320 years of service

15 faculty and staff to end University careers

Five faculty who have taught at Bowling Green a total of 161 years are among 15 who will conclude their University careers at the end of this academic year.

William Alexander, a professor of music education, and David Krabill, a professor of mathematics and statistics and computer science, will each leave the University after 34 years of teaching.

F. Lee Miesle, a professor of speech communication, will retire after 32 years and Joseph K. Balogh, dean of the College of Health and Community Services, will conclude his administrative career after 31 years.

Raymond Yeager, a professor of speech communication, will retire after 30 years of service.

Also retiring are two husband and wife teams—Edith Anders, an assistant professor of library and educational media who has served the University 14 years, and Hanns Anders, a professor of chemistry who has taught at Bowling Green on two separate occasions, most recently since 1957; Fred Eckman, a professor of English who joined the faculty in 1961, and Martha Eckman, an associate professor of English who has been affiliated with Bowling Green since 1963.

Others retiring include John Paul Scott, research professor of psychology who joined the faculty in 1965; Olin Smith, research professor of psychology who has been at Bowling Green 14 years; Beatrice Morton, a professor of English who has taught at Bowling Green since 1969; Robert Innis, an associate professor in the School of Technology who has been at Bowling Green since 1959; Irene Skinner, an assistant professor of home economics who joined the faculty in 1966, and Ardath Gilmore, a budget accountant in the College of Arts and Sciences who came to the University in 1962.

Dr. Alexander came to Bowling Green in 1946 as an instructor of music. During his first year at the University he revived the Symphony Orchestra which he continued to conduct for a number of years.

A violinist, he was assistant concertmaster for the Toledo Symphony Orchestra from 1946-57. In 1974 he was tapped for membership in Omicron Delta Kappa national leadership honorary.

Dr. Krabill joined the faculty as an associate professor of mathematics in 1946. He was instrumental in organizing the University's computer science department and in 1969 was named acting chair of that new department, a position he held for one year.

Dr. Yeager, who received both bachelor's and master's degrees from Bowling Green, joined the faculty as an instructor in 1950. As director of forensics, his teams have been ranked in the top 10 in the nation during the last four years. This year the team earned a third-place finish.

The recipient of various state and national awards, Dr. Yeager this year was honored with the Distinguished Service Award presented by the National Forensic Association. In 1969 he received Bowling Green's Distinguished Teacher Award.

Edith Anders, who has served 14 years on two separate occasions at Bowling Green, most recently joined the faculty in 1968. She is a cataloger in the University Library and received both a bachelor's and master's degree from the University of Michigan.

Joseph K. Balogh

Health college pioneer faces new frontier

Joseph K. Balogh, who accepted his first teaching position in the public schools in 1939 for $900 a year, will end his 31-year career in higher education at Bowling Green on June 30.

Dr. Balogh, who joined the faculty in 1949 as an assistant professor of sociology, will retire as dean of the College of Health and Community Services, a position he has held since 1973.

But Dr. Balogh, who said he has mixed feelings about his retirement, claims he will never retire "cold turkey."

"My idea of retirement is to be close to a university," he said. "I never intend to leave Bowling Green."

He anticipates teaching on a part-time basis or working as a consultant to the University administration on program development and/or student recruitment.

"I would not be averse to traveling around the country and speaking to alumni who might lend financial support to Bowling Green," Dr. Balogh said, adding, "I have had a lot of students in 31 years."

After 15 years in higher education administration, Dr. Balogh said he is "kind of glad" to leave administrative duties behind.

"The well is running dry. The problems ahead will be very complex, and I am not sure I can cope with what the future is going to bring," he said.

Dr. Balogh foresees the next 10 years at Bowling Green as a time to assess academics, possibly "weeding out the dead wood" and concentrating available dollars on "good sound programs." He added that curriculum revision might also be necessary. "Is it not possible to have good programs with less curriculum?" he asked.

Faculty retention is another problem with which Bowling Green will have to deal in the next decade, Dr. Balogh said. "We may have to reckon with collective bargaining; tenure may come under scrutiny. We are going to have to find a way in higher education to do a better job of increasing faculty salaries."

But Dr. Balogh sees perhaps the most dramatic turn of events in higher education in the coming years as a change in the student population.

