CRITICAL ISSUES IN SPORT AND SOCIETY SERIES

Edited by Douglas Hartmann and Michael Messner

Critical Issues in Sport and Society features scholarly books that help expand our understanding of the myriad ways in which sport is intertwined with social life in the contemporary world. Using the tools of various scholarly disciplines, including sociology, anthropology, history, media studies and others, books in this new series investigate the growing impact of sport and sports-related activities on various aspects of social life as well as on key developments and changes in the sporting world and emerging sporting practices. Series authors produce groundbreaking research that brings empirical and applied work together with cultural critique and national perspectives written in an engaging, accessible format.

2019 Annual Meeting / CONFERENCE HIGHLIGHTS

Wednesday 7:00 PM – 10:00 PM

Welcome Reception

Peacock Foyer

Please join us for socializing, light appetizers, and an open bar conference as we celebrate the start of this year's conference. In conjunction with the "Virginia Beach +1" initiative, veteran NASSS attendees are encouraged to introduce themselves to new attendees.

Thursday 10:25 AM – 11:15 AM

Film Screening: Completing the Circle – Native American Athletes Giving Back to Their Community (Natalie Welch, 2018)

Peacock C

A 17-minute documentary that explores the narratives of three Native American athletes at different stages of their careers and how "giving back" has become an integral part of their lives; followed by Q&A with the director.

Thursday 11:35 AM – 12:35 PM

Graduate Student Meeting & Luncheon

Sponsored by SJSU Institute for the Study of Sport, Society and Social Change

Peacock C

Thursday 1:45 PM to 3:00 PM

Plenary Session: "Decolonizing Sport Sociology is not a "Metaphor": Decentering Colonialism, Unsettling Whiteness, & Indigenizing Sport Sociology"

Peacock Ballroom

This panel considers Tuck and Yang's (2012) seminal paper "Decolonization is not a Metaphor" as a starting point for our conversation on how to critique and explore ways to decolonize sport sociology using Indigenous perspectives and understandings. Adopting a decolonizing discourse without understanding how to decenter settler perspectives that may well be incommensurable with decolonization, achieves very little in the repatriation of Indigenous lands and ways of living; rather, it is not a metaphor for other things we want to do or improve on, but a sovereign act of reclaiming spaces that are often devoid and/or resistant to Indigenous ways of knowing and becoming. In the same breath, unsettling white settler dominance is a never-ending struggle of critically examining how new forms of colonization seek to maintain the status quo, and the necessity of a decolonizing agenda.

Thursday 3:10 PM to 5:10 PM

Keynote Address Amanda Blackhorse & Film Screening More Than A Word (John Little, 2017)

Peacock Ballroom

Amanda Blackhorse is a psychiatric social worker on the Navajo Reservation and member of the Navajo people who is known for her work as an activist on the Washington Redskins name controversy. She is the lead plaintiff in Blackhorse v. Pro-Football, Inc. (2013)

More Than A Word* (John Little, 2017) analyzes the Washington football team and their use of the derogatory term R*dskins. Using interviews from both those in favor of changing the name and those against, More Than A Word presents a deeper analysis of the many issues surrounding the Washington team name. The documentary also examines the history of Native American cultural appropriation.

Thursday 6:45 PM-8:45 PM

NASSSS Goes to the Movies & Panel Discussion

Peacock Ballroom

The Radicals* (2018) is a documentary film that follows four snowboarders and surfers driven to become social and environmental stewards through their connection with the environments in which they play. By enjoying and appreciating their natural surroundings, these awakened athletes introduce us to some of the world's most dedicated activists and game-changing wilderness initiatives that can actually change the world.

Friday 6:00 AM to 7:00 AM

Presidential Run

Hotel Lobby

Get to know NASSS Presidents, current and former. Interact with NASSS leadership and meet new members while enjoying a physical activity. Runners will meet in the lobby and set out for a 2-3-mile scenic jog. This is a friendly event with a variety of paces for everyone – walkers and rollers are welcome.

