First annual award

'Master Teacher' demands excellence from self, students

Dr. Raymond Tucker, speech communication, refuses to rely on "gimmicks" when he teaches. He depends upon his own energy and abilities when he faces a classroom full of students and he's at his peak, he says, when the classroom is large and all the seats are filled.

Tucker was named the first recipient of what will be an annual Master Teacher Award at the Outstanding High School Juniors Banquet May 3. Sponsored by the Alumni Association, the award honoring teaching excellence includes a cash prize of $1,000, a letter of commendation and an engraved plaque which will be permanently displayed in the Mileti Alumni Center.

"I have experimented with every teaching device that's come out on the market, and for the most part they have all gotten in my way," Tucker said of his teaching style. "My philosophy is to get the students to watch and listen to me. Anything else tends to be less than effective."

He tries to capture and hold his students' attention simply by treating them all as human beings.

"My goal as an educator and as a person is to help others, particularly my students, survive life," he said. "I want to change their lives—dramatically if possible. I tell all my students from the start that if they cooperate with me, I will change their lives."

Because his teaching specialty is interpersonal communication—particularly assertiveness, Tucker believes he is in a prime position to effect those changes. "There's nothing more important to survival than effective communication," he said. "The lack of communication is at the heart of most of life's problems."

Assertive himself in the classroom, Tucker said he strives for "high impact" by keeping his lectures fresh. "I drive the material right at them with all the energy at my command," he said. Because he does not use a structured syllabus in his teaching he noted, "The students never know what they will hear from me. They know what to read to prepare for class, but my lectures include only the newest ideas—things that may have broken in the field just yesterday."

He admits that his style of teaching is not easy. It requires dedication and constant professional reading.

Tucker thinks it is "luck" that has enabled him to maintain a high level of energy and enthusiasm in the classroom. However, he admits that good response from the students helps, and he believes Bowling Green has students that are as good as, or better than, those at any other school in the nation. "I don't have many discipline problems," he said. "The few that I do have are resolved very quickly through direct confrontation. I tell my students to do things my way or leave the class—very few have left."

What Tucker has found, he said, is that students want and respect some kind of order in their lives and that they appreciate knowing just where they stand.

Tucker also views it as "just lucky" that he has been able to both teach and research in an effective manner. His research interests are in the areas of scientific and research methods, multivariate data analysis, human and non-verbal communication and social skills. His first book, "Research in Speech Communication," co-authored with Dr. Richard L. Weaver, speech communication, and Dr. Cynthia Berryman-Fink of the University of Cincinnati, was published last year.

But despite the fact that he spends much time researching himself and teaching others how to carry out meaningful research, Tucker believes that teaching should be the first priority of university professors.

"Professors are hired, essentially, to teach," he said. "If your primary goal is to make a name for yourself as a researcher, you'll be unhappy as a professor. I know many outstanding professors who have never published, nor do they intend to. They become outstanding because they stay up-to-date with what is going on in their field and because they have a positive attitude about their teaching. They read; they attend conferences and conventions; they care about their students."

Tucker added, "If an individual can teach and contribute meaningful research at the same time, that is to be admired. But if that isn't possible, the effort should be concentrated on teaching."

A former director of training with

United States Steel Corporation, Tucker gave up what he termed "a highly rewarding and high paying position" with that firm to pursue a teaching career. Of that decision he says, "It was the best I ever made. Nothing has made me happier. I do not think there could be a more rewarding profession."

A graduate of the University of Denver, Tucker received both master's and doctoral degrees from Northwestern University and pursued post-doctoral study at Harvard University. His first teaching assignment in 1958 was as an assistant professor of speech at Purdue University. He later joined the faculty of Western Illinois University before coming to Bowling Green in 1968. In his 24 years in the classroom, he said he has missed no more than 10 class meetings, noting that a good teacher cannot afford to be absent.

In addition to teaching, Tucker views advising as an important faculty responsibility. He keeps regular office hours, usually in the afternoon "because that's when the students want to see you." He currently advises more than 60 undergraduate and graduate students and sees many others on an informal basis.

Tucker was selected to receive the Master Teacher Award by a committee of alumni and undergraduate students. He was one of 32 faculty nominated for the award by the student body.