"We must begin now to make our programs compatible with the needs of older students," he said. "The salvation of higher education may very well rest on what we do for them."

Dr. Balogh added that Bowling Green's problem in the area of "non-traditional students" is unique because of its rural setting. "Our challenge here is what to do with the older rural person," he said, noting that the University may well have to become involved in transportation issues if it is to meet the needs of people in the surrounding communities.

Although major change is expected in higher education in the next 10 years, Dr. Balogh's years at Bowling Green have not been without change.

He was hired at the University for $3,000 a year, he said, strictly upon the recommendation of a niece of one of the school's deans who "knew my wife and reasoned I was OK if I was anything like her."

Although he has distinguished himself most recently in the field of health education, Dr. Balogh, a sociologist, also gained national recognition as a specialist in corrections, criminology, juvenile delinquency and mental health prior to his appointment as dean of the College of Health and Community Services. For eight years he chaired the sociology department.

As dean of the College of Health and Community services, he has seen enrollment increase from an initial 125 students in six programs to a current 1,300 in 14 areas of specialization.

A graduate of Pennsylvania State University, where he received a bachelor's degree, and the University of Pittsburgh, where he earned both his master's and doctoral degrees, Dr. Balogh was twice named to Who's Who in America.

He also has been included in such publications as the National Register of Prominent Americans and Who's Who in the World. In 1967 he served as president of the Ohio Academy of Science.

But Dr. Balogh, who called his years in higher education "a great and wonderful experience," said the numerous honors he has received mean little to him when compared to the satisfaction he has garnered from helping others.

"I've always been interested in working with and helping people—not just students, but people in trouble as well," he said. "In the penal institutions I was rubbing elbows with murderers."

"I've taught a lot of students who have done something noteworthy with their lives, and I like to believe I had a small part in their success. There is great satisfaction in producing something worthwhile."

Looking back

Trustees set faculty salaries at $1,700-$2,000

EDITOR'S NOTE: Following is a brief history of Bowling Green's first years as an institution of higher education. The article was prepared by Stuart Givens, history, designated University Historian by the Board of Trustees. A sequel to this report will be published in the next issue of Monitor.

Seventy years ago today, May 19, 1910, Ohio Gov. Judson Harmon signed the Lowry Bill which authorized "the creating and establishment of two additional state normal schools, one in northeastern Ohio and one in northwestern Ohio."

From this bill emerged Kent and Bowling Green state normal colleges. Bowling Green's first classes were held in the fall of 1914.

A comparison of the newly-created Bowling Green and that of today is dramatic. The campus of 1914 consisted of the 82½ acres which had comprised Bowling Green's city park.

Four buildings had been authorized—the Administration Building (University Hall), the Science Building (Moseley Hall), the Heating Plant (Centrex Building), and North Dormitory (Williams Hall)—but none were completed. During the first year, classes were held in the Bowling Green Armory, while chapel services and the library were in the Methodist church on the opposite corner.

Bowling Green in 1914 was geared for the training or upgrading of teachers. The first catalog stated that there was a four-year degree program in education. However, only two-year diploma programs and a one-year diploma program for rural teachers (one-room schools) were offered.

At the beginning of the first school year 304 full-time students, 58 of them men, attended classes. They came from 31 Ohio counties and two other states (one from Michigan and one from New York). Two-thirds of the students were from Wood and Lucas counties, and unlike today, none were from Cuyahoga County.

In addition to the on-campus students, the faculty taught twice as many students in extension classes. The first Summer School in 1915, meeting the need for area teachers to upgrade their certification, enrolled more than twice the number of student residents during the first year.

The student body was served by a faculty of 10, none of whom had a doctoral degree, and an additional four "critic teachers." Many of the administrative duties were performed by the president, Homer B. Williams.

The curriculum covered 13 subjects: agriculture, biological science, education, English, geography, history, home economics, industrial arts, library, mathematics, music, physical education and physical science. It is clear that the music teacher was not the only person who had to double in brass!

In 1914, Bowling Green was a town of slightly fewer than 6,000 people, with, as the catalog pointed out, "a climate...favorable to study, extremes of temperature being modified by the proximity to Lake Erie." The town was easily accessible by two north-south railroads and a north-south and an east-west electric inter-urban line.

