New optimism

Pending legislation holds promise for Bowling Green

Bowling Green continues to ride a budgetary rollercoaster controlled by state legislators who last week took some promising steps to ease both the state's and University's fiscal woes.

Dr. Richard Eakin, executive vice provost for planning and budgeting, will give a detailed report on the University's financial condition at the next meeting of the Faculty Senate (April 20).

At that meeting he will outline the series of state reductions in subsidies during 1981-82, including the state's pullback of $2.5 million of the calls for increased taxes combined with the possibility of additional subsidy cuts. That bill passed the Senate late last week.

Current budgetary planning and spending restrictions would enable the University to offer additional cuts of up to three percent, Eakin said.

He added that Bowling Green, like the state, would have no opportunity to increase its budget before June 30 unless the state legislature acts quickly on a tax package such as S.B. 230 to ease Ohio's financial crisis. He said he believes state agencies will be exempted by some act of legislation from their legal responsibility to end this fiscal year in the black if a tax package is not forthcoming.

Although at MONITOR's press time Bowling Green still had not received word of the exact amount of the budget cuts anticipated next state cut, a $1 million estimate has been given by the chairman of the Ohio Board of Regents. Eakin said the University is operating under the assumption that it will receive total cuts of about seven percent (or $2.4 million) in the $34.4 million state appropriation provided in Amended Substitute House Bill 894 passed by the legislature late November.

It is anticipated that these subsidy losses will all be made up through the operating budget cuts and spending restrictions ordered by Interim President Ferrari in January.

Olscamp to visit campus this week

Dr. Paul J. Olscamp will this week make his first visit to campus since being named March 15 to be the University's eighth president.

Olscamp, who is planning several visits to campus before leaving the Western Washington University presidency later this summer, will be meeting with various groups as he begins the process of fully acquainting himself with Bowling Green.

He will be on campus Wednesday through Friday. WBGU-TV (Channel 57) will broadcast a Wednesday "meet the press" session with Olscamp at 11:30 p.m. April 7.

During the program Olscamp will give brief remarks and answer questions from representatives of the area media.

An open letter to the faculty and staff

Dear Faculty and Staff:

My wife and I wish to express deep appreciation to faculty, staff, students, alumni and friends of the University for the many letters and phone calls we have received in recent days. We are gratified by the messages of support and affection.

During the next few months, I plan on assisting Dr. Paul Olscamp in bringing about an effective transition. It is my firm belief that the University is in a sound condition, academically and financially, and the period ahead can be one of far greater distinction, even in the face of today's financial constraints and uncertainties. I am confident that you will extend to Dr. Olscamp your views and cooperation in meeting the immediate challenges and long-run opportunities of the University in ways that continue to promote its academic reputation and vitality.

With warm regards,

Michael R. Ferrari

An exhibit of sculpture by T.P. Curtis of St. Louis is now on display in the McFall Center Gallery. Concerned with expressing the contrasts between the older ways of the past and the technological age in which we live, Curtis creates sculptures which illustrate how utilitarian farm implements from the past have become playthings in the computer age. The McFall exhibit includes sculptures as simple as a sled made of logs and as abstract as objects recognizable only to the sculptor.

Outdoor fit trail to open April 15

An official ribbon-cutting ceremony for the new 1.75 miles Fitness Trail at the eastern edge of campus is scheduled for 10 a.m., Monday, April 15.

The trail, which follows existing campus streets, features 18 exercise stations with such equipment as vault bars and exercise bikes, to develop strength, flexibility and muscle endurance. The course combines running, jogging and weight training.

The self-paced trail, open to students, faculty, staff and the Bowling Green community, has three fitness levels: beginner, intermediate and advanced. Signs at each of the 18 stations direct trail users to the exercise according to each fitness level.

The cost of the trail was approximately $10,000, raised through private gifts from faculty, staff and local residents. The labor to install the trail was supplied at no cost by the Civilian Conservation Corps based at the Rec Center.

