempts, connecting with Johnson three times for 104 yards. Youngblood had two interceptions.

The Zips held a time advantage as well, 34 minutes, 54 seconds to 25:06.

Chang versus Sampras Opening-day victory "typical" Browns win

The Associated Press

NEW YORK - Flash back 14 years: Little Pete Sampras and Michael Chang are facing each other across a net for the first time. They're about 7 years old, toting big rackets they need both hands to swing.

Chang is taller, believe it or not, and they are playing in a tournament on a school court in Poway, Calif., near San Diego.

Jump ahead to Monday: It is the U.S. Open and the tall, sturdy Sampras is beating Thomas Enqvist 6-4, 6-4, 7-6 (7-4) to set up a quarterfinal match against the diminutive but relentless Chang, who beats Wayne Ferreira 6-4, 6-3, 6-4.

"It is pretty amazing where we have come from and now where we are," Sampras says. "He is the youngest French Open winner. I am the youngest U.S. Open winner. There are pretty interesting memories to go back to."

Also reaching the quarters was Alexander Volkov, a 6-2, 7-6 (7-2), 6-1 winner over Chuck Adams.

Among the women, No. 2 Arantxa Sanchez Vicario beat No. 14 Nathalie Tauziat 6-4, 6-3, and Natalia Zvereva beat the "lucky loser" from qualifying, Maria Jose Gaidano, to advance to the quarters.

Neither Chang nor Sampras can remember who won their first match, though Sampras thinks he might have taken it and Chang recalls it went three sets.

They played each other all the way through the juniors, and then eight matches as professionals, Chang winning six of those.

Sampras, the 1990 Open champion who is coming off a Wimbledon victory, is trying to regain the No. 1 ranking he held so briefly this year.

The Associated Press

BEREA, Ohio - Too many ragged edges - unsustained blocks, missed tackles, errant passes - prevented Bill Belichick from declaring his first season-opening win in three tries an unqualified success.

The Cleveland Browns spotted Cincinnati a 14-0 first-quarter lead Sunday, then ran off 27 straight points to beat the Bengals 27-14.

"Once we got settled in after the first quarter and made some adjustments, we made enough plays to win," Belichick said Monday. "We were close on some other plays, where we just need to get one or two things straightened out ... to have had a really good day."

There was, for instance, the time Bernie Kosar spotted wide receiver Michael Dyson breaking wide open down the left sideline but underthrew him. And the time Cincinnati tight end Tony McGee caught a 33-yard pass from David Klingler on fourth-and-2, momentarily extending a fourth-quarter drive that nearly got the Bengals back in the game.

"I think that's kind of typical of the first game of the year," Belichick said. "I'm sure the other teams that won, probably all of them didn't play perfectly, either. What we've got to do is build on the win. It was a good win, to come back from a negative situation. Everybody kept their poise."

The Browns' depth proved critical, Belichick said, on a warm afternoon early in the season before most players were used to playing a full four quarters. Cleveland rotated players on both its offensive and defensive lines, while the Bengals -- weakened by injuries to several linebackers and their offensive line -- grew increasingly tired.

Cincinnati's David Klingler can't elude the grasp of Cleveland's Rob Burnett during the Browns 27-14 opening day victory. The Browns defensive line sacked the Bengal quarterback a total of six times on the day.

Cincinnati totaled just 85 yards of offense in the second half.

"Looking back on it, I think we should have used even more players than we did," Belichick said. "We used a lot of people, but early in the season, with the intensity of the game and the heat of playing in the daytime instead of at night, there was a lot of fatigue on both sides of the field maybe not as much on ours as on theirs."

The Bengals ran into a problem early in the game when starting left offensive tackle Kevin Sargent broke his arm.

Pete Sampras, shown here in this year's U.S. Open, has sustained a friendly, but highly competitive rivalry with fellow American Michael Chang.

Montana, Taylor lead old-timers

The Associated Press

They're supposed to be dinosaurs, high-salaried but fading stars who will be the first guys on the street when the NFL salary cap takes effect next year.

Well, led by 37-year-old Joe Montana ($3.5 million), some golden oldies showed Sunday they can still produce golden moments on the field.

While Montana was completing his first nine passes and throwing for three touchdowns in his first start for Kansas City and his first start in three seasons, it was a banner day for some other stars of the '80s.

"The 'Old-Timers' still have got it in them," said Dan Reeves, the New York Giants' new coach, after 37-year-old Phil Simms and 34-year-old Lawrence Taylor led his team to a 26-20 win over the Chicago Bears.

Montana, Taylor and Simms (24-of-34 for 277 yards and two touchdowns coming off an elbow injury) weren't the only old-timers to shine on opening day.