The typical cost for a resident student for the 36-week academic year was listed in the first catalog as $203. Itemized it was: Tuition - free; Room - average of $1.25 weekly; Board - average of $3 a week; Books and Stationery - $20 for the year; Washing and Incidentals - $30 annually.

Faculty salaries were in keeping with the costs. The salaries came solely from state appropriations. The salary book adopted by the Board of Trustees in August, 1914 approved faculty salaries for the coming year and summer school (42 weeks) ranging from $1,700 to a high of $2,000. President Williams' contract called for $3,600 a year plus house rent and expenses. The four critic teachers were paid $1,000 for a 36-week contract.

During the first year of classes, some of the traditions of Bowling Green were initiated. A student-faculty committee proposed brown and orange as the school colors, stating that they were pleasing and not used by any other college. During the year, at the request of President Williams, industrial arts teacher Leon Winslow designed and produced the University Seal which, with minor alterations, has been used ever since.

On July 29, 1915, after one full academic year and a summer, the first graduation was held, concluding Bowling Green's first year as an institution. The ceremony was held in a downtown theater, with 35 graduates receiving diplomas. Of the 35, 32 were from Toledo, two from Perrysburg, and one from Sandusky.

The commencement address was given by nationally famous educational psychologist Charles Judd of the University of Chicago.

Panel to discuss impact of inflation

Everyone is bearing the brunt of raging double-digit inflation which is threatening to undermine the quality of American life.

In an attempt to explain what has caused the inflation and how serious its impact has been and will be, the Center for Research on Social Behavior will sponsor a symposium on "Inflation and the Quality of Life" from 2:30-4:30 p.m. Wednesday, May 21, in the McFall Center Assembly Room.

The effects of inflation on different groups of the American public, the basic causes of inflation and the Consumer Price Index will be the major topics discussed at the symposium.

Members of the panel who will address those topics are Leo Navin, economics; Robert Carlile, president of the Huntington Bank of Wood County; Donald McQuarie, sociology, and Roman Carek, director of the Counseling and Career Development Center.

A question and answer session will follow the presentations.

Faculty Senate

Richard J. Ward, management, was elected vice chair and chair-elect of the Faculty Senate at the May 6 Senate meeting.

Nancy Wygant, Counseling and Career Development Center, was elected Senate secretary.

Four new members were elected to the Senate Executive Committee: Harvey Donley, accounting and management information systems; Jeanette Danielson, English and humanities-Firelands; Lester Barber, English, and John Bentley, music performance studies.

Elected to the Academic Policies Committee were Emil Dansker, journalism, and Frances Povsic, library.

Karl Schurr, biological sciences, was elected to the Amendments and Bylaws Committee.

Elected to the Committee on Committees were Dr. Dansker; Wei Shih, applied statistics and operations research, and Sue Hager, health, physical education and recreation.

Elected to the Faculty Personnel and Conciliation Committee were Alice Heim Calderonello, English; Dr. Bentley and Audrey Rentz, college student personnel.

Roger Anderson, political science, and Dorothy Luedtke, health, physical education and recreation, were elected to the Faculty Welfare Committee.

Chosen to represent the Senate on Academic Council were Thomas Anderson, geography; Dr. Dansker and Adelia Peters, education.

David Hyslop, business education, will represent Bowling Green on the Ohio Faculty Senate and Susan Arpad, popular culture, will be the faculty representative to the President's Panel.

Symposium to honor Dr. Balogh

The College of Health and Community Services will recognize its retiring dean, Joseph K. Balogh, at an Honorary Symposium Thursday, May 22, in the McFall Center Gallery.

Three scholars who have gained national and international acclaim in their disciplines will speak at the event, scheduled to begin at 2 p.m. John Eriksen, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, will preside.

The speakers include Mildred M. Seltzer, professor of sociology and anthropology and assistant director of the Scripps Foundation Gerontology Center at Miami University. Dr. Seltzer also is director of education and training at Miami's Scripps Foundation. She will speak "Of Deans and Retirement."