Student nominations were solicited by the Undergraduate Alumni

Association in January through the BG News, with the qualifications that nominees possess comprehensive knowledge of their field; stimulate thinking and develop understanding; organize and present subject matter effectively; arouse students' interest; demonstrate resourcefulness and assist students with their problems.

Based upon written responses from the 32 nominees, the selection committee narrowed the field to 13 semi-finalists who were visited in the classroom by teams of committee members. Tucker was selected from a field of five finalists, including Dr. Lee Meserve, biological sciences; Dr. Steven Ludd, political science; Dr. Stephen Hood, speech communication, and Dr. Joseph Buford, geography.

Larry Weiss, director of alumni activities, said the idea for an award to recognize classroom excellence was generated by the Alumni Association's Board of Trustees.

"As an Alumni Association we felt a real need to let the faculty, administration, students and the general public know that one of our highest priorities is to encourage superior teaching and provide some incentive for that kind of excellence," Weiss said. The Undergraduate Alumni Association built upon that suggestion in organizing and conducting the selection process for the Master Teacher Award. Sara Ringle, a senior public relations major, chaired the selection committee.

Dr. Raymond Tucker, speech communication, is the first recipient of the Master Teacher Award, presented at the Outstanding High School Juniors Banquet on May 3. Sponsored by the University Alumni Association, the award, which includes a $1,000 cash prize, is an effort by the alumni to recognize and encourage outstanding teaching on campus. Tucker was cited for both his enthusiasm in the classroom and his concern for advising students in both academic and non-academic areas.

Faculty Senate

Faculty Senate approved four recommendations for salaries and fringe benefits for the 1982-83 academic year at a meeting May 4.

The recommendations call for a minimum 9.4 percent increment in the salary pool, 80 percent of which would be distributed across the board to all faculty and contract staff and 20 percent of which would be designated for merit according to departmental evaluative systems. The 9.4 percent figure is regarded as a minimum to return faculty salaries to an acceptable level by AAUP standards.

The recommendations to be forwarded to the administration also call for changes in the dollar amounts awarded for merit in the promotion process, raising the salary increase for promotion from instructor to assistant professor from $550 to $600; from assistant to associate professor from $825 to $900, and from associate to full professor from $1,100 to $1,200. The salary schedule for promotions has not been revised since 1979.

A third recommendation of the senate requests the University to pay the premium for dental and optical coverage for individual faculty and contract staff, with optional family coverage to be made available and the additional premiums to be paid by the policy holder. The estimated cost of dental and optical coverage per person was cited at $6.39 per month.

The final salary recommendation urges the University to "take all possible steps" to pay the faculty member's portion of contributions to the State Teachers Retirement System.

It was noted that some state-assisted universities already pay the full STRS contribution for faculty, despite questions surrounding the legality of such action. Currently the University makes a 13.5 percent contribution to STRS for each faculty, with faculty contributing an additional 8.5 percent on their own behalf.

In effect, if the University were to pay the entire 22 percent, each individual's taxable income would be reduced by 8.5 percent, deferring income tax on the STRS payment until retirement, when an individual presumably will be in a lower tax bracket.

The recommendation stipulates, however, that contracts continue to reflect the amount paid to STRS; that the dollar amount of the 8.5 percent STRS contribution be added to the employee's base pay in determining subsequent pay increases, and that amounts contributed to STRS on behalf of the employee be included in final average salary when determining retirement benefits.

Senate also conducted elections for 1982-83, choosing Dr. Betty van der Smissen, health, physical education and recreation, as vice chair and chair-elect. Dr. Ronald Stoner, physics and astronomy, current vice chair, will become the senate chair next fall, and Dr. Ralph Wolfe, English, will serve a second term as senate secretary.

Dr. Richard Ward, current chair, announced a timetable for completion of consideration of a financial exigency plan for Bowling Green. He said the Senate Executive Committee's final draft is to be presented to Dr. Paul Olscamp, president-designate, at a special meeting May 13. An on-call meeting of the senate will be held May 18 when the plan will be explained, and on May 25 a general meeting of the faculty will be held to discuss the proposed plan. Senate action is tentatively scheduled on June 1.