-- Rickey Jackson, 35, and Sam Mills, 34, forced fumbles that were the keys to New Orleans' 33-21 win over Houston Sunday night.

-- Everson Walls, 33, got only the third sack of his 13-year career and it forced a fumble that was returned for a Cleveland touchdown by Stevon Moore in the Browns' 27-14 win over Cincinnati. "Strictly a power move," said the 195-pound Walls, better known for his interceptions -- he's second to Ronnie Lott among active players.

-- Joe Nash, Seattle's 32-year-old nose tackle, ran 13 yards for the only touchdown in the Seahawks' 18-12 loss to San Diego. The other scores in that game came on six field goals by San Diego's John Carney, a safety by the Seahawks and a John Kasay field goal.

-- Jeff Hostetler, 32, went 14 of 15 for 150 yards in his first half as a Los Angeles Raider as Al Davis' guys started with a 24-7 win over Minnesota. And Dan Marino, John Elway, Steve Young, Jim Kelly, Boomer Esiason and several other members of the over-30 set all got off to good starts. Esiason throwing for 371 yards for the New York Jets in a 26-20 loss to Elway and Denver.

But the most notable old-timers were Montana and Taylor, both sure first-ballot Hall of Famers who a year ago seemed finished after serious injuries.

Montana, traded from San Francisco after four Super Bowl victories and three Super Bowl MVPs, was everything Kansas

City expected when the Chiefs obtained him from the 49ers after he missed the past two seasons with elbow problems.

In a 27-3 win at Tampa, he finished 14-of-21 for 246 yards before leaving late in the third quarter with a bruised right wrist that probably won't keep him from facing Houston next Sunday. "He wanted to go back in," coach Marty Schottenheimer said. "But that's what we have Dave Krieg for."

Taylor, who missed the final seven games of last season after tearing an Achilles' tendon, looked like the LT of old with two sacks, including one in the final minute that sealed the Giants' win. That was vintage LT. He circled behind Jim Harbaugh, stripped the ball loose with his trademark arm swipe, then fell on the ball.

"I can't say it was spectacular," Taylor said. "I made a move on the tackle and Harbaugh just bobbled the ball."

Spectacular, no.

and they know what it takes to get the job done, and they played real well.

"When we are successful, Tommy and Brian are somehow involved. They are always around the ball. Either starting the attack or finishing the attack."

Although it was a good overall showing by the Falcons, Mahler admits that they are not where they want to be yet.

"We are still inconsistent," Mahler said. "There were too many peaks and valleys. We would play good for twenty minutes followed by five bad minutes. But as we mature throughout the season, hopefully that inconsistency will level out."

"Our fitness level was alright," Mahler said. "You are never going to be pleased. Compared to the other teams, we were the most fit. But we're not there yet."

In about a months time, we'll be where we want to be."

Five BG players were named to the 14-man All-Tournament Team: forwards Steve Klein and McCue, midfielders Kinney and Ferguson, and goalkeeper Traver.

Traver was shocked to win the Defensive MVP award. He was content with his performance but thought that any member of the Falcon defense could have been given the award. "It was a total team defensive effort on our part," Traver said.

"I thought that any one of our defensive players deserved it as much as I did. If any one of our defenders would have won it, I would have been satisfied. I'm happy I won it, and now we can move on and look forward to our first MAC game and start our season of winning the MAC," Traver added.

BG bounces through Colorado

Volleyball team happy despite 1-2 showing in western tourney

by Mark Leonard DeChant
assistant sports editor

The volleyball team took a pinball-like ride through Colorado this weekend, and returned to Bowling Green with no visible scars.

Sure, the Falcons were bounced around a bit, and really didn't score a whole lot, but at least they didn't completely tilt.

As an inexperienced Van De Walle team participating in a national-caliber tournament, BG wasn't too disappointed in its 1-2 record at the Colorado Invitational Friday and Saturday.

Head coach Denise Van De Walle spoke highly of the trip, and of its implications for the upcoming Mid-American Conference season.

"I'm very happy with our season so far," she said. "We went through the first four matches of the season against teams that are as tough as any in the MAC."

"We need to play well this weekend (in the West Virginia Invitational) to prepare for Toledo on the 17th."

The Falcons opened up the Colorado tourney with a 3-0 loss to Minnesota. The Golden Gophers, who are picked to finish fifth in the volleyball-rich Big Ten Conference, topped BG 15-9, 15-8, 16-14.

"We were seemingly in control in each one of those games," Van De Walle said. "But we let points slip through our fingers."

Later that evening, BG took the court once again, this time to battle Tennessee. The Volunteers controlled the match early, taking an impressive 2-1 lead after three games. Tennessee's victories were by scores of 15-8 and 15-5.

