The atmosphere brings you in.
The food brings you back.

Of all the restaurants in the Toledo area, one is unlike any other you've ever been to. Victoria Station.

The first thing you'll notice is a uniquely warm and friendly atmosphere. There's a relaxing lounge that's really an old caboose, and a series of comfortable dining areas inside real boxcars. Throughout this unusual setting you'll enjoy a fascinating collection of antiques from railroading history. With soft lighting and linens to enhance it all.

But the people at Victoria Station are the most important part of the atmosphere. They're more than cordial—they're extremely conscientious and eager to make your visit a truly pleasurable experience.

While the atmosphere may bring you in the first time, our regular customers tell us it's the food that brings them back. It's basic but superb. And everything is expertly prepared and served in portions larger than you'll find just about anywhere.

Try our Prime Rib, it's roasted and cut precisely to your taste; then presented at your table on hot stoneware. Or select one of our other specialties. Welcome To Big Orange Country

"Think Orange" is our rallying cry again this year. While hard work and talent count for more than either a slogan or luck to produce a winning record, I am aware that a little bit of luck doesn't hurt. And since this is my seventh year as President of Bowling Green, perhaps some kind of Lucky Seven flavor will spill over to football.

We have a fine football team which is capable of capturing the MAC championship. The schedule, which opens in New York (Syracuse) and closes in Tennessee (Chattanooga), includes a red-letter (and I do mean red!) date, October 23, when the Orange and the Red of Miami will clash in the crucial game of the season at Oxford. Our offensive backfield — fullback Dan Saleet, tailback Dave Preston, and quarterback Mark Miller — should provide some of the most exciting football in the Midwest. This year, for the first time, we are playing seven conference games.

We hope the attractive football schedule will bring many guests to our campus, and that they will not only enjoy our football games (and our Falcon Band performances), but will stay and learn more about the campus and participate in other events which are scheduled each weekend throughout the year. Many of these are outstanding theatre and music events as well as lectures and seminars conducted by our academic departments.

Our university again this year is at full capacity enrollment. Each year brings curriculum change and fresh approaches to teaching. The face of the campus has changed somewhat from this time last year, and will change even more noticeably in the near future.

The New Alumni Center can be seen southwest from the stadium. We expect that ground will be broken early in 1977 for a new Musical Arts Building (which will include performance facilities to accommodate faculty and student artists as well as the finest musical talent from throughout the country) and the new recreation facility which will include aquatic facilities, a large multi-purpose area, and specialized areas for sports ranging from archery to squash. In addition, renovations and improvements occur continuously in our existing buildings. It's an exciting campus — one which we hope you will enjoy visiting from time to time.

Welcome to Bowling Green; we hope you enjoy today's events.

The official celebration was in 1969. It was designated as “The Centennial Year” of college football by the National Collegiate Athletic Assn. The Post Office issued a commemorative stamp. Newspaper accounts said a “planned antiwar demonstration” was set if Richard Nixon came to a “Centennial Game” in New Brunswick, N.J. and 20,000 showed up for a parade.

That was the historical tribute, a genuflection to the beginning of the game, yet there is very strong evidence to suggest that the game played between Princeton and Rutgers on an empty lot on Nov. 6, 1869 was not really football. Rather it was soccer and, in the sense of accuracy, wasn’t the first football game played five years later? In Cambridge, Mass.

It was between Harvard and McGill University of Montreal. It was known as “Boston football” and it took its roots from the tradition established by the Oneida Football Club of Boston, the first organized football club in the United States. The surviving members of the club erected a monument to its brief history (1862-65) on the Boston Common in 1925.

If the nation at large observed 1869 as the starting date of college football, the people at Harvard had some fun two years ago, recreating the game it had played 100 years before and referring to the 1974 season as “The Real Football Centennial.” Decals were put out, stories were written and it passed quietly into history.

Harold M. Kennard, a football historian, wrote a letter to Harvard publicist Dave Matthews in 1973. “I have been agitating, to little avail, for over 35 years,” he said, “to get football sports writers to drop the myth of that Princeton-Rutgers soccer game in 1869 as being the first game of American football. More power to you.”

At the time, there was no response from the good people at Rutgers and Princeton. They simply let Harvard have its say, refusing to change their records. What most recent histories say is that Princeton and Rutgers set the stage, but the origins of the game as we know it today began on that day in Cambridge, Mass. when Harvard met McGill.

It takes a long time to make a good cable knit. We know because we make more cables, in more styles than anyone else. So, if you appreciate good craftsmanship, as well as a great fashion look for football weather, you’ll love these cables from Jantzen. From $23 to $28.
The year 1874,” wrote Allison Danzig in his The History of American Football in 1956, “was a momentous one in American football. McGill University, through its captain David Roger, challenged Harvard to a game. Lacking games with other colleges because of the difference in its rules, Harvard welcomed the proposal and its captain, Henry Grant, accepted.

“McGill played rugby and Harvard played a game in which a player was permitted to run with the ball if pursued, but which was largely soccer. It was agreed that the first of the two games at Cambridge should be under Harvard rules. Harvard won it, three goals to none.

“The second game was played under McGill rules, in three half-hour sections, and resulted in a scoreless tie. This was the first intercollegiate Rugby game played in the United States and the first Rugby match of any kind in this country, unless it actually was Rugby that Yale and Eton players played (1873), which was not likely.”

Go back, first, to Nov. 6, 1868, the day when Princeton traveled to Rutgers. Even an account in One Hundred Years of Princeton Football, published in 1969, admitted the game “bore no resemblance to the football of today. It was, essentially, soccer.” Yet, the student newspaper at Rutgers, The Targum, carried an account of it.