Her address will be followed by a talk on "Society and the Profession of Help" to be given by Saad Nagi, Mershon professor of sociology and public policy and professor of rehabilitation medicine at Ohio State University.

The concluding remarks will be given by Basil S. Georgopoulos, a professor of psychology in the College of Literature, Science and the Arts and a research scientist in the Survey Research Center, Institute for Social Research, at the University of Michigan.

Dr. Georgopoulos will deliver "Some Thoughts on the Use of New Knowledge and Organizational Rationality in Health Care Institutions."

The speakers will be introduced by Patricia M. Shanahan, executive director of the Office of Geriatric Medicine-Gerontology Department at the Medical College of Ohio; Arthur G. Neal and Aida K. Tomeh, both sociology.

The symposium is open to the University community and the general public.

Alumni Association to host retiring faculty

Hanns Anders first joined the faculty in 1942 as an instructor of chemistry. He returned to the campus in 1957 as an instructor and in 1958 he received a National Science Foundation Faculty Fellowship to work on his doctorate at Ohio State University.

Dr. Anders, whose research specialties are analytical problems in industrial hygiene and air pollution, has directed numerous graduate theses at Bowling Green and has served on several departmental committees.

Fred Eckman, who joined the faculty in 1961, was instrumental in establishing a master of fine arts degree in creative writing with emphasis on fiction and poetry at Bowling Green.

Describing himself as a "poet who teaches," he has published numerous works, including complete books of his poetry which have earned him national recognition.

Martha Eckman, who currently coordinates the technical writing program in the department of English and is director of a graduate program in technical communications, joined the English department as an instructor.

From 1963-68 she was an administrative assistant to the provost.

She has served on numerous University committees and is presently a member of the executive committee of the American Association of University Professors.

Dr. Scott is director of the Center for Research on Social Behavior which he organized shortly after coming to Bowling Green in 1965.

He helped establish Bowling Green's doctoral program in psychology.

In 1968 Dr. Scott was designated an Ohio Regents Professor, a statewide appointment conferred upon select faculty.

He has served as president of three scientific societies—the International Society for Research on Aggression, which he founded; the International Society for Developmental Psychobiology and the Behavior Genetics Association.

His own research has concentrated on dogs and their social attachments, relationships which he has expanded to include human beings, especially adopted children.

Dr. Morton came to Bowling Green in 1969 as an instructor of English. She has published extensively on the subjects of Western American literature and the teaching of literature, particularly as it relates to drama.

In 1976 Dr. Morton was one of nine "Women of the Year" named by Bowling Green's chapter of Alpha Lambda Delta national women's scholastic honor society. She has served on numerous University committees.

Dr. Innis, who taught in a one-room rural school in Kalkaska County, Mich., before launching a military career and later a career in higher education, joined the faculty in 1959 as an assistant professor of industrial arts.

A retired lieutenant colonel in the United States Air Force, he organized and developed Bowling Green's new aerotechnology program in the School of Technology and is coordinator of aviation education activities in the School. He also has edited the School's newsletter the past 10 years.

Mrs. Skinner has served on numerous committees within the home economics department since joining the faculty in 1966 as an instructor.

She has been active in state and national home economics organizations and has supervised home economics student teaching and other professional field experiences during her years at Bowling Green.

From 1977-79 she was acting director of home economics education in the School.

Mrs. Gilmore came to the University in 1962 as a secretary. She was appointed assistant to the dean in the College of Arts and Sciences in 1969, and in 1975 she was named to her present position as budget accountant.

The Alumni Association will honor the 15 retiring faculty and staff at a 5:30 p.m. banquet Thursday, May 29, at the Alumni Center.

The banquet has been planned by the group of retiring faculty and staff which was organized in the fall of 1977 and now includes approximately 135 members.

Grants

Alvar W. Carlson, geography, $14,500 from the National Science Foundation to research the impact of the Homestead Acts on the development of the Spanish-American culture region in New Mexico's Rio Arriba.

Dr. Carlson has earned a national reputation for his research on the ecological aspects of Spanish-American settlement in the Rio Grand Valley of New Mexico and Colorado.

He is the editor of the "Journal of Cultural Geography."

Stephen A. Gregory, physics, $1,370 from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to fund travel expenses to NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center where he will use the facilities there to observe Type 1 Seyfert Galaxies.

