From the Director:
The Public History Program, administered by the Department of History at Bowling Green State University, recently received the necessary shot in the arm with the appointment of Dr. Sarah Sharp as chief coordinator. Dr. Sharp's career includes working at the Bancroft Library, more specifically with the California Regional Oral History Office. In this position, she interviewed numerous politicians, among whom were Ronald Reagan, Edwin Meese, Wilson Riles, and Alsonso Zipoli. This semester she is teaching an introductory course in Public History and will be responsible for further developing the curriculum and coordinating internships. Next spring she is offering a course in Oral History that many readers may find interesting. We welcome her and wish her the best of luck in making this program a successful one.

The date for the third Conference on Local History will be 2 April 1987. Although the program has not been completed, the list of speakers include: Randall Buchman, Defiance College; Dr. Sarah Sharp, Bowling Green State University; Ray Schuck, Allen County Historical Society; Andrew Gulliford, American House, Lima, Ohio; Ms. Paulette Weiser, Toledo Hospital; and G. Wesley Johnson, Editor of The Public Historian. The fee again will be $7.50. For more details about the conference program, contact the Center.

The Institute for Great Lakes Research has moved to the Levis Center located at the Owens-Illinois Industrial Park, south of Perrysburg, Ohio. The CAC no longer is responsible for servicing the collection. All correspondence should be sent to: The Institute for Great Lakes Research, c/o Jerome Library, BGSU, Bowling Green, Ohio 43403.

Reference
The Center’s reference staff is pleased to accept brief requests for information. While we are unable to undertake in-depth research for anyone due to limited staff resources, researchers are invited to call or write to the CAC with simple queries about our holdings and services. Specific information may be requested (i.e. a naturalization record, an obituary, etc.) if the year and approximate date is given. Many of the records of northwest Ohio have no index, and most are accessible only by date.

There is a minimum research fee of $2.50 per half-hour for the first hour, and $5.00 for each half-hour thereafter. The charge for photocopies is $.20 per exposure taken from original (paper) materials, and $.25 per exposure taken from microfilmed documents.

Judy Robins, Reference Archivist and Editor of the Archival Chronicle, will be leaving the CAC in December to accept a new position at Thomas Jefferson University in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Please address all reference inquiries to the attention of Ann Bowers, Assistant Director.

Preservation
How to Tell the Old From the New. Over the past year, several people have asked us to preserve a newspaper announcing the assassination of Abraham Lincoln. Unfortunately each of these announcements was actually a facsimile, and not the original paper. The papers are yellowed and brown in color, very fragile and crumbling. The inner pages are filled with advertisements and testimonial letters from satisfied customers of a patent drug. These letters are dated in the 1890s, proof that the paper was printed long after April, 1865. Even without the proof of these dates, it can be seen in a glance that the papers were printed much later. Newspapers in the 1860s, and even into the 1880s and 90s in some instances, were printed on “rag” paper. This is paper made from cloth rags instead of wood pulp. Today, rag paper remains almost snow white in color; it is not fragile or brittle, and feels strong to the touch. However, wood pulp paper does not have these qualities and quickly deteriorates. Manufacturers changed from rag content to wood pulp paper because the supply of rags could not keep up with the demand for paper. Wood pulp paper also is much less expensive to produce, a fact which greatly appealed to the newspaper publishers. If you suspect that an old newspaper from the civil war era or earlier is not an original, you can apply these tests of color and strength. If it is white and strong it is probably rag paper. If it is yellowed or brown and easily breaks or crumbles, it is probably made of wood pulp and actually dates from the 1880s or later. You can always bring your paper documents to the Preservation Laboratory at the Center if you still have questions.

Bigelow Family Band (Bowling Green, Ohio) ca. 1914
Some variety exists in the Dorothy Ringle papers. For example, included in the collection are a Civil War diary and a broadside warning of the spread of communism in 1955. The bulk of the material, however, reflects the Ohio farmer's reactions to New Deal policies.

The Hill/Morgan Family Papers Collection (MS 100) The Hill and Morgan families were among the earliest settlers to locate in Wood County, Ohio. In 1866 they were joined by the marriage of Guy Morgan (a Civil War veteran) and Hester Anna Hill, the daughter of the local Methodist Episcopal minister. Because of this early introduction into the county this family subsequently intermarried and associated with many of the local people right to the present day. As a result this collection is a valuable source for genealogy and local history. It was donated by Ruth Owenyer Grad, the last keeper of the family records, which understandably reflect her own ancestral connections to Wood County's past. Included are church and school records from the early days and a wide range of printed documents such as report cards, postcards, diaries, war reunions, etc. A fairly extensive accumulation of correspondence (from 1831) creates the relationships and friendly associations kept by this old Northwest Ohio family to the present. Associated surnames: Burrows, Crawford/Crowfoott, Kingsbury, Ostrander, Shuman, Wensel, Whitman, Underwood, Hallpeter.

Recent Acquisitions Please note that all inclusive dates provided in the description of new acquisitions indicate the earliest and latest dates covered by a series of records or a manuscript collection, however, gaps within these ranges may occur.