“The 1894 Yale team at leisure.

Harvard welcomed the proposal and its captain, Henry Grant, accepted.

“On Saturday, November 6th, Princeton sent twenty-five picked men to play our twenty-five a match game of football,” it read. “The strangers came up in the 10 o'clock train, and brought a good number of backers with them. After dinner, and a stroll around the town, during which stroll billiards received a good deal of attention, the crowds began to assemble at the ball ground, which, for the benefit of the ignorant, we would say is a lot about a hundred yards wide, extending from College Avenue to Sicard Street.

“Previous to calling the game, the ground presented an animated picture. Grim-looking players were silently stripping, each one surrounded by sympathizing friends, while around each of the captains was a little crowd, intent upon giving advice, and saying as much as possible.

“Very few were the preliminaries, and they were quickly agreed upon. The Princeton captain, for some reason or other, gave up every point to our men without contesting one. The only material points were that Princeton outscored Harvard they had come up with a variety of football that had elements of rugby.”

After 1869, Columbia and Yale entered the sport and, on Oct. 19, 1873, the four schools met in New York to formulate the first set of intercollegiate rules. Harvard declined an invitation, preferring to stick with its own rules and, a year later, met McGill in the two games that ultimately would lead to a more universal adoption of these rules.

“Football historians,” reads a section in the official book put out by the National Football Foundation in 1971, “believe that Harvard’s decision was the most important and far-reaching in the annals of American football. Had the Crimson accepted the invitation and gone along with Yale, Princeton, Columbia and Rutgers in the adoption of the code they eventually drafted in New York, the American game, as we know it today, never would have evolved and soccer would have been established as the No. 1 college sport.”

“Intercollegiate soccer,” wrote historian Tim Cohane in the Harvard Football News, “had been played by Princeton and Rutgers since 1869, and Columbia since 1870. Yale also took up soccer in 1873.” He talked about the meeting in New York. “The Cantabrigians realized that any ‘compromise’ of games with four soccer-playing colleges probably would retain very little ‘Boston football.’”

The following year, in 1875, Harvard issued a challenge to Yale to play a game under a compromise set of rules. Adopting “concessionary rules,” the two met on Nov. 13, 1875. It was mostly a game of rugby. Har
Take a man who enjoys life in the pits. A player who appreciates the healthy sights and tender sounds of a solid bruise, someone who thinks heaven has to be hitting and being hit, knocked down, getting up and then slammed again.

Feed him nails for breakfast, stand him 6'2" or more, with 220 plus pounds, pad him, swath him in rubber and let him believe there's no finer thing in the world than being first off the ball into the teeth of an offensive line grossing upwards to half a ton.

And if he's half a step faster than anyone else, tougher and smarter than most, and durable as a tank—call him a noseguard.

The noseguard is the newest position in the defensive line in college football. Still a rarity in the pro ranks, the noseguard occupies a place in 90% of today's college defenses. Born of a need to provide a better run defense in a run-orientated college game, his function is clear—strike the offensive center and break the running play. His share of offensive abuse takes one very specialized type of player.

The evolution of the noseguard can be traced to one man: Bud Wilkinson, head coach of Oklahoma University from 1948 to 1964. One of the all-time great coaches of college ball, Wilkinson conceived the need for a position that effectively cuts off the off-center run in a time when centers, once the team's worst athletes, were becoming the team's best.

In the pre-Wilkinson years, college defensive and offensive lines were set in essentially man-to-man alignments. Little or no provisions were allowed for options, pulls, traps or misreads. If a block were missed, the play was stopped with little or no gain. These plays concentrated on deep backfield reverses or broken field stars with a sharp eye to the opportune block on defenders downfield. The center in this relatively simplified mode did little more than start the play from scrimmage. Variations of this old theme are found today mostly in the pro ranks where tackles and guards line up on both sides, with the offensive center given a clear view directly in front and the freedom to pull to either side immediately on the snap.

Thus it was in the 1920-30 days of Red Grange and Company. Then the center, usually picked only for his size, slowly became stronger and smarter. Soon he was doing more than snapping the ball. He could set counters with an off-stance, cross block, pull block, crab block or drive block. Because he was becoming an increasingly better athlete, he was soon capable of driving a hole through the middle of a defensive line large enough for a pulling guard and the ball carrier.

Obviously, a defense was needed to cope with this development. It came in the guise of the Wilkinson noseguard.

The Oklahoma mentor was faced with a two-fold problem: supply an answer to the better offensive centers that were coming along and utilize players who simply weren't able to fit into any existing position.

The key to the answer lay in his 5-2 “odd” defense—later to be known in his honor as the “Oklahoma” or “Okie” defense that's now been adopted by most colleges in the country.

In this formation the defensive tackles line up head to head (or slightly to the outside) of the offensive tackles, and the offensive center is no longer unbothered. Set “nose to nose”
Introducing the dollar stretchers.

Your SAFECO agent is a good person to know. Because he can show you more than 136 ways to stretch your insurance dollar. Here are some examples.

1. Cut costs on disability insurance by increasing the elimination period. The longer the elimination period (time lag between the beginning of a disability and the first income payment), the lower the premiums.

2. Keep your valuables in a safe place. You may be able to lower fine arts, stamp and coin collection insurance rates if you store the items in bank vaults, home vaults or fireproof safes.

3. Go for a bigger hunk of life. Many insurance companies offer discounts for larger policies. So avoid buying a bundle of small policies when one might do.

