Methodology

- Content analysis of newspaper articles about sworn law enforcement officers in the US arrested during the 18 month period from January 1, 2005 and June 30, 2006.
- Convenience sampling primarily using Google News search engine automated daily searches of newspapers published on the Internet.
- Articles were cataloged, coded, and entered into SPSS.
- Coded variables included gender, age, years of service, duty status at time of offense, state, department type and size, victim demographic information, and 64 offense categories (mostly NIBRS categories).
- SPSS runs for frequencies and correlations.

Recommendations for Future Research

- Continue data collection for an additional 18 months
 - January, 2005 – December, 2007 (36 months total)
 - Will the patterns hold with more cases?
 - Analyze data on victims
- Gather available data for use as dependent variables in logistic regression analyses
 - CALEA accreditation status
 - Agencies' hiring, minimum education, and training requirements
- Generate a random sample from the population of cases for in-depth research
 - Qualitative analysis?
 - Review of court case files to develop more data (especially interested in patterns in case dispositions (e.g., convictions, plea bargains, acquittals, dismissals))
 - Are officers keeping their jobs after being arrested?