A letter to the Board of Trustees from the faculty of the philosophy department regarding the tenure of Olscamp also was considered by senate. The letter, which reports that the tenure committee of the department has voted unanimously to recommend Olscamp for tenure in the philosophy department, takes issue, however, with the manner in which the matter of Olscamp's tenure was handled by the trustees.

The letter notes, "The department contends . . . that the failure (of the board) to follow the (Academic) Charter in this case is not a trivial or 'bureaucratic' matter. The University's policies concerning tenure are based upon a well established and justified tradition. It has long been recognized that a determination of the competence of a member of the faculty must include a judgment by his or her peers. In guaranteeing Dr. Olscamp tenure in philosophy (without prior consultation with the philosophy department), the board presumed that it was qualified to make a judgment as to Dr. Olscamp's competence to teach and conduct research in philosophy at this University."

Senate endorsed the intent of the letter, which is to be presented to the board.

In other business, senate paused for a brief moment of memorial tribute to Dr. Delmer Hilyard, speech communication, who died April 21.

Acting Provost Eriksen discussed briefly the status of budget planning, noting that Olscamp is expected to make an announcement on contract and salary schedules within the next few weeks. He said planning has been delayed considerably by the legislature's failure to act upon a tax package which would bail out the state's ailing economy but added that summer contracts are to be issued May 14.

Eriksen discussed recent action by Academic Council calling for an increase in student instructional fees if state appropriations are not adequate to fund institutional priorities. He said the administration should have a better picture of fall enrollment within the next few weeks, but noted that most state institutions have early indications that the number of high school seniors committing themselves to fall enrollment is down.

Eriksen also pointed out that the University is continuing its plans to update its registration processes despite the uncertain financial picture.

French Week includes house rededication

The rededication of the Maison Francaise (French House) will highlight activities during French Week, scheduled May 17-22 on campus.

Officially dedicated by the French ambassador to the United States on Oct. 4, 1971, the French House will be rededicated at 2:30 p.m. Friday, May 21, at a ceremony which will recapture the spirit of the original event more than 10 years ago.

Jacques Royet, general consul of the French consulate in Detroit, is expected to participate in the ceremony which will also be attended by University officials and members of the French House advisory board.

Made possible through a $50,000 gift to the University from Dr. Paul D. Wurzbarger, honorary consul of France at Cleveland, the French House serves as a residence hall for women students who have an active interest in the French language and culture.

French Week will begin with a cooking demonstration by Dr. Lenita Locey, romance languages, at 8 p.m. Monday, May 17, in the French House.

Events on Tuesday will include a crepes sale on the French House terrace from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m., sponsored by the Alliance Francaise of Toledo. Dr. Janis L. Pallister, romance languages, will lecture on the French surgeon and naturalist Ambroise Pare at 7:30 p.m. in the West Hall recital hall.

Another lecture on "The French City" is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in West Hall. Dr. Anna Miller, visiting assistant professor of romance languages, will give the presentation.

A French sidewalk cafe-pastry sale will be held Thursday from 11:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. on the French House terrace. At 7 p.m. the film "Perceval" will be shown in 112 Life Science Building.

The week will end with a reception for first-year alumnae of the French House and a buffet-dinner dance at 6 p.m.

Poets to speak on starting press

An English department colloquium on "Starting A Small Press in the 1980s" featuring two widely published poets has been scheduled on campus Thursday (May 13).

Felice Newman and Frederique Delacoste will lead the presentation, scheduled to begin at 3:30 p.m. in the Joe E. Brown Theater, University Hall.

Newman, a graduate of the University, and Delacoste, editor of "CAMEOS: 12 Small Press Women Poets," will discuss the founding of the CLEIS Press in Minneapolis in 1981, presenting the history of alternative publishing both in the context of the small press movement and the feminist movement.

Search begins for interim VP

A six-member committee chaired by Dr. Ronald Stoner, physics and astronomy, has begun the search for an interim vice president for academic affairs to be appointed by Dr. Paul J. Olscamp as a successor to Dr. John Eriksen, acting provost.