Friday 9:30 AM to 10:45 AM

Presidential Address: Akilah Carter-Francis

“A Song for You: Composing the Sport Scholar-Educator-Activist”

Sponsored by the UCCS College of Letters, Arts & Sciences

Peacock Ballroom

Friday 9:15 AM to 9:30 AM / 10:45 AM to 11:00 AM / 5:35 PM to 5:45 PM

Student Poster Display

Prefunction Area

Graduate and undergraduate sport scholars will share their research in a casual and convivial space. This is an important opportunity to engage with the future leaders of our field. This is not only a great opportunity to learn about cutting-edge research, it is an incredible community building and professional socializing experience.

Friday 12:15 PM to 1:45 PM

Take A Student to Lunch

Peacock C

This annual tradition encourages faculty and/or professional members of NASSS to “Take a Student to Lunch” as an opportunity to promote interaction between faculty members and graduate (or undergraduate) students.

Friday 5:45 PM to 7:15 PM

NASSS Business Meeting & Awards

Peacock Ballroom

Friday 7:15 PM to 8:30 PM

President’s Reception

Prefunction Area

Saturday 10:50 AM to 12:05 PM

Alan Ingham Memorial Lecture: Paul Whitinui, University of Victoria

Sponsored by the Denver University Sport Coaching Programs

Peacock Ballroom

“Indigenizing Sports Sociology is a “Verb not a Noun”: De-colonizing Our Way to Reconciliation and Inclusion in the 21st Century”

The aim of this presentation is to show how decolonizing our way to reconciliation and inclusion in sports sociology for the benefit of all, not only requires Indigenous peoples to be at the forefront of leading this work, it also requires institutions and organizations to prioritise as well as operationalize the appropriate resources, time and funding of decolonizing sports sociology outside of the race-culture-identity-difference binaries, settler fantasies and ambiguities, neoliberal loaded ideologies, and internalised colonialism built on domestic settler idealism. Finally, exploring Indigenizing sports sociology more as a “verb not a noun” is as much about doing the work together, as it is about acknowledging that Indigenous people’s world views, and ways of knowing are just as relevant as they were before the arrival of colonization.

Saturday 1:25 PM to 2:40 PM

NASSS Members Luncheon & Memorial for George Sage

Peacock Ballroom

Come celebrate the life and legacy of George Sage, one of the founding members of NASSS. Also, celebrate the induction of this year’s class of NASSS Research Fellows. This is a great opportunity to relax and break bread with fellow NASSS members.

A3 Off the Beaten Tenure-Track

Peacock C

Neoliberal universities constantly cut labor costs by replacing tenure track positions with (permanently) temporary workers. This leads many into a variety of contingent position that may be more or less desirable and sustainable. Potential topics:

- Prepping and teaching multiple classes
- Different paths for engaging in research
- Soft money positions in addition to adjunct positions
- Maintaining self-esteem with low status
- Staying put or going on the visiting circuit
- When and how do you call it quits

Intended audience: Graduate students, recent graduates

Brenda Riemer, Eastern Michigan University, briemer@emich.edu

Jerry Holt, Florida A&M University, jerry.holt32@gmail.com

Aaron Miller, Cal State Eastbay, aaron.miller@csueastbay.edu

A4 #ReclaimingMyTime: Reclaiming Sport Narratives I

Decolonizing Sport Sociology is not a “Metaphor”: Decentering Colonialism, Unsettling Whiteness, & Indigenizing Sport Sociology

Session Organizer: Dr. Paul Whitinui, University of Victoria, whitinui@uvic.ca

Session Presider: Chen Chen, University of Alberta, cchen3@ualberta.ca

This panel considers Tuck and Yang’s (2012) seminal paper “Decolonization is not a Metaphor” as a starting point for our conversation on how to critique and explore ways to decolonize sport sociology using Indigenous perspectives and understandings. As Tuck and Yang (2012) contend, that to adopt a decolonizing discourse without understanding how to decenter settler perspectives that may well be incommensurable with decolonization, achieves very little in the repatriation of Indigenous lands and ways of living; rather, it is not a metaphor for other things we want to do or improve on, but a sovereign act of reclaiming spaces that are often devoid and/or resistant to Indigenous ways of knowing and becoming. In the same breath, unsettling white settler dominance is a never-ending struggle of critically examining how new forms of colonization seek to maintain the status quo, and why a decolonizing agenda is deeply necessary.