4. Don't make the wrong move with moving insurance. Before you buy a special, and often expensive, policy sold by moving companies, check your homeowners. You may already be covered.

5. Check your life policy before you fly. If you have adequate life insurance coverage, you won't have to buy expensive airline trip transit policies.

6. Unless you own an oil well, don't invest in endowment policies. For most people, endowment policy premiums are too high for the value received. Many would be better off with a straight life policy.

7. Be a boating expert. Some companies will give you up to a 10% discount if you complete an approved power-boat handling course.

8. Increase deductibles on your business insurance. You could save up to 18% on your building insurance premium by carrying a $1,000 deductible.

9. Keep an extra set of accounts receivable. If you keep a duplicate set at another location, you could save up to 50% on the accounts receivable premium.

10. Check into I.R.A. retirement plans. They provide a good way to buy your life insurance through tax-deductible dollars.

11. Don't get stranded by your auto insurance. Check to see if your comprehensive provides transportation expenses if your car is stolen. You may be able to save yourself some car fare.

12. Go for the big deductibles. You could save a lot on your premiums if you carry a $200 collision deductible rather than a $100 deductible—and take a $50 deductible on comprehensive. And any loss over $100 is deductible from your income tax.

13. Lock the barn door before the horse gets away. Do everything you can to avoid losses to your home. Check for hazards. Install alarms. Buy good locks, and use them. Keep fire department, police and emergency medical aid numbers handy. It's the best way in the world to fight rising insurance costs.

14. Don't look for bargains in health insurance. A cheap policy just may not be adequate. And this is one place where it's better to have too much than too little.

15. Buy insurance from an agent who's not just a company man. A local independent agent, who represents many companies and sells many different insurance plans, may be able to get you a better deal. Because independents are free to sell you what's best for you. And get you the best value to boot.

If you think these tips make sense, see the people who wrote the book. SAFECO has put together a handy, 36-page consumer guide that tells you how to get more for your insurance dollar. It contains the 15 tips you've just read. Plus 121 more. For this handy guide, write to SAFECO at SAFECO Plaza, Seattle 98185.

vard agreed to some soccer rules, Yale conceded to play 15 men to a side. The next year, Yale switched to the Harvard rules.

"There were many points of difference," wrote William R. Tyler in the Harvard Advocate, "in Harvard's Boston Game from the rugby game. It was eminently a kicking, as distinguished from a running and tackling, game . . . I would question if there were three men in college who had ever seen the egg-shaped ball. A drop kick was unknown."

There were a couple of Princeton men in New Haven to see the first Harvard-Yale game in 1875 and, after returning to campus, argued for an adoption of the different rules. Sentiment was strong to retain the rules drawn up in 1873, but eventually Princeton voted to change and invited representatives from Harvard, Yale and Columbia to a meeting in Springfield, Mass.

". . . for the purpose of adopting a uniform system of rules and considering the advisability of forming an Intercollegiate Football Association. It is generally understood that all the colleges have adopted the Rugby Union rules, but that each is playing them in some slight variations." Rugby rules, permitting running, were adopted and soccer rules, favoring kicking, were the result—America had a new game.

Oddly, wrote Harold Kaese of the Globe in a recent history of football at Tufts, "The only football game Harvard ever lost was to Tufts. That was on June 4, 1875, when Tufts, a small college in nearby Medford, beat Harvard with one touchdown and one goal to none. "To purists," wrote Kaese, "the first Tufts-Harvard game was the first real football played between American colleges." Oddly, as well, most histories of the game completely omit it.

"We borrowed horses and a haywagon from the farmer who cared for the college cows," said Eugene Bowen, the Tufts manager, "and traveled to Cambridge with urchins calling us farmers and hayseeds. There were approximately a hundred students at Tufts, and it was a job to persuade twenty-two to have practice."

"They played briskly," noted the reporter in the Globe the next day "and ere long five or six Tufts men found themselves laid on their backs so violently that they imagined it was evening by the stars they saw." The Boston Transcript said, "The Harvards did not watch their movements as closely as they should have, consequently Tufts made the first and only goal."

Out of it, too, came the first excuse. The Harvard Advocate blamed it on an insufficient Spring practice and overemphasis on sports such as baseball and rowing. Now, Harvard and the Ivy League, do not tolerate ANY spring practice. In the formative years, there were seven games in the Spring. In the Fall, Harvard traveled to Medford and, on a field where cows grazed, avenged its loss to Tufts.

On Nov. 6, 1875, a "Second Eleven" at Tufts went to Lewiston, Maine for a game against Bates. "The game," wrote Kaese, "had been arranged between Charles Cushman, a veteran of the first encounter with Harvard, and his friend Frank Briggs, who had been convinced to form a team at Bates. It provided the state of Maine with its first taste of intercollegiate football."

"To Harvard," wrote Alonzo Stagg in the 1944 Football Guide, "goes the credit for taking up Rugby and playing it consistently in 1874, 1875 and 1876. To Princeton belongs the credit of initiating the calling of the convention. To Yale, belongs the credit of persistently contending that the number of players on a team be fixed at eleven instead of fifteen and finally winning her point in 1880."

"The man generally recognized as "The Father of American Football" was a Yale freshman in 1876 named Walter Camp. Although he credited his 1876 captain at Yale, Eugene V. Baker, with sowing, "the first germs of real football at Yale . . . and taught me the best part of football as I know it," it was Camp who left his imprint on the game. He changed a rugby scrum to a football scrimmage and adopted the system of downs and yards to gain.