Arjun K. Gupta, mathematics and statistics, $15,600 from the National Science Foundation to fund a regional conference which will examine the "Jackknife and Bootstrap" methods of estimating bias and variance.

Bradley Efron, Stanford University, will be the principal guest lecturer.

Dr. Mandell updates advertising expertise

Maurice Mandell, marketing, has concluded a seven-month leave of absence which took him to New York, Bloomington, Ind., Detroit, and Europe.

While on leave, Dr. Mandell studied the operation of N.W. Ayer ABH International Advertising Agency in New York and visited advertising agencies in London, Paris and Madrid.

In addition, Dr. Mandell attended by special invitation the Northwestern University-Marsteller Communications Symposium in Sterling Forest, Tuxedo, N.Y., and taught as a visiting professor of marketing at Indiana University during the fall semester.

While in Indiana, he presented a seminar for General Telephone, Indianapolis, and chaired a session of the Conference of the Central Region of the American Association of Advertising Agencies in Detroit. Dr. Mandell is the current education chairman of that group.

On Feb. 1, he presented a paper to the Irish Marketing Society in Dublin. In March he attended the annual meeting of the American Academy of Advertising at Columbia, Mo.

WICI to recognize communication efforts

The University chapter of Women in Communications, Inc., is now accepting nominations for its annual awards program which recognizes outstanding seniors, faculty and staff in mass communications and those who have made significant contributions to the advancement of women on campus.

Awards will be given in each of three categories, with winners to be announced May 29.

The Outstanding Senior Award will be given to one or more students on the basis of campus communications activities, professional experience, scholarship and service.

Nominees for the Outstanding Faculty-Staff Award will be judged on the basis of professional excellence in teaching or on-the-job performance and concern for and work with students.

The third category, for the Advancement of Women Award, will recognize a student, faculty or staff member who has made significant efforts to better the status of women on campus.

Nominations for awards should include the nominator's name and reasons why the nominee deserves recognition. The nominations should be submitted no later than Friday, May 23, to Tammy Kinzer, 413 South Hall.

Harry W. Hoemann, psychology, $63,636 from the Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare and the Ohio Public Health Service to continue his study of the development of communication skills in children born profoundly deaf and to compare their performances with hearing children using spoken English.

William B. Jackson, environmental studies, $15,400 from the Office of International Cooperation and Development, U.S. Dept. of Agriculture, to fund three years of training for international student Danilo Sanchez in vertebrate pest management.

Dr. Jackson received an identical grant to fund training for Romeo C. Dizon, who also will study vertebrate pest management.

He also received $10,000 from ICI Americas, Inc., to evaluate rodenticides for the firm.

Publications

Theodore Berland, journalism, "How to Go the Distance," in "Crossroads" magazine, official publication of the Montgomery Ward Auto Club, premier issue, May/June, 1980.

Leslie J. Chamberlin, education administration and supervision, "Motivating Today's Child: A Job for Positive Thinkers," in "ISBA," the Indiana School Boards Association Journal, March/April, 1980.

Herbert Greenberg, speech communication, "Speech Intelligibility in Stapedectomized Individuals," in the "American Journal of Otolaryngology." The article was co-authored by Dan Chadwell.

Dr. Greenberg also participated in a workshop in "Auditory Brainstem Response Recording" at Ohio State University April 17-18.

David J. Hyslop, business education, "Physical Environment in the Office," a chapter in the 1980 National Education Association Yearbook.

BETTY NEIDECKER

Betty Neidecker, speech communication, "School Programs in Speech-Language: Organization and Management," published in March by Prentice-Hall.

The book is a text geared for use at both graduate and undergraduate levels by prospective school speech-language pathologists. It also was written for practitioners in the field and explains the relationship between school programs and new federal mandates regarding education for handicapped children.

The text will be used at Bowling Green as well as at other universities throughout the country.

Janis L. Pallister, romance languages, "Leopold-Sedar Senghor, a Catholic Sensibility?," an article in the April, 1980 issue of "French Review." Senghor is a leading African poet and the president of Senegal.

Carol J. Pierman, English, "The Naturalized Citizen," a collection of poems to be published by New Rivers Press.