The committee, appointed by Dr. Richard Ward, chair of the Faculty Senate, at Olscamp's request, includes three persons elected by the Senate Executive Committee and three persons similarly chosen by the Academic Council. In addition to Stoner, the members are Dr. Donald DeRosa, psychology; Dr. Harvey Donley, accounting and management information systems; Dr. Gary Heberlein, Graduate College; Dr. Reginald Noble, biological sciences, and Dr. Eleanor Roemer, educational foundations and inquiry.

As a first step in the search, the committee is now seeking nominations of appropriate persons for the position. Nominees should be University employees with appropriate qualifications who will agree not to be candidates for the permanent position, according to Olscamp's specifications.

Nominations should be sent before May 14 to the Search and Screening Committee, Faculty Senate Office, 140 McFall Center. Letters of nomination should include the name of the nominee and his or her qualifications for the position, as well as an indication whether consent of the nominee has been obtained. Self-nominations will be accepted.

The committee has been charged by Olscamp with providing a list of three unranked candidates for the position by June 15. An appointment is expected to be made by Aug. 1. A formal search for a permanent vice president for academic affairs is to be launched during the coming year.

Testimonial dinner honors Dr. Scott

Dr. John Paul Scott, professor emeritus of psychology, was honored at a testimonial dinner last week at the Bowling Green Country Club.

Scott, who joined the Bowling Green faculty in 1965, used the occasion to review the history of critical periods of social development. The topic was one of several research projects he has undertaken at the University.

About 75 colleagues and friends attended the dinner, which was sponsored by the psychology department.

Speakers included Dr. Donald DeRosa, chair of the department; Dr. Theodore Groat, Center for Population and Society Research, and Audrey Palumbo of Toledo, who was Dr. Scott's first lab technician and research assistant when the Animal Research Center opened at Bowling Green in 1965.

In addition, Dr. John Schuck, psychology, read a number of letters and telegrams from former students and colleagues of Dr. Scott.

Edmonds receives doctoral degree

Dr. Mary M. Edmonds, dean of the College of Health and Community Services, has completed her doctoral work at Case-Western Reserve University.

Edmonds, who is dropping the Miles portion of the name by which she has been known during her first year at Bowling Green, received her doctorate in sociology with specializations in medical sociology and social gerontology.

Academic Council

By a vote of nine to seven, Academic Council approved at a meeting April 21 a resolution to the Board of Trustees calling for an increase in instructional fees for 1982-83 if the level of state subsidy income is inadequate to fund basic academic priorities.

Dr. Karl Vogt, business administration, drafted the resolution, which was opposed by some members who said the statement gave the impression that increasing fees is the only way to solve the University's financial problems. It was suggested that fee increases should occur only after all cost-cutting measures have been exhausted.

In other business at the April 21 meeting council heard a report from Dr. Paul Haas, director of the honors program, on criteria for both University and departmental honors, as recommended by the Honors Advisory Council.

The proposal outlines criteria for acceptance, continuation and reinstatement in the University program and for graduating with University honors designation, as well as criteria for acceptance for and graduation with departmental honors.

Returning to a discussion of the Report on Articulation Between Secondary Education and Ohio Colleges, council approved the appointment of a subcommittee to draft the University's formal response to the report, noting that the draft should include University recommendations on all areas covered in the articulation report, not just in the English and mathematics sections. The draft also is to extend beyond a mere statement on conditional and unconditional admission to the University.

Dr. John Eriksen, acting provost, has appointed Dr. Lester Barber, English; Dr. P. Thomas Tallarico, music education; Dr. Karl Vogt, business administration; Dr. Sandra Packard, education; John Martin, admissions, and Bruce Johnson, undergraduate student, to the subcommittee charged with drafting a University response. Consultants to the group will include a high school superintendent, a high school principal, a vocational education representative and someone from institutional studies. The subcommittee was requested to submit a report to council by May 21.

Monitor

Monitor is published every week for faculty, contract and classified staff of Bowling Green State University. Deadline for submission of materials for the next issue, May 17, is 5 p.m. Tuesday, May 11.

Faculty & Staff

Recognitions

Dr. Lester Barber, English, was elected 1982-83 vice president and program chair of the College English Association of Ohio at its spring conference April 23 in Columbus.

'Small World' is theme of International Week

"The world" of Bowling Green State University will celebrate the differences between cultures and peoples May 10-16 as the University's World Student Association presents its annual International Week program.