Following the April 15 dedication, refreshments will be served in the Hooley Conference Room of the Student Recreation Center.

Nancy Condit, a senior graphic design major, is like most people—she enjoys seeing the results of her work. However, Condit doesn't have billboards or newspaper ads to carry her design for Crimestoppers, a Wood County law enforcement agency effort to gain public support for solving crimes, mark the main entrances to the city of Bowling Green. Condit was chosen for the design by George Postich, vice president for operations, who is a member of the Crimestoppers board of directors. Thomas Daun, art, recommended Condit for the task.

Art historian details drawing of the West

Paintings of the American West by 19th-century artists will be the subject of a new book by a University art historian.

"How the West Was Drawn" is American Art and the Settling of the Frontier. The book, her first, is based on research conducted for her doctoral-dissertation and deals with American paintings from the mid-19th century: fur trappers, wild animals, pioneers and Daniel Boone.

History professor to write book on Menninger Clinic

Dr. Richard M. Gargiulo, special education, left Bowling Green State University to participate in the College of Education's Doctoral Internship program for spring quarter.

Initiated by Dr. Sandra Packard, dean, in January, the program provides College of Education faculty with the opportunity to observe and participate in the administrative and operational aspects of internships.

Interns spend six to eight hours each week working with the dean or attending professional meetings to observe and learn the ins and outs of program operation or release time granted for the internship.

Gargiulo, a member of the faculty since 1974, is assistant director of special education in the special education department.

During winter quarter, the internship was held by Dr. Edward Fiscus, special education.

reflected Herrmann's lifestyle and interests, and each program would also point out the needs and concerns of the handicapped.

The series includes clinics for physical educators working with the handicapped, appearances by ballet dancers, presentations by those associated with exceptional programs for the handicapped, and discussion on other topics.

In the first event in the series will be held during the 1982-83 academic year.
Blood pressure screening set
Blue Cross of Northwest Ohio will conduct a blood pressure screening program for all University employees April 21-22. The program is being sponsored by the Faculty Welfare Committee and Personnel Support Services.

The screening will consist of distribution of institutional literature, measurement of blood pressure and consultation with a registered nurse. The procedure is estimated to take five to six minutes. Personal identification will be kept confidential. Only statistics on total participation and overall results will be released.

Nurses will also distribute test kit products (check for high blood pressure), the only early warning sign of colon-rectal cancer. The free do-it-yourself test is simple and can be conducted at home.

A follow-up blood pressure screening will be conducted on Tuesday and Wednesday of each week of the month.

Religious holiday procedure defined
The Office of Personnel Support Services has issued a reminder that religious holidays other than Christmas are not included in the 10 holidays provided for state agencies in the state of Ohio.

In an effort to make reasonable accommodation for employees of religious observances and practices, however, an employee may take off for brief periods to attend recognized religious events that occur during normal work hours.

Leave of up to two hours will be granted with pay. If additional time is required, an employee may elect to use vacation time or request leave without pay.

Classified staff wishing off with pay to attend a religious service should complete the form "Leave Request-Religious Purposes" which is available in the personnel office. The form must be completed by the employee, signed and approved by the supervisor and sent to personnel for record keeping.

Arrangements for attending special services should be made at least two days in advance.

Supervisors are encouraged by the personnel office to make reasonable efforts to accommodate employees' wishes to attend special religious services. For further information, review Personnel Procedure Memorandum No. 11, Section VI.

Board of Trustees to meet Friday
The Board of Trustees will meet Friday, April 9 at 9:30 a.m. in the McFarland Center Assembly Room.

The confirmation of Dr. Paul J. O'isacc as the University's sixth president is the only scheduled item on the agenda for the meeting which has been moved from its originally scheduled 10 a.m. starting time.

Seminar planned on tax shelters
A forum on the benefits of tax-sheltered annuities and individual Retirement Accounts has been scheduled by the Faculty Welfare Committee. Three sessions have been scheduled.

The seminar will be held at 2:30 p.m., Thursday, April 8 in the College of Business Administration, Suite 2-42.