Janet Sullivan, education, "Teacher Education Redesign, A Clinical Laboratory and Media - A Working Partnership," in the February, 1980 issue of "Ohio Media Spectrum."

Presentations

Deanna Radeloff, home economics, spoke on "What's Going On In Campus Child Care Centers - An Overview" at the April 11 meeting of the National Council on Campus Child Care at Ohio State University.

Karl Schurr, biological sciences, spoke on "Effect of Asbestos Fibers on Filter Feeding Crustacea" at the 89th annual meeting of the Ohio Academy of Science April 18-20 at the University of Toledo and Medical College of Ohio.

Dr. Schurr's paper was presented as part of the zoology section of the meeting.

Isaac Sequeira, ACLS Fellow in the popular culture department and a professor of English at Osmania University in India, participated in a panel discussion on "International Popular Culture: Problems and Prospects" at the national convention of the Popular Culture Association April 16-19 in Detroit.

Mohan N. Shrestha, geography, presented a paper on "Rural to Rural Migration in Nepal" at a meeting April 25 of the Rural Development Seminar at Bauer Manor in Michigan.

Dr. Shrestha recently returned to Bowling Green after a six-month research leave in Nepal which was funded by a Ford-Rockefeller Foundation grant.

William C. Spragens, political science, participated in a panel discussion on U.S. foreign policy and presidential image-making at the annual Student Symposium of the Center for the Study of the Presidency in Washington, D.C., April 11-13.

Dion Stewart, geology, spoke on "The Role of Amphibole in Controlling the Composition of Erupted Lavas" as a guest lecturer in the University of Toledo geology department April 16.

Duane E. Whitmire, registration and records, spoke on "Admissions - A Changing Profession in Changing Times: Implications for the 1980s" at the 66th annual meeting of the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers April 21-24 in New Orleans.

Session leaders during the two-day annual conference of the Ohio Association for the Education of Young Children April 11-12 in Toledo included Doris Williams, home economics, "Teaching Infants and Toddlers;" Alex Johnson, special education, "Meeting the Needs of Young Handicapped Children Through Developmental Integration;" Elizabeth Ytell, home economics, "Preparing Inservice Training of the Child Development Center Staff;" Deanna Radeloff, home economics, "Early Childhood Teacher Certification;" Charlene Beach, home economics, "Teacher, Where Do Babies Come From?"

Also speaking at the conference were Mary Amos, library and educational media, "Storytelling to Children;" Sally Kilmer, home economics, "The Effects of Infant-Toddler Day Care: An Update on the Research and Implications for Practices;" Donald Scherer, philosophy, and Karin Sandell, speech communication, "The Impact of TV on Children's Values."

Elizabeth Stimson, education curriculum and instruction, chaired the conference committee.

Recognitions

Leslie J. Chamberlin, education administration and supervision, received the Phi Delta Kappa Research Award for 1979-80 April 25 at the Riverby Country Club in Bowling Green. Phi Delta Kappa is the professional fraternity in the field of education.

Ernest A. Champion, ethnic studies, and Frances Povsic, library, served as consultants to the Ethnic Heritage Office of the Office of Education April 20-25 in Washington, D.C.

They were members of a panel which reviewed applications for grants totaling $3 million.

Robert W. Innis, School of Technology, has been named a laureate member of the Bowling Green chapter of Epsilon Pi Tau, international honorary for education in technology.

Benjamin Muego, political science, has been invited to participate in a seminar on the Philippines being conducted by the Congressional Research Service of the Library of Congress on May 23.

The purpose of the seminar is to provide a forum through which members of Congress and the congressional staff can obtain first-hand perspectives on internal trends in the Philippines.

A book by David C. Roller and Robert W. Twyman, history, "The Encyclopedia of Southern History," has been named the winner of the Museum of the Confederacy's "Founders Award" for the best edited work of 1979 in the field of Confederate history. The award will be presented at the Museum's annual reception June 3, in Richmond, Va.

Graduate speech programs earn national 'seal of approval'

Quality faculty, curriculum and clinical experiences were cited by the Education and Training Board of the American Boards of Examiners in Speech Pathology when it issued accreditation to the University's master's programs in speech pathology and audiology.