More than 350 international students from 58 foreign countries are helping to organize the cultural and educational programs, which this year center around the theme "It's A Small World."

The week begins Monday (May 10) with the traditional Parade of Nations, beginning at 1 p.m. at the Student Services Building.

An International Dinner, set to begin at 7 p.m. Saturday (May 15), will be held at St. Aloysius Church, 150 S. Enterprise. Dishes from around the world will be served.

Tickets for the dinner, at $5, must be purchased at the International Student Program office, 16 Williams Hall, before 5 p.m. Friday. No tickets will be sold at the door.

A complete listing of other events of the week is included in the MONITOR calendar.

Conference to focus on multicultural education options

Options for multicultural education in the 1980s will be the focus of a daylong higher education conference Saturday (May 15) at the University.

More than 70 educators and students are expected to attend the program which will explore controversies surrounding multicultural education, according to Dr. Adelia Peters, education, a member of the conference committee.

The conference, sponsored in conjunction with a regional meeting of the World Council for Curriculum and Instruction, will be held in the Ohio and Community suites of the University Union. Special speakers will include Dr. Norman Overly of Indiana University's education department and Dr. Chadwick Alger of the Ohio State University Mershon Center and political science department.

The free conference is open to any interested faculty and staff. For further information, contact Peters at 372-0207.

Founders residents celebrate anniversary

When the University's 980-bed Founders Quadrangle opened its doors during the 1956-57 academic year, it was a thing to see.

Touted as having the most modern and most attractive living space of any residence hall in the country, the four buildings which comprise the quadrangle—Mooney, Treadway, Harmon and Lowry—were even featured in "Mademoiselle" magazine.

Now, 25 years and thousands of residents later, the current "crop" of students is celebrating 25 years of Founders Quadrangle living with a full week of programs and activities.

The week will begin Sunday (May 16) with a "birthday celebration" and continue through Saturday when a "rededication ceremony" is scheduled at 11 a.m. in the courtyard.

Other events planned include a "Meet the Founders" program on Thursday (May 20) at 8 p.m. in the Gold Lounge of Founders.

and Lecture Enterprises, Inc. at its 10th annual spring meeting April 21 in Columbus.

Lenhart was also on the program planning committee for the meeting and served as a discussion facilitator.

Dr. Robert C. Romans, biological sciences, was elected secretary of the Ohio Academy of Science at the group's 91st annual meeting April 24.

Romans was also named editor for the program abstracts publication.

The 92nd annual meeting of the academy will be held in Bowling Green. Romans and Dr. Joseph Spinelli, geography, will co-chair the local arrangements committee.

Dr. Maurice J. Sevigny, art, was elected "factotum" of the National Council for Policy Studies in Art Education at its annual meeting April 7 in New York. As factotum, Sevigny will be responsible for the screening and selection of policy, issues and debate topics for the coming year. He will also plan and chair the Council for Policy Studies 1983 annual meeting.

Presentations

Dr. David Addington, speech communication, and Guy Taylor, a graduate student in speech communication, led a group of seven graduate students and community residents, members of the University's Life Theater Group, in a workshop presentation at the annual meeting of the American Society for Group Psychotherapy and Psychodrama April 15-18 in New York City. The group presented a socio-drama with audience participation.

Dr. A. Rolando Andrade, ethnic studies, presented a paper, "Mexico in Movies and Television," at the annual meeting of the Popular Culture Association/American Culture Association April 14-18 in Louisville.

Dr. Ernest A. Champion, ethnic studies, presented a paper, "Ethnic Studies and International Understanding," at the tenth annual conference on Minority and Ethnic Studies April 14-17 in San Francisco.

Dr. Lois Cheney, speech communication, presented a paper, "Roots are not Found in Museums," a study of the Reader's Theater of the 1950s, at the Speech Communication Association Eastern Regional Research Seminar April 15 at Montclair State College, Montclair, N.J.

Dr. Gary Edgerton, speech communication, and Cathy Pratt, journalism, presented a paper, "The Implications of the Paramount Decision on Network Broadcasting, 1972-81" at the annual convention of the Popular Culture Association/American Culture Association April 14-18 in Louisville.