Among the other things he did was to back up the Yale plea for an 11 man team. He originated signal calling and the quarterback position. He persuaded the rules committee, on which he served for 48 years, to permit tackling below the waist and, after serving as first head coach at Yale, he moved West in 1892, to become the first head coach at Stanford.

"If Walter Camp had contributed not a single thing else to football," noted John D. McCallum and Charles Pearson in the National Football Foundation book, "his name would still rest secure on the scrimmage, perhaps the greatest single invention in any game." And, for terminology, a Princeton man, Ned Peace, turned to Camp at an 1882 convention after Camp talked about lining the field, "That looks like a good idea," said Peace. "Precisely," replied Camp.

The changes made, the game increased in popularity, branching outside the East to Minnesota, Purdue, Notre Dame, Indiana, Virginia, Southern California, Washington.

"From 1888 on," wrote Danzig, "following the legalizing of the low tackle and the contracting of the line and backfield into a close formation, the style of football was to change radically."

Stagg, a Yale man who started coaching at Springfield, later wrote, "I am sure the push-and-pull period of offensive football started with my creation of the ends back offense in 1890." He moved to the University of Chicago. "In 1890," wrote Stagg, "when as a student, I was given permission to organize a team at Springfield, I created a new system of play by playing both ends behind the line."

The flying wedge was introduced at Harvard, in 1892, and the revolving wedge the same year at Minnesota. Vanderbilt used the flying wedge against North Carolina and against Georgia Tech in 1892. "By 1893," wrote Stagg, "everyone was using his flying wedge and the mass principle, and the game so increased in roughness and injuries as a consequence that the season ended in an uproar, and the Army and Navy Departments abolished the service game (for 1894)."

New York was the scene of an 1894 meeting of representatives from Harvard, Yale, Princeton and Penn to save the sport. The rules changes included outlawing the wedge and flying wedge, cutting time from 90 to 70 minutes, dividing the game into halves, prohibiting a player from touching an opponent until he had the ball and the ball had to travel 10 yards before it could be touched on a kickoff.
IF YOU CAN'T COME TO HOLLAND
HAVE A HEINEKEN.

The taste of Holland, pure and incomparable, comes through clearly in each and every glass of Heineken. Light or Dark—or on draft.

Incidentally, this 300-year old windmill in Holland is dedicated to Van Munching of New York, exclusive importers of Heineken Beer in the U.S.A.

Heineken tastes tremendous. No wonder it's America's #1 imported beer.
with the center, the noseguard covers both defensive guard positions as well as his own, letting players that once served as guards on the line drop back several yards into linebacker positions.

The advantages of this alignment showed quickly. First, the noseguard intimidated the man over the ball. Although the center, since he knew the call, was always the first man off the line, the noseguard was invariably the second. Apparently different things went through a center's mind when he knew at the moment of the snap, he was going to be hit hard. Bad passes to the quarterback, once a rarity, became more commonplace until the center learned to adjust. Meanwhile, offensive downs were lost.

Secondly, and more importantly, a much better run defense was available. If the noseguard played correctly, he was always able to take out at least two men every play—the center, whom he struck regardless, and one guard who would come in to double team him. Usually a defensive man was left free and the run closed off. At the very least, the noseguard was drilled to be in on every tackle near the line. To do otherwise, so the coaches said and the player believed, was a shame not to be endured.

The modern noseguard is considered the nucleus and driving force of the entire defense. He's the first one there, the first one off the ball, the first to shed a block, and the first to point in the direction of the ball carrier. Still, with offenses becoming wise to his act, the noseguard has his own problems. If you consider his base alignment:

the noseguard must overcome basically five offensive maneuvers:

1) The center can drive block on the noseguard:

Now the noseguard has to react quickly and react to the movement of the center and guard, never allowing an effective block on himself before locating the ball and pursuing down the line of scrimmage.

4) The center and the guard combine to form a double-team:

This is the toughest situation for the noseguard. What to do? If he's driven back, he can block off his own linebacker. The answer is to shed first one, then the other, block from both center and guard, get off the ground and pursue down the line of scrimmage to the ball.

Along the same lines, but a variation on the same theme, occurs when:

5) The center goes to cut-off the linebacker, leaving the guard to angle-block on the noseguard:

Here the noseguard must strike the center head on, take him out of the play, then locate the ball and fight towards the four gap on that side. Or

2) The center can reach block on either side:

In this situation the noseguard has to reach also, stepping up with the outside foot to the side where the center's helmet is going and, without over-extending, face "nose up" to the center, take him out, then claw down the line of scrimmage following the ball.

3) The center can scoop block the next man over, allowing the backside guard to scoop block on the noseguard:

Now it's a question of a right or wrong read for the noseguard. If it's read as an angle block, he has to begin fighting back through the head of the guard with his outside arm without giving ground or allowing himself to be turned. If he misreads and thinks the center is trying to cut him off (rather than going for the LB), the noseguard has to change direction and follow down the line of scrimmage, stepping over odd bodies along the way in pursuit of the ball carrier.

5) Finally, the center can pull yet another fast one by leaving the noseguard untouched (if possible) and then pulling in either direction down the line of scrimmage:

Again, the noseguard has to read and decide quickly. A screen could be forming, or it could be a fake run leaving the opposite side of the line open. Chances are that the center will take the noseguard to the ball—if the latter can follow and hasn't been drawn too far off into the backfield.