Word of the accreditation was received by the University as spring quarter got underway, according to Melvin Hyman, speech communication, who said, "We knew we had a good program. Now we have the seal of approval from an objective, external accrediting agency which says that we have met certain high standards in the number and type of courses we offer, the quality of those courses and the quality of our faculty."

Bowling Green is now one of only seven schools in Ohio with both speech pathology and audiology programs approved by the national accrediting body.

Supervised clinical experiences for students in the University's Speech and Hearing Clinic, at hospitals, nursing homes and community centers in the area also were central to the accrediting body's decision to approve both programs, Dr. Hyman said.

The accreditation review team visited the campus in November to talk with faculty, students and program, college and University administrators. Although Bowling Green offers both graduate and undergraduate programs in speech pathology and audiology, the accrediting board approves only master's programs.

The University currently has 44 master's candidates enrolled in the two programs, 10 doctoral students and 250 undergraduates. There are 11 full-time and one part-time faculty in the two programs.

Dr. Hyman said accreditation will lead to increased visibility and credibility for Bowling Green's programs. Accredited schools are listed in numerous professional publications which are circulated to thousands of people, including prospective students, he said.

Dr. Hyman added that job opportunities are numerous for students with graduate-level training in either speech pathology or audiology. Bowling Green's graduates find positions in schools, hospitals, community clinics, nursing homes, universities and in physicians' offices.

Graduates with a bachelor's degree are restricted to employment in the public schools, he said, but in Ohio alone there are more than 1,200 positions for speech and hearing personnel.

The growth of the profession can be attributed largely to its emphasis on educating the public, according to Dr. Hyman, who said that people who once thought they were destined to live with speech and hearing problems now know otherwise and seek help.

Accreditation of Bowling Green's professional programs, which took effect March 1, will continue through March 1, 1985. In the interim, Dr. Hyman said he must submit annual reports to the examining board attesting to the continued excellence of the programs and improvement of minor faults.

News Review

Publications board begins search for new director

James R. Gordon, journalism, has been elected chair of the University Board of Student Publications, a new committee appointed by President Moore.

The board's first priority will be to hire a director of student publications, a new position which was recommended by the Student Publications Ad Hoc Study Committee commissioned by Dr. Moore last fall.

The ad hoc committee also recommended that the former University Publications Committee be replaced by the student publications board.

The board has set July 1 as the deadline for applications to be received for the director's position and has targeted Aug. 15 as the date for selection of a director, who would begin duties Sept. 15.

Named to a screening committee which will review all applications and make recommendations to the full board were David Miller, editor of The Daily Sentinel-Tribune, chair; Kathy Lewton, director of public relations for Flower Hospital; Gordon and two graduate students, John Thrash and Ray Wells.

Members of the new board include Lester Barber, English; Sheila Wineman, education curriculum and instruction; Daniel Kuna, special education; Ellen Williams, special education; Richard Edwards, vice president; Gordon; Suzanne Oster, Jane Mosconi, Edward Seuc, Thrash and Wells, all students.

Leland Miller to chair computer science dept.

Leland R. Miller, computer science, has been appointed to a four-year term as chair of the computer science department, effective fall quarter 1980. Announcement of the appointment was made by John G. Eriksen, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences.

An associate professor of computer science, Dr. Miller joined the faculty in 1971.

Donahue, Bartlett to be honored at commencement

Emmy Award-winning talk show host Phil Donahue will receive an honorary doctor of humanities degree and deliver commencement remarks to an estimated 2,100 graduates at spring commencement ceremonies June 14.

At the same time, the man responsible for national syndication of his top-rated television program will receive the Distinguished Alumnus Award.

Walter Bartlett, Cincinnati, a 1949 Bowling Green graduate, will be presented the Alumni Association's highest award.

A native of Marion, Bartlett is president of Multimedia Broadcasting Co., Multimedia Radio and Multimedia Program Productions, Inc. He also is vice president-broadcasting of the parent company Multimedia, Inc.

Donahue has won Emmy Awards in three consecutive years for being the "Outstanding Host of a Television Talk, Service or Variety Series." His ability to develop hard-hitting programs that inform as well as entertain has earned him a reputation as one of television's top interviewers.