Edgerton also chaired a panel on "Television Studies: Broadcasting and the Law" at the convention.

Stefania Frank, language laboratory, presented a paper, "Theater as a Political Tool in Poland: The Plays of Slawomir Mrozek," at the annual convention of the Popular Culture Association/American Culture Association April 16 in Louisville.

Marilyn Griewank, art, presented a workshop on "Lost-wax Casting" to metal students and presented a slide-lecture to art faculty and students April 22-23 at Miami University.

Dr. G.R. (Dick) Horton, technology, presented the keynote address, "When We Are All Leaders, Who Will Follow?," at the annual Founders Day Banquet of Psi chapter of Epsilon Pi Tau fraternity May 1 at California State College, California, Pa.

Horton also presented a Distinguished Service Citation to charter member and California State College faculty member Ralph F. Charney on behalf of the International Board of Directors.

J. Richard Knaggs and John T. Logsdon, mathematics, Developmental Learning Center, spoke on "Math: Developmental Teaching Methods" at the annual spring conference of the Ohio Association of Educational Opportunity Program Personnel April 26 at Sawmill Creek in Huron.

At the same meeting, Knaggs co-presented with Jack Taylor, educational development, "A Data Collection System: Program Evaluation and Review."

Dr. Don McQuarie and graduate student Dean Purdy, sociology, presented a paper, "Methodology of Network Analysis: The Study of Corporate Interlocks," at the Midwest Sociological Society meetings, April 7-9 in Des Moines.

Dr. Lee Meserve, biological sciences, and graduate student Jonell Skibski, co-authored a paper, "Sequential Induction of Diabetes Mellitus by Streptozotocin and Hypothyroidism by Thiouracil: Metabolic Consequences."

Skibski presented the paper at the 91st annual meeting of the Ohio Academy of Science April 24 at Ohio State University.

Meserve also co-authored a paper with Satish Raj, a Bowling Green High School senior, on "Thyroid Vascular Casts from Mice with Chemically Altered Thyroid Status." The paper was presented by Raj at the 12th annual spring symposium of the Michigan Electron Microscopy Forum May 7 at Oakland University, Rochester, Mich.

Dr. Michael Moore, legislative affairs and the arts, Dr. Mildred Lintner, speech communication, and Ann Shea, health, physical education and recreation, gave a presentation on the University's Arts Unlimited program, "A New Approach to Aesthetic Education," at the spring meeting of the Northwest Ohio Secondary Supervisors Association and Northwest Ohio Association of Secondary and Curriculum Directors April 23 in Tiffin.

Dr. David Ostroff, speech communication, chaired a panel, "Exploring the Content of Radio," at the annual convention of the Popular Culture Association/American Culture Association April 14-18 in Louisville.

Dr. Sandra Packard, education, participated in a debate on the question of public schools seeking private and corporate funding for art programs at the National Art Education Association convention April 2-7 in New York City.

Dr. Terry Parsons, Student Recreation Center, gave a presentation, "Issues of Precaution in a Non-Traditional Sports Setting," at the American Alliance for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance convention April 25 in Houston.

Andreas Poulimenos, music performance studies, will perform with the Dayton Opera Company in their May 15 and 16 production of Puccini's "Madame Butterfly." He also will appear with the Toledo Symphony Orchestra at the Masonic Temple and the Peristyle May 7 and 8 for performances of Berlioz's "Romeo and Juliette."

Dr. Meredith Pugh, sociology, presented a paper, "Victim Degradation and Rape Conviction: Loglinear Models for Some Simulation Data," at the Midwest Sociological Society meetings April 7-9 in Des Moines.

Graduate students Dean Purdy and Scott Randall, sociology, presented a paper, "Centrality in Sport: A Multi-Sport Analysis at the High School Level," at the Midwest Sociological Society meetings April 7-9 in Des Moines.

Dr. Deanna Radeloff, home economics, presented two workshops entitled "Color Me Beautiful: Making the Most of Your Natural Assets," at the northwest chapter regional meeting of the Ohio Library Association April 23 at Ohio Northern University.

Dr. Audrey Rentz, college student personnel, gave a presentation on "Planning for the Student of the 1980s: Perspectives on Student Activities Programming" at a conference of student activities professionals April 17 at Olivet College, Olivet, Mich.