So it takes a special type of individual indeed. Some of the great noseguards in recent times are virtually household words among defensive coaches: Jim Stillwagon of Ohio State; Dewey Sellmon of Oklahoma; and a 1975 All American, Granville Liggins also from Oklahoma; Curly Culp of Arizona State; and Clift Frazier, 1975 All American from UCLA. All of these men share the same characteristics and the same desires. Each is capable of absorbing more punishment than was thought possible just a few years ago. They are lightning-quick over the first few yards, and able to take an initial, solid block, shed it, then fight across the madness of the interior line to tackle the ball carrier—or at least bring him within range of a linebacker.

This is why every great noseguard is required to be smart enough—and durable enough after repeated blows—to guess in advance, shed fakes, and follow reads to the ball.

Thus the noseguard is called the nucleus and driving force of the modern college grid defense. Watch him closely during today's game—he's the toughest guy out there.
A CORNERBACK

by Virgil Parker, Lincoln JOURNAL

Football coaches seldom agree on anything. Defensive alignment. Offensive formations. Each has his favorite and isn't easily convinced to change or accept another philosophy as better.

But ask them what player on their squad has to be the best athlete—pound for pound—and you get a unanimous answer: the cornerback.

“The cornerback faces more crucial responsibility than anyone else on the field,” one top college coach claims. “He can certainly cost a team a touchdown quicker than any other player on the defensive unit.

“Wide receivers who are :09.5 sprinters from the track team are a dime a dozen,” one coach observes. “That’s who our cornerback is expected to cover. And remember, the receiver knows where he is going—cutting this way or that; pretending he’s headed for the sideline only to suddenly streak downfield; or appearing to be in a ‘fly’ pattern straight down the field, only to put on the brakes and come back into the ‘hook’ zone.

“No matter what the receiver does, we—and the fan in the stands—expect the cornerback to stay with that receiver like they were glued together,” the coach admits.

Obviously, that’s an impossible assignment. So, defensive coaches came up with help for the cornerback in the form of the zone defense. The biggest advantage of the zone is to give the cornerback some support underneath.

As soon as the cornerback reads pass play, he starts to drop with the split end. He knows that the linebacker will be falling back into the ‘hook’ zone. (See #1.)

#1.

The linebacker will be able to bat down a low-thrown ball. If it sails high, the cornerback will be in a position for an interception.

But the cornerback can’t come up too tight on the receiver. He must guard against a ‘stop and go’ pattern, where the receiver might fake a ‘hook’, then suddenly turn again and streak on down field. (See #2.)

In this case, the cornerback must be alert for such a ‘stop and go’ action and be ready to immediately react and prevent the receiver from getting behind him for the ‘long bomb.’

“By the same token,” one coach points out, “the cornerback can’t play so loose off his man (10-15 yards) that the opposition can complete a series of hook or sideline passes all the way down the field and get into scoring position.”

This is where the needed qualities of a good cornerback come into play—speed and quickness plus reaction time.

Then comes the footwork and agility.

“We have our cornerback running stride for stride with a speedy receiver,” a defensive backfield coach hypothesizes. “Though we teach our other defensive backs to holler ‘ball’ when the pass is on its downward flight toward the receiver, a good cornerback will almost sense—from the action and movement of the receiver—when the ball is coming. Then, in an instant, he must look up and locate the ball while maintaining good body control and balance.

“He must get into the best possible position to bat down or intercept the ball—all the while running at top speed. And he must take care not to unfairly bump or interfere with the receiver—thus drawing a costly penalty.”

Pass interference is one penalty in which there is a great deal of judgment on the part of the official.

“When the ball is in the air, it doesn’t belong to anyone,” another defensive coach states strongly. “The defensive back needs to go up with the receiver with his hands and arms high in the air. If he has them up to catch or bat the ball away, he can’t be accused of using his hands to push the receiver.”

When does a cornerback try for a pass interception?

“Only when he is POSITIVE he will get his hands on the ball,” one coach emphasizes. “Losing dressing rooms usually have a player telling his coach or the press that ‘I thought I could cut in front of him and make the interception,’ while explaining how the opposition completed a short sideline pass that turned into a long gainer after the catch.”

“The well-run pattern and perfectly thrown ball is going to be a completion,” the coach continued.

"You've got to accept that."

"In that case, the cornerback's job is to see that the receiver doesn't get another inch of yardage after the catch.

"For starters, his best chance to create an incompletion is to time his tackle to occur at the instant the ball touches the receiver's hands. There's a good chance that a solid hit will cause him to drop the ball.

"If that doesn't work, while making the tackle he should hang on with one arm and reach in with the free hand and try to 'strip' the ball loose. Or, at the time of the initial contact, slam one fist in there to try to punch the ball out.

"But in any case, the first objective should be a sure and firm tackle—to make sure the yards gained on the completion are all the receiver's going to get."

Some of the other major coverage problems a cornerback regularly faces include:

#3. A running sweep to your side.
Don't be too quick to come up and lend support against the run—it may be a run-pass option. The cornerback's first responsibility is to a deep out pattern by the split end. Only after he has committed himself to a block, should the cornerback try to elude the block and come up to help out.

#4. A running sweep to the opposite side. The defensive end has chased the play from the back side. Your main responsibility is to come up, protecting to the outside against a double reverse or end-around which would be coming back your way.

#5. Quicker support against the run is called for here. Same running play your direction, but the split end has blocked against the outside linebacker. Now you come up immediately to assume his duties in stopping the run.

#6. A crossing pattern between the tight end and the flanker on your side. The cornerback takes the receiver to the outside, with the safety picking up the player coming down the middle.

Almost the same play. But don't commit yourself too soon. The receivers may not actually crisscross. The cornerback still has the man to the outside.