"I think the brightest spot in the tournament for us was right after we got beat in the third game 15-5," Van De Walle said.

"We didn't know which way to go. We could have folded, and said, 'well, we're gonna get beat again.' But instead we turned up the level of intensity."

The Falcons seemed to have the Midas Touch in that fourth game, as everything they touched - or spiked, or served, for that matter - turned to gold.

BG won the game 15-5, racking up 13 kills, and just one error on 27 attempts. So inspired were the Falcons after the shellacking that they took the fifth game 15-13, and consequently the entire match.

However, the Falcons weren't able to carry over that enthusiasm to Saturday's match-up against the host team Colorado.

BG came out flat and was never able to mount any kind of attack as they were bullied by the Bisons - the 12th ranked team in the country - 15-6, 15-3, 15-4.

"We came out flat and just didn't execute against Colorado," Van de Walle said. "Everyone had a bad match from top to bottom, except for a few bright spots here and there."

One very bright spot was the play of outside hitter Jessica Andrasko, who caught the eye of Van De Walle.

"She's highly competitive," Van De Walle said. "She's a fiery player, and she's played well this year."

"She had an outstanding tournament."

Andrasko was honored for her three-match performance, as she was named to the All-Colorado Tournament team.

Despite the losing record on the trip Van de Walle was pleased with the team's trip to the Rocky Mountain state.

"Overall it was a good experience for us," Van de Walle said. "The team is still bonding and we got to know each other a lot better on this trip."

Van de Walle hopes that this experience will help to prepare her team for the West Virginia Invitational.

errorless football and we didn't do that."

BLACKSBURG, Va.— Virginia Tech's new look 4-3 defense kept Bowling Green's offense out of the end zone until the final seconds and Maurice DeShazo completed 16 of 21 passes for two touchdowns to lead the Hokies to a 33-16 win Saturday.

After leading only 14-10 at the half, DeShazo marched Virginia Tech on two long scoring drives, holding the ball for over 11 minutes, to push his team's lead to 27-10.

The Hokies took the second-half kickoff and drove 60 yards in 11 plays, capped by tailback Dwayne Thomas' 4-yard run.

On Virginia Tech's next possession, backup tailback Tommy Edwards gave his team a commanding lead when he scored on a 1-yard plunge with time winding down in the third quarter, to finish a 15-play, 79-yard drive.

"The two drives in the third quarter were the critical factors in the game as far as we were concerned," Bowling Green coach Gary Blackney said. "We needed to hold them at that point and get good field position to try and score to stay in the game."

"To beat a team like Virginia Tech, especially early in the season, you have to play

The Falcons got off to a good start when linebacker Chache Leal picked up a first-quarter DeShazo fumble and rumbled 57-yards for a touchdown. Safety Steve Rodriguez had the big hit to jar the ball loose as DeShazo tried to lean for extra yardage after a short gain on an option keeper.

The Hokies answered right back, however, when DeShazo connected with big-play receiver Antonio Freeman, who out-stretched corner George Johnson and Rodriguez, near the goal line, for a 46-yard touchdown.

Steve Sanders scored the Hokies other first-half touchdown when he caught a short curl pass from DeShazo and shook off two tacklers as he ran down the left sideline for a 23-yard touchdown.

"It was a real good opener, it was very important for us to get a win today," Virginia Tech coach Frank Beamer said. "I think in the third quarter we did a nice job of establishing our offense after a shaky start."

The Falcon offense moved the ball somewhat during the game, but was unable to put together a substantial drive until late in the fourth quarter when sophomore quarterback Ryan Henry, making his first

Week one: a game of firsts

As last Saturday's Bowling Green game was the first of the 1993 campaign, it was obviously full of first-time happenings, especially during the first half of play.

Saturday's 33-16 loss to the Virginia Tech Hokies marked the first time that the Falcons have been defeated since they were beaten 38-19 by the Badgers of Wisconsin last September.

On the opposite end of the spectrum, it was Virginia Tech's first win in its last nine tries.

Things started out in fine fashion for the Falcons, as they took the opening kickoff and marched all the way to the Tech 34 yardline. The Falcons were led on the drive by sophomore quarterback -- and first-time starter -- Ryan Henry.

The Falcons in general, and Ryan in particular, looked very impressive as they took the opening kickoff and marched 46 yards to the Tech 34 yardline. On the way, Henry completed two passes for 30 yards.

BG's first drive of the season would come to a crashing end, however, when Henry and senior tailback Zeb Jackson botched a handoff resulting in Bowling Green's first turnover of the season.