President Moore will preside over the commencement ceremonies, which will begin at 10 a.m. at Doyt L. Perry Field, weather permitting.

In the event of inclement weather, two commencement ceremonies will be held in Memorial Hall.

Five juniors named Reams Fellows for 1980-81

Five Bowling Green juniors have received Frazier Reams Public Affairs Fellowships for use during their coming senior year.

Presented annually, the $1,000 fellowships are awarded to rising seniors who are majoring in the public service areas of journalism, broadcasting, political science and health and community services.

This year's fellows are Paula M. Winslow, a journalism major from North Olmsted; Carl H. Unterweiser, a political science and environmental studies major from Chagrin Falls; Kari Whitenberger, a liberal studies student in the College of Arts and Sciences from Uniontown; Jane DeChant, a communications major from Lorain, and Diane Steinman, a health care administration major from Kenton.

The scholarships were established in 1973 in memory of the late Frazier Reams Sr., a Toledo atorney, broadcasting executive, civic leader and Congressman who served on the Board of Trustees from 1950-57. He received an honorary doctor of law degree from the University in 1959.

Recipients of the awards were selected by a committee of Bowling Green faculty and administrators and a representative of the Reams' family.

Summer hours to begin June 16; end Aug. 29

A four and a-half-day, 40-hour work week will go into effect beginning June 16.

The special summer hours, which have been observed since 1975, will continue through Aug. 29.

Official hours during the summer months will be 7:30 a.m. to noon and 12:30-5 p.m. Monday through Thursday, and 7:30-11:30 a.m. Friday.

With the exception of research laboratories and special summer programs, all ventilating and air conditioning systems will operate only during those hours.

Forensic team finishes third at national event

Bowling Green's 12-member forensics team earned a third place finish in the 10th annual National Forensic Association's Individual Events Championship April 24-28 at the University of Montevallo in Birmingham, Ala.

The team competed against more than 1,000 students from 134 colleges and universities and earned a "top-10" finish for the fourth consecutive year.

Two Bowling Green students made their way to the semi-final round, and three others were quarter-finalists.

Raymond Yeager, speech communication, is director of the forensic program and coach of the individual events team.

High school juniors win scholarship awards

Margaret Miller, a Bowling Green High School junior, was awarded a four-year, full-fees scholarship to the University by President Moore at the Outstanding High School Junior Awards program May 5.

She was selected for the top honor from a group of outstanding high school juniors representing 114 northwest Ohio high schools.

Brian LaBine, a junior at St. John's High School in Toledo, was awarded a four-year, half-fees scholarship.

The program to honor outstanding high school juniors was begun at Bowling Green six years ago and is sponsored by the Undergraduate Alumni Association.

Miniature books displayed in Library's Rare Books Room

Librarian has big interest in collecting small books

Evron Collins, head of the circulation department at the University Library, always judges a book by its cover. In fact, according to Collins, the smaller the cover, the more attractive and valuable the book.

Collins has been collecting miniature books of all kinds for more than 20 years. Her present collection of 938 miniatures features Bibles, dictionaries, juvenile and poetry books and several presidential inaugural addresses, as well as books written in at least eight foreign languages, including Hungarian and Japanese. The collection is now on display in the Library's Rare Books Room.

Collins said she purchases the books, many of which are now valued at almost $100, from publishers and book dealers and at flea markets and garage sales. The smallest item in her collection, measuring only one-quarter square inch, is a book which contains the word "book" in 10 different languages.

"I've always been interested in books and also in small collectible items," she said. "I was fascinated by the miniature books which have provided me with a very interesting hobby." She displays her collection in small curio cases and spice racks in her home.

One of the oldest books in the collection is an original 1868 New Testament Bible. She also has two books which are actual reproductions of a Sears and Roebuck Co. catalog and a telephone book with yellow pages, both especially designed for use in miniature doll houses.

In addition, the collection includes such unusual miniatures as a book bound in a genuine dollar bill, one that teaches "pig latin" grammar and one that consists entirely of European toilet paper samples.

The tiny books will be on display until the end of the quarter in the Library's Rare Books Room. Hours are 1-5 p.m. Monday through Thursday.