Playing cornerback is far from a science.

"It's not a 1-2-3 thing," one coach assures. "We give him the basic rules and he has to adjust to them according to the opponent, the skills of the particular player he's covering, the position on the field, the velocity and direction of the wind, the score of the game, the down and yardage for that particular play, the time remaining—lots of factors. But don't make an error in judgment. It'll be more noticeable to the fans in the stands than the mistake made by any other player on the field."

Such is the day in the life of a cornerback.
The name of the game is quality.

A quality team welcomes the toughest challenge to prove how good it is. So does Pabst. We’ve been brewing America’s quality beer since 1844, which gives us the confidence to make this challenge of our own: taste and compare Pabst Blue Ribbon quality and flavor with any other beer. One glass and you’ll know that Blue Ribbon quality means the best tasting beer you can get.

It Takes A Long Time For A Halftime

From The Drawing Board . . . ... To The Playing Field

By KIM KREIGER

Starting the day after Commencement in June, attention of the band directors turn to September and the halftime themes and ideas. Mark Kelly, director of the bands, and John Deal, assistant director, spend many long hours accumulating lists of current songs, popular older tunes, theme ideas, and novelty items. From these huge lists, weeks of deliberation reduce them to the Saturday performances.

The groundwork may start with the general theme of the show and then the individual tunes are chosen to fit the theme. If “Newspaper Headlines” is the basis for the show, lists of tunes having anything to do with a newspaper are accumulated and considered for the best continuity and variety of material. “Chicago Tribune,” “Power to the People,” and “Send in the Clowns” could be sample songs on the list, ranging from a march to a ballad.

Every half-time show has tunes that are chosen to entertain students and their parents. The performances are aimed at all the people at the game, not just the young or the old.

All of this planning seems very simple, but the balance of material is vital to the success of the show. If you play the “Top 40” of CKLW every week or the best of Tommy Dorsey every game, you alienate people from the show and very quickly lose their interest and support.

At the same time as the lists of tunes are being accumulated, ideas of what the band should do while playing this tune are also considered. For example, it would not be wise to do a show on “Love” and play five ballads in a row while the band stands in a concert formation and never moves.

Once everything as far as theme, music and formations is set, the task of “charting” takes place. Every person in the band is represented by his number on the chart of the field in relation to everyone else. On the chart are numbers and dots in the exact position the person should be on the field.

The charting starts with the ending formation and works back to the beginning. In this way the final result is planned for throughout the show.

Any special formations are also done at the beginning. If the trumpets will be featured in the second song, the formation is set, and then the order of people in the entry is set so that the trumpets will end together and as quickly as possible. Everything is charted for the smoothest changes possible between selections. When setting up the changes or transitions between songs, the actual formation may not change, just who stands next to whom.

This all may seem easy and cut and dried, but add a soloist, TV coverage or any other specialty, and more variables are added.

Several years ago, the Falcon Marching Band appeared on regional television. This created the problem of exact timing of the show in order to make it fit the time schedule of the television network. These timing limits are sometimes changed hours before the game, causing cuts or additions in the halftime.

Soloists need the use of a public address system and require time for it to be set on the field.

A celebrity being honored at the game adds an easy theme idea built around that person. However, research into the person’s famous likes and dislikes, theme songs, and habits may give a clue into what that show will include.

Several years ago, three jets were to fly over the stadium during the Star Spangled Banner at the phrase “and the rockets’ red glare.” The first week it was perfect, however two weeks later they arrived a little early, like during the Alma Mater.

So as you watch the show today, you are viewing the result of many months of work. You are watching the best while about fifty per cent of the material lies on the cutting room floor.

Brown Keeps Time To His Own Beat

By DAN GARFIELD
CLASS OF 1976

A visit to Bowling Green middle guard Dave Brown's apartment is like a royal tour through the Shah of Iran's palace — all the comforts fit for a king!

Nestled in Dave's small living room is a $5,000 stereo sound system, exquisite furniture (some homemade) and lavish plants.

The bedroom combines the expensive tastes of a waterbed equipped with a massager, a heater and temperature control with more plants hanging around the room. The rest of the 'pad' is fancied to "Brownie's" personal preference.

To sum it all up, Harry David Brown, Jr.'s tastes are simple: "I only like the best!"

Brown said his pursuit of pleasures include owning several unusual commodities and striving to excel in unique hobbies and dare-devil achievements — a regular Evil Knievel protege.

"I like things that are a little different than what other people like," Brown said last spring.

"When I was a kid, I liked to juggle and ride a unicycle. I like to do a lot of different things. I like to be unique. I don't want to be like everyone else, because there is a whole lot of people in this world, and if we don't start being individuals, what is there left if everyone is the same. This world won't be much."

Brown's quest for excitement has also taken him into the world of motorcycle riding. He has also gone scuba diving for golf balls in the University Golf Course pond. He likes to fly planes.

"I just like to do different things that challenge me," he confessed.

"I never knew how to barefoot water ski until two years ago. But being able to do it, you have to fall four-to-five times, while going 45 miles per hour. I just like to push myself to accomplish physical things."

Brown's expensive tastes have prompted people to believe he was born with a silver spoon in his mouth and that it has been all "peaches and cream" for the BG gridder here. But Dave said he earns all his spending money now and receives some money due to the unfortunate death of his father.

"People have the wrong impression of me," he said. "They think that I get all the money I want. All I get is what any other child would who's father has died. I get social security and what the school gives me (grant in aid).

"I also get my clothes from my father's estate. Everything works out that my mother or brothers do not have to give me anything. I am completely self-supporting," he added in a stern voice.

