Audio Tapes

INTRODUCTION

Most consumers do not distinguish between public and private systems. Their primary concern is the quality of the experience. One of the primary focal points of most programs is improving the consumer's leisure skills. Some responsibility for control of the system is based upon what the consumer purchases and where. Audio tapes and their use provide an interesting example of how an individual must put forth personal effort to improve himself/herself. He/she can use commercially prepared, public materials, or materials personally contrived to productively use time. "Where is the quality" and "how does use of tapes influence the consumer's impact upon the system"?