Drs. Edward Stockwell and Jerry Wicks, sociology, gave a presentation, "Trends in the Relationship Between Infant Mortality and Socioeconomic Status," at the annual conference of the East Sociological Society March 21 in Philadelphia.

Dr. Jerry Streichler, technology, presented a paper on "Improving Teacher Effectiveness Through Individualized Instruction" at the 44th annual and 11th international conference of the American Industrial Arts Association March 24 in Hartford, Conn.

Dr. Streichler was also an invited participant in the Technical Foundation of America Seminar April 2-3 in Homewood, Ill.

The 31st annual Undergraduate Student Art Show opened Sunday in the Fine Arts Gallery of the School of Art, where more than 300 works, selected from nearly 1,000 entries, are on display. The exhibition was judged by Ellen Wilt, Eastern Michigan University (left), and sculptor Brian Kremer, a Detroit studio artist, who determined first, second and third place winners and honorable mention awards in each of 10 categories. Additional prizes also are to be awarded in the show, and many of the works are for sale. The display will remain through June 2. Gallery hours are 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays and 2-5 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays.

News Review

PERS sessions scheduled May 26

Representatives from the Public Employees Retirement System will be on campus Wednesday, May 26, for a series of orientation sessions on the PERS program in which classified and contract staff are enrolled.

During their visit to campus the PERS representatives will present a slide program, explain the retirement system, point out the benefits and advantages of the various retirement options available to employees and answer questions.

To accommodate as many employees as possible, four presentations have been scheduled in the University Union throughout the day:

10 a.m.—Town and Campus rooms (third floor)

Noon—Town and Campus rooms

3 p.m.—Town and Campus rooms

6 p.m.—Campus Room

PERS representatives also will be available during their visit to campus for personal interviews with employees who wish to review their retirement records or have specific questions answered about the retirement system benefits.

Interviews must be scheduled in advance by contacting the Office of Personnel Support Services (372-0421, 372-2225) as soon as possible. Depending upon the number of interviews requested, PERS representatives may be available on Thursday, May 27.

Questions about the orientation programs and interviews should be directed to the personnel office.

Discount tickets are available

Tickets to both Cedar Point and King's Island will be available to University employees at a discount rate beginning Monday, May 17, at the Union Information Desk.

The Office of Personnel Support Services has announced that Cedar Point tickets may be purchased this year at the special price of $9.50 (child or adult), a savings of $2.45 on each ticket. Children 4 years of age and younger are admitted free. Cedar Point opens May 15.

King's Island tickets will be available for $9.50 for adults and $5.75 for children 4, 5 and 6 years of age. Children age 3 and younger are

Forensic team 4th in nation

Bowling Green has the fourth best individual events forensic team in the nation.

The seven-member team earned that honor at the 12th annual National Forensic Association's Individual Events Championship held recently at Ohio State University. The 1982 national ranking marks the fifth year in a row that the University team has been one of the top five teams in the country.

More than 1,200 students from 148 colleges and universities competed in the five-day event, held April 22-26.

Seniors launch giving campaign

The University's seniors began their 1982 Senior Challenge campaign May 3 one-third of the way toward meeting their goal of raising $45,000 in contributions and pledges.

Some 240 seniors were contacting their classmates to solicit contributions during Senior Giving Week (May 3-5). The students contacted were asked to make pledges of $90 to $300 to be paid over a three-year period following graduation or a one-time cash gift of $50 or $75.

One-half of the total dollars pledged will be used to create a Class of 1982 Library Endowment Fund. Resources provided by the fund will be used to purchase books and periodicals and to make improvements in the University Library's study areas. Interest from the fund will provide a perpetual resource for the Library.

The remaining donations can be designated for the department, college or academic program of the contributor's choice.

Men's Chorus wins $1,000 prize

The University's Men's Chorus placed third in the regional Johnny Mann Great American Choral Festival held April 24 in Atlanta, Ga.

The chorus, directed by Richard Mathey, music performance studies, came home with $1,000 in prize money for winning third place.

Bowling Green's Men's Chorus earned the right to compete in the regional competition after winning first place in the non-choreographed division of the district contest, which was held last February in Columbus.
