Spotlight Session (Thursday afternoon)

New Media and the Future of Academic Publishing

This panel discussion describes the global open access movement that librarians initiated to resist monopoly publishers who have set unreasonably high prices for journals and other research publications. Panelists will discuss from their career vantage points the pros and cons of open access publishing. Discussion will also focus on the tools that authors can use to retain rights to their published work, and the ways that students and scholars in developing regions of the world are being marginalized in the process of creating and distributing knowledge. The goal of the session is twofold: (1) to show that future growth in the sociology of sport depends on making knowledge in the field more accessible to those concerned with issues related to sports in society, and (2) to initiate social action that will help scholars in the field regain control of the products of their academic labor.

NASSS Dialogues (Thursday afternoon)

Continuing the momentum begun in dialogues with Dr. Alma Clayton-Pedersen at the annual NASSS Conference in 2005, we will discuss ongoing issues related to the social and academic climate at NASSS.

Graduate Student Breakfast (Friday Morning)

Network with other graduate students at a Friday morning breakfast, courtesy of NASSS. New Grad Reps will be elected at this meeting.

Keynote Address (Friday morning)

"Welcome to the Terrordome: Sports in the 21st Century

Journalist and commentator, Dave Zirin speaks on the cultural politics of sport today. Samantha King presides at this plenary event.

Graduate Student Workshop (Friday)

Negotiating the Publication Terrain

Designed for, but not restricted to, graduate students this round table will be driven by attendee participation and questions directed to a range of panelists that have agreed to speak to their varied publication experiences. What is the publication process and how does one begin? How much 'assistance' should one's supervisor provide? What kinds of journals are available for those who study sociology and cultural studies of health, physical activity, recreation, and sport?

Which non-refereed sources should also be considered? What are some of the dos and don'ts of written submissions? If you have any concerns or curiosities about the publication process, this seminar will provide a non-threatening and informative environment where graduate students can learn to negotiate the ever-important publication terrain. As always, the graduate student workshop is informal and interactive, and all are encouraged to attend and participate.

Take-a-student to Lunch (Friday)

This annual tradition is intended to contribute to a positive experience of the annual conference for both faculty and graduate students, and we hope that as many of you as possible will agree to participate.

Business Meeting (Friday Afternoon)

Join us before the Presidential Reception for NASSS' year-in-review, also known as the Business Meeting. All attendees and only attendees of the business meeting will receive tickets for the book raffle.

Presidential Reception (Friday Evening)

After the business meeting, socialize with other attendees over food and drink (cash bar).

Friday Evening Social

The fun continues after the Presidential Reception at the Firehouse Lounge.

Alan Ingham Keynote Address (Saturday Morning)

To Interpose a Little Ease: Making Sense of Sport and Intellectual Labor in CLR James's Beyond A Boundary And His Other Works

Cameron McCarthy, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, offers a powerful reading of James, sport, and globalization. Michael Giardina will preside.

Saturday Spotlight Session (Saturday Afternoon)

Art of the Board

This panel welcomes artist Rich Moorhead and his work to stimulate an examination of the possibilities for interdisciplinary study and community interaction inherent in boundary crossing between sport, physical culture, and art. Ample time for open discussion, questions, and viewing Moorhead's art will be provided.