Within this conversation the following questions emerge as on-going ‘sites of struggle’, and include:

1. What new forms of colonization have helped to reinforce colonial/modernist power (social norms) in sport sociology?
2. What kinds of examples continue to reinforce racialized stereotypes of otherness, and in particular, continue to (mis)represent Indigenous peoples as less than, or made to feel inferior, and;
3. What intersubjectivities can we collectively consider that would bring about a less divisive or hostile understanding about Indigenous peoples’ ways of knowing within sport sociology discourse(s)?

Finally, we aim to move the conversation forward by sharing everyday acts of Indigenous resurgence and renewal to reduce settler harm and to grow Indigenous alliances in sport sociology that are ethically informed, culturally inclusive, and morally astute. This and more, will be shared in concert with the audience’s own experiences.

Amanda Blackhorse

Amanda Blackhorse is a psychiatric social worker on the Navajo Reservation and member of the Navajo people who is known for her work as an activist on the Washington Redskins name controversy. She is the lead plaintiff in Blackhorse v. Pro-Football, Inc. (2013).

More Than A Word* (John Little, 2017)

More Than A Word analyzes the Washington football team and their use of the derogatory term R*dskins. Using interviews from both those in favor of changing the name and those against, More Than A Word presents a deeper analysis of the many issues surrounding the Washington team name. The documentary also examines the history of Native American cultural appropriation. Watch the trailer.

E6 Being A Good Ally at NASSS

Princess Anne

Part of the decolonizing project is creating new or expanding existing institutional pathways in NASSS and sport sociology for Indigenous scholars, scholars of color, and other minoritized scholars. A key means to accomplishing that is white allies respectfully working with Indigenous scholars, scholars of color, and other minoritized scholars to collaboratively create institutional spaces where everyone is recognized and included. This workshop will define what it means to be a good ally, or people willing to go beyond nice words to do the necessary work and take the necessary risks.

The Radicals (Tamo Campos, 2018)

Environmentalism Meets Action Sports

With breathtaking cinematography, The Radicals is a documentary film that follows four snowboarders and surfers driven to become social and environmental stewards through their connection with the environments in which they play. By enjoying and appreciating their natural surroundings, these awakened athletes introduce us to some of the world's most dedicated activists and game-changing wilderness initiatives that can actually change the world.

The Radicals inspires us to shift our perspective, rise above the challenges of modern society and dig into our roots to create radical waves of change, while still enjoying the thrill of nature, gravity, and a sense of real purpose. Guided discussion to follow the screening.

Akilah R. Carter-Francique (Ph.D., University of Georgia) is an Associate Professor at San José State University (SJSU) in the Department of African American Studies. She also serves as the Executive Director for the Institute for the Study of Sport, Society, and Social Change (ISSSSC) at SJSU. Her scholarly endeavors and field of focus encompasses the intersection of sport, society, and social justice that is inclusive of issues of diversity, social movements, and the dynamics of social change and development. She employs a critical interpretivist standpoint utilizing Black feminist thought and Critical Race Theory to illuminate issues of experiential marginalizations and, as a former collegiate athlete in track and field at the University of Houston, this includes the experiences of Black athletes in sports at all levels of participation. Carter-Francique serves as the 2018-2019 President of the North American Society for the Sociology of Sport (NASSS) and she is the co-editor of Athletic Experience at Historically Black Colleges and Universities: Past, Present, and Persistence and Critical Race Theory: Black Athletic Experiences in the United States.

Indigenizing Sports Sociology is a “Verb not a Noun”:
De-colonizing Our Way to Reconciliation and Inclusion in the 21st Century