"Different to be better," might be Dave's motto. His success on the grid-iron is indicative of his determination to achieve success. He plays every game to win. And he plays hard. Football is that part of Dave's life where he wants to prove himself.

"The only reason why I started playing football in the seventh grade was that after my father died, I felt more or less lost. I had to prove something, to myself, and that's why I started playing sports. I didn't excel until high school."

"When I lived with my brother, he motivated me and by being around him, I became a more competitive person. After my freshman year, I had already broken a lot of the school records there at Centerville in track, wrestling and football."

The zenith of Dave's high school athletic career came his senior year, when he won the state wrestling crown.

Dave's defensive accomplishments have been numerous in his three starting years at BGSU. Just last season, the Centerville native led the Falcons in solo tackles (36), total tackles (147) and number of tackles for losses (18). For his efforts Dave has been named to the all-Mid American Conference second team in 1974 and 75.

Brown says that football is good in that it gives you that "second additive thing."

"Football gives you incentive to strive to be something in your lifetime. My goal is to be a partner with my brother in business, or get into the entertainment field with my sound system."

"There is a very serious side of me, because I think a lot of my future," Dave said. "You have to go out and meet people and I think football gives you a sense of pride and desire and aggressiveness to go out into the business world, which I hope to do soon."

THE BROWN VAN — Bowling Green middle guard Dave Brown's passion for "easy living" can be traced from his unique apartment to his own van that includes almost all of the comforts of home.

Parents’ Day Presents Preston, Pageantry And Hope

By BOB MOYERS

You’ve gotta have hope and Bowling Green indeed will have lots of hope on its side for Parents Day with the presence of America’s No. 1 stand-up comedian, Bob Hope, who will appear in a sold-out Anderson Arena tonight.

The gifted entertainer will also receive a special halftime salute by the Falcon Marching Band in a musical spectacular which also will feature the outstanding Ohio University Marching Band. The two musical groups use different styles and effects to achieve the same end — A GREAT SHOW. It will be easy to see why the two bands rate as the finest in the Mid-American Conference.

Parents will also be honored when the fathers and mothers of Falcon football seniors are introduced in pre-game ceremonies. The senior players also voted this week to honor a special football “Dad Of The Year.” The 11 previous winners of the honor are included on this page.

With three games remaining in his college career, Dave Preston needs only 59 yards rushing to become the leading all-time rusher at Bowling Green and in the Mid-American Conference. The school and MAC record that Preston is chasing is the 3,239 yards that Paul Miles gained for the Falcons during the 1971, 1972 and 1973 seasons.

The National Collegiate Statistical Service rates Miles as the 19th leading running back in major-college history on the basis of yards gained rushing during his career. Preston is currently 25th on that list with 3,181 yards and has already moved ahead of such stars as Ol-ie Matson of San Francisco, O.J. Simpson of Southern California and Chuck Muncie of California.

Also drawing national recognition this season is the specialty team work on punt returns and kickoff returns. For the last three weeks Bowling Green has been ranked first in the nation in punt returns and Falcon senior Steve Kuehl was rated eighth in the nation in kickoff returns.

The handwriting was on the wall.
It clearly said that the time had come for a new kind of 6-passenger car. One that would use fuel and space more sparingly, yet still provide the kind of room and ride you've found so comfortable and comforting in our popular full-size Chevys of the past.
The car is here. It's called The New Chevrolet.

More head room
The New Chevrolet stands a little taller than last year's full-size Chevy, which perhaps explains why it looks so very proud in profile.
Inside, there's a little more clearance for heads and hats and hairdos, both in the back seat and up front.
A new acoustical ceiling helps keep things nice and quiet.

More leg room
We've increased the rear seat leg room by an inch in The Sedan (below) and by nearly two inches in The Coupe.
It will make a significant difference in riding comfort, especially on trips. The straight-up styling of the car makes it easier to climb into and out of.

More trunk room
The trunk is truly enormous, more than a cubic foot bigger than last year, with a nice flat floor that makes it easy to arrange things.
It's one of many pleasant surprises awaiting you in The New Chevrolet.

More efficient
The New Chevrolet is, by design, a very lean but very strong automobile, with not a trace of flab anywhere on its beautiful body, chassis or frame.
And it pays off at the gas pump.
In EPA tests, The New Chevrolet is rated at 22 mpg highway, 17 mpg city with the new standard Six, auto. trans. and 2.73 axle. Remember, EPA figures are estimates. The actual mileage you get will vary depending on the type of driving you do, your driving habits, your car's condition and available equipment. (In California, EPA mileage figures are lower.)
The New Chevrolet.
We made it right for the times without making it wrong for the people. You're going to love it.

Now that's more like it.

Just call him “DOC.”

While Bowling Green’s successful football coach Don Nehlen has never been able to capture the fancy of the fans with a colorful nickname such as “Woody” and “Bo,” his reputation as a “coach’s coach” with his colleagues cannot be questioned.

“Don Nehlen is a master of the arts of dedication, organization and communication (thus DOC),” said a close friend and associate who has watched him turn out seven winning teams in eight seasons at Bowling Green.

“There are a lot of other coaches who work at larger schools and who have colorful reputations who can’t begin to match his organizational and coaching abilities. If he has a fault, it may be that he is over-organized.”

The record book shows that “DOC” can match coaching talents and successes with the best in the business.