Now it was time for the new revamped Falcon defense to step onto the gridiron for the first time this season. After giving up a first down to Tech, which moved the Hokies onto the Falcon side of the middle stripe, the defense turned in the first big play of the year.

On first and ten Maurice DeShazo, Tech's quarterback, rolled toward the right sideline but before he could turn the corner he was rudely greeted by BG's free-safety Steve Rodriguez.

Rodriguez's hit jarred the ball loose from DeShazo and junior outside linebacker Chache Leal picked up the bouncing pigskin and rumbled 57 yards for BG's first touchdown of the year.

"I got blocked away from the play," Leal said. "The coaches always tell me if you get blocked out your area to go to the ball and as soon as I got near their quarterback I saw the ball pop loose." Not only was Saturday's game Leal's first ever start for BG, but it also proved to be Leal's first touchdown on the Division I football level. Bowling Green's second offensive possession turned disastrous as the young offense, besieged by penalties, faced a third and 36 situation. The Falcons made the best of the bad situation though when Henry, set up in the shotgun formation, pulled off a 44-yard quick-kick. For Henry, who was a backup punter in high school, it was his first boot since his playing days in grade school.

Soccer team sizzles in Kwik Goal Classic

The Falcon soccer team began its season by winning the ninth-annual Kwik Goal Classic this weekend.

With a 2-0 victory over DePaul on Saturday, and a 5-2 win over the University of Kentucky on Sunday, the Falcons won their third straight Kwik Goal championship.

On Saturday, BG played with a lot of enthusiasm and put constant pressure on the DePaul defense. At the 27:00 mark, the hard work paid off. On a free kick from the edge of the penalty box, Tournament Offensive MVP Ryan McCue drove the ball hard to the far post that skipped through the entire defense and into the net.

According to McCue, the goal wasn't planned the way it came out. "I've heard twelve different stories on how it went in," McCue said. "I've heard I put it straight in. I've heard it went in off the defender. I'm not even sure, I just shot it toward the back post." Head Coach Mel Mahler added that it was not the way they drew it up. "Ryan planned on crossing the ball. He mis-hit the ball. But to be successful you need a little luck, and that's what it was," Mahler said.

Later in the first half, the high level of pressure added another goal. At 32:00, midfielder Mike Kelly stole the ball and made a great run down the left wing.

Kelly crossed the ball long to the far post. The ball was inches from going out of bounds, but the great hustle of Michael James saved the ball. James then crossed the ball back into the middle to a wide open Tom Kinney who finished off the play with a header over the goalkeeper's head.

On Sunday, BG did not have an easy game. After falling behind 2-1 late in the first half, McCue added his second goal in as many games with the assists from freshmen Tony Dore and James.

BG owned the second half offensively and defensively. At 58:48, Kelly made nother great run, dribbling through several defenders and serving a cross right on the foot of Tim Concannon at the top of the box. Concannon settled the ball and rocketed it into the side netting for his second goal of the game.

Defensively, BG only allowed two shots on goal in the second half, and both were saved by Tournament Defensive MVP Dan Traver.

At 75:13, Traver sent a long drop-kick that was skipped forward toward the Kentucky penalty box. McCue challenged the sweeper before being taken out of the play with a fair challenge.

With the ball still alive in front of the UK goal, James used his speed and strength to win the ball from the goalkeeper and slot it into the empty net.

With only two minutes remaining, BG capitalized on a free ball in the UK box. Brian Ferguson recovered the ball near the goal-line and swiftly dribbled through two defenders before passing the ball across the goal mouth. Dore beat his defender to the cross and scored his first collegiate goal.

Mahler was very pleased with the performance of the Falcons, especially the upperclassmen. "Anytime you open up at home, you have a lot of enthusiasm," Mahler stated. "But at the same time, that enthusiasm has to be directed in the right direction and you need to keep focused on your important tasks."

"Tommy (Kinney) and Brian (Ferguson) did a great job of keeping things organized. Everything seemed to happen through them and rightfully so," Mahler continued. "They are the seniors

The BG News Athlete of the Week

The host Falcon soccer team defeated DePaul 2-0 and Kentucky 5-2 to win the Kwik Goal/BGSU Soccer Classic this weekend. A big part of the BG success was junior goaltender Dan Traver who held the opposition to only two goals, while recording a plethora of saves.

For his efforts Traver was named Most Valuable Defensive Player of the tournament. Teammate Ryan McCue was named Most Valuable Offensive Player.

Last year Traver was one of the top ranked goalkeepers in the Midwest helping the Falcons to a 15-2-1 record and their first NCAA tournament appearance since 1973.

On winning the tournament MVP award Traver said, "I thought that any of our players deserved it as much as I did."