Paul Whitinui, University of Victoria

Following the release of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission of Canada’s Calls to Action in 2015, Canada universities, and colleges have felt pressured to indigenize their institutions. As Smith, Tuck and Yang (2018) posit, indigenous and decolonizing perspectives in education (or across disciplines for that matter) have long persisted alongside colonial models of education, yet too often they have been subsumed within the fields of multiculturalism, critical race theory, and progressive education. Indeed, what “indigenization” looks like can vary significantly; with the promise of Indigenous reconciliation and inclusion often left to the imagination of leaders in institutions or organizations who see an opportunity to further extend their reach, influence and/or branding into Indigenous communities from above. Counter to the idea of inclusion, acts of decolonizing often remain elusive with little or no accountability forthcoming concerning the continual loss and struggle to protect our lands, life and/or ways of living. Adam Gaudry (2018) argues, however, that to achieve a just North American academy employing treaty-based decolonial indigenization and resurgence-based decolonial indigenization – as strategies for policy-making and praxis are deeply necessary in how we move forward together; in this new era of reconciliation and inclusion. The aim of this presentation, therefore, will be to show how decolonizing our way to reconciliation and inclusion in sports sociology for the benefit of all, not only requires Indigenous peoples to be at the forefront of leading this work, it also requires institutions and organizations to prioritise as well as operationalize the appropriate resources, time and funding of decolonizing sports sociology outside of the race-culture-identity-difference binaries, settler fantasies and ambiguities, neoliberal loaded ideologies, and internalised colonialism built on domestic settler idealism. Finally, exploring Indigenizing sports sociology more as a “verb not a noun” is as much about doing the work together, as it is about acknowledging that Indigenous people’s world views, and ways of knowing are just as relevant as they were before the arrival of colonization.

Dr. Paul Whitinui is an Indigenous Māori scholar from the Confederation of Tribes in the Far North of Aotearoa New Zealand (Ngā Puhi, Te Aupōuri, Ngāti Kuri) on his Dad’s side, and a third generation New Zealand Pākehā (French, Irish, Welsh and English) on his Mum’s side. Dr. Whitinui is an interdisciplinary researcher with a background in sport and leisure (Sociology), Indigenous health and development (Indigenous Studies), and Indigenous teacher education (Education). He is author of numerous journal articles and has had published four books. He is currently the lead investigator on a 2 year SSHRC Insight Development Grant in collaboration with four post-secondary institutions on Vancouver Island to create an Indigenous cultural safety impact assessment tool that can be used to monitor and improve the quality of the training over time. He is also the Chair for the World Indigenous Research Alliance (WIRA) under the auspicious of the World Indigenous Nations Higher Education Consortium (WINHEC), and has been the Editor-in-Chief for the on-line WINHEC journal since 2017. Since becoming an academic in 2007, Paul has given well over 100 presentations at various conferences across the globe, and is extremely grateful for the opportunity to give this year’s Alan Ingham Memorial keynote.

Gary Sailes Graduate Diversity Scholarship

Gary “Doc” Sailes is an award-winning professor at Indiana University. He is widely recognized for his research and advocacy on collegiate sport access and Critical Race Theory. A champion of student-athlete development, Dr. Sailes has led Congressional hearings, and presented to the International Olympic Congress on abuses in college athletics and the value of diversity across sport. A recipient of the 2011 NASSS Distinguished Service Award, “Doc” continues his support of the NASSS community by bestowing resources that annually fund the Graduate Diversity Scholarship.

In recognition of the recommendation made by the Racial Diversity Committee in the fall of 2003, the NASSS Conference Program Committee has implemented a scholarship for a graduate student who is a member of a racial or ethnic “minority” group. The purpose of the scholarship is to create a mechanism to identify racial and/or ethnic “minority” graduate students who are doing research in the area of sport sociology, and to provide a means of supporting their work and association with NASSS. The award is for $500 to be applied toward expenses associated with attendance at the NASSS annual conference.

Barbara Brown Outstanding Student Paper Award

Barbara A. Brown was a professor of sport sociology at the University of Western Ontario from 1983 until 1990, when she died of cancer at the age of forty. Dr. Brown, who was President-Elect of NASSS at the time of her death, was widely recognized for her expertise on women in sport and leisure, her political commitment to extending girls' and women's opportunities for participation in sport, and her contributions to the development of a professional community of sport sociologists. She was also a dedicated mentor and teacher whose invaluable work with students is appropriately memorialized in the naming of this award for her.

Sports, Society, and Technology

Bodies, Practices, and Knowledge Production

Uniquely addresses the complex entanglements of sports, society and technology through interdisciplinary scholarship

Provides varied perspectives and a diverse range of theoretical, methodological, and empirical contributions necessary to interrogate complex human-technology interactions

Fills a significant gap in existing scholarship by merging the strengths of STS's object-oriented approach to technology with the focus on embodiment in Sport Studies

Jennifer J. Sterling is a Lecturer in Sport Studies in the Department of American Studies at the University of Iowa

Mary G. McDonald is the Homer C. Rice Chair of Sports and Society, and Professor in the School of History and Sociology at the Georgia Institute of Technology

Sports, Society, and Technology: Bodies, Practices, and Knowledge Production, edited by Jennifer J. Sterling and Mary G. McDonald, addresses the complex entanglements of science, technology, and sporting cultures. The collection explores themes around human and non-human actants, knowledge formations and processes, and the materiality and multiplicity of bodies through an engagement with the interdisciplinary fields of Sport Studies and Science and Technology Studies. Representing a range of methodological, theoretical, and disciplinary approaches, contributors interrogate the social, cultural, political, and historical intersections of an ever-expanding technoscientific sporting landscape – from true bounce and brain trauma to exercise physiology, metrics, and esports, and from feminist technoscience, whey protein, and epigenetics to sickle cell screening and testosterone regulation.

"In this wonderfully curated collection, editors Jennifer Sterling and Mary McDonald make evident the value of science and technology studies (STS) for enriching our understanding of contemporary sporting cultures. They also show the value of sport for illuminating the complex effects of an increasingly technologized society. Provocative content and compelling methodological insights will surely help push both fields in new directions."

Professor Mary Louise Adams, Socio-Cultural Studies of Sport, Health and the Body, School of Kinesiology and Health Studies, Queen's University

Sports in Higher Education Issues and Controversies in College Athletics Edited by Gary Sales

Sports in Higher Education: Issues and Controversies in College Athletics provides students with a comprehensive foundation in the study of college sports. While college sports scandals have dominated the news recently, these scandals are offset by fan interest, increasing revenue streams, extensive television coverage, and alumni interest and support. This text informs readers about college sports as a critical aspect of the university education system, with material written by experts in their respective areas in sport management and the sociology of sport.

The comprehensive readings in Sports in Higher Education explore topics such as crime and violence in intercollegiate sports and sport reform. The goal of the material is not only to inform and educate, but to stimulate dialogue about college sports, and move understanding of this topic beyond box scores and championships, to encompass ethics, philosophy, sociology, and the education of the student-athlete as a whole person.

Modern Sport and the African American Experience Edited by Gary Sales

Modern Sport and the African American Experience is a collection of essays from some of America's most brilliant and vibrant sport sociologists and race scholars. This text highlights more of the experiences of African Americans in modern sport than any of its kind. Among its diverse topics, this book examines predictions about African American sports performance and participation in the 21st century, discusses the role of sport in African American culture, and gives a candid look at the experiences of African American athletes attending America's predominantly white colleges and universities. It also discusses the experiences of African American women in these environments, a largely ignored topic.

A book of this type would not be complete without also examining racism, discrimination, and the conflict black athletes and coaches encounter with the white establishment. This volume is a representation of Dr. Gary Sales' well-known, much-respected scholarship and work as a consultant in American commercial sports.

"More than ever, skateboarding presents a healthy—if some times subversive—option for today's youth. Moving Boarders is a vital account of what works in skateboarding."
—Kevin Whitley, Programs Director, Tony Hawk Foundation

"An insightful, well-researched, and thought-provoking analysis of African American family life in the last century."
—Journal of African American History

"For countless readers, Frank Meyerwell was a genuine hero to be revered and imitated. Anderson's book shows us why."
—Journal of Social History

"This excellent book gives intriguing glimpses into the ways that African Americans worked, lived, played, and consumed in a segregated America."
—The Journal of Southern History

ABOUT THE SERIES

Palgrave's New Femininities in Digital, Physical and Sporting Cultures series is dedicated to exploring emerging forms and expressions of femininity, feminist activism and politics in an increasingly global, consumer and digital world. Books in this series focus on the latest conceptual, methodological and theoretical developments in feminist thinking about bodies, movement, physicality, leisure and technology to understand and problematize new framings of feminine embodiment. Globally inclusive, and featuring established and emerging scholars from multi-disciplinary fields, the series is characterized by an interest in advancing research and scholarship concerning women's experiences of physical culture in a variety of cultural contexts.