This year’s NCAA Record Book lists Nehlen as No. 24 on the list of winningest active major-college coaches with at least five years of head coaching experience. His 604 winning percentage and 47-30-4 record places him among the top 25 coaches in the land which includes the likes of No. 1 Joe Paterno (.836) of Penn State, No. 2 Bo Schembechler (.790) of Michigan, No. 5 Woody Hayes (.764) of Ohio State and No. 6 Darrell Royal (.761) of Texas.

Nehlen ranks just behind Jerry Claiborne (.624) of Maryland, Bill Yeoman (.617) of Houston and Joe Yukica (.616) of Boston College and stands ahead of such famous names as Johnny Pont of Northwestern (.487), Johnny Majors (.511) of Pitt and Pepper Rodgers (.546) of Georgia Tech.

As a coach’s coach, Nehlen can certainly take a great deal of pride in the Bowling Green coaching program which in the 1970’s has sent seven assistant coaches up the ladder to larger schools or head coaching positions.

Two of Don’s former assistants will be matching skills against him this fall. Elliot Uzelac is in his second year as head coach at Western Michigan and Rey Dempsey is in his first season at Southern Illinois.

Bowling Green’s overground railroad has also taken former assistants Bill Maskill to Vanderbilt, Gary Tranquill to Navy, Mario Russo to Wisconsin, Ron Chismar to Michigan State and Larry Coyer to Iowa.

Perhaps the national “image” that Don has is his reputation as the “Master of the Upset.”

His 1972 team did the impossible with a 17-14 conquest of Purdue and he was honored as coach-of-the-week by United Press International. Other “big-game” upsets include the 41-14 win over Syracuse in 1973, the 21-21 tie with San Diego State in 1974 and the 23-21 victory over Brigham Young in 1975.

Four times in the last seven years, Nehlen’s Bowling Green teams have come within one game of winning the Mid-American Conference championship. In 1971 and 1972, the Falcons compiled 7-2-1 overall marks that produced two seconds in the MAC and two runners-up citations for MAC coach-of-the-year honors. In 1972, 1973 and 1976, Nehlen was selected as assistant coach for the All-Ohio Shrine Bowl.

Yes, you can call him “DOC.” And you can call him a winner.

BOWLING GREEN’S 1976 COACHING STAFF: Joining head football coach Don Nehlen for 1976 will be four newcomers and four BGSU veterans. The staff includes (l-r) Bob Simmons, receivers; Carl Battershell, offensive tackles and tight ends; Dave Finley, defensive tackles and middle guards; Dale Strahm, defensive coordinator and linebackers; Don Nehlen, head coach; Russ Jacques, defensive backs; Larry Thompson, defensive ends; Mike Jacobs, offensive guards and centers, and Pete Riesen, offensive backs.
Ohio University

Ohio University is the oldest of 13-state assisted universities in Ohio. Founded in 1804, the history of the university goes back even further to the Ordinance of 1787. This historical document provided for settlement of the Northwest Territory and set aside certain land revenues to assure that in the newly-opened lands “schools and the means of education (would) forever be encouraged.”

Within the Mid-American Conference, Ohio University is the only remaining charter member. In the National College Athletic Association’s proposal for new football division, Ohio University is in Division I, the so-called “Super Division.”

Enrollment at the university is expected to be 14,000 for 1976-77. Of this number, more than 2,000 will be enrolled at the graduate level in 45 master’s and 18 doctoral programs. The full accreditation of the university’s undergraduate and master’s programs was extended to the doctoral programs in 1974.

At the undergraduate level, students can receive bachelor degrees from seven major colleges: Arts and Sciences, Business Administration, Communication, Education, Engineering, Fine Arts and University.

Also offering degrees to a selected group of students is the Honors-Tutorial College which offers a challenging one-to-one instructional program for the academically gifted and the creative student.

An unusual master’s degree program, the first of a handful in the country, is the sports administration program. Limited to 25 candidates a year, the program prepares students for athletic administration at the intercollegiate level as well as for arena, auditorium and recreational management.

The university will open a new College of Osteopathic Medicine in September 1976 with a first class of 24 students. The four-year medical program will include clinical training in affiliated general and community hospitals. The college will have a strong commitment to education for the family practitioner.

The medical college, which is housed in two converted residence halls on the West Green, is expected to be the core of an expanding complex of allied health education and helping professions programs.

A primary attraction of Ohio University is its 500-acre residential campus. The 120 classroom and residential buildings, mostly red brick and of Georgian architecture, are in groupings appropriately called “greens.” The locale of the university is in the hilly forested southeastern section of the state and the Hocking River flows along the edge of the campus.

Athletic facilities line the south side of the campus and include the football stadium, the 14,000 seat Convocation Center (home of the Bobcat basketball team), a baseball diamond, an ice rink, a fieldhouse, a nine-hole golf course, 25 lighted tennis courts and three lighted practice fields.

In addition to the main campus in Athens, Ohio University has four regional campuses in Southeast Ohio at Belmont County, Chillicothe, Lancaster and Zanesville.

Brandon Simmons and Brandon Thompson have quite a bit in common.

In addition to the obvious one of the same first names, both have tight black curls, big brown eyes, and dimpled smiles that turn on as easily as light bulbs.

Both are close in age — Brian T. at almost two years older than Brian S. — and both are enjoying the things most toddlers do at their ages.

And both have fathers that are football coaches with the Bowling Green State University Falcon football team.

Although a 1971 graduate of BGSU, Coach Bob Simmons did not immediately become a football coach. Instead, he took a job as a counselor with the campus Counseling Center, work he said he thoroughly enjoyed.

But when Head Football Coach Don Nehlen asked him about the possibility of his joining the football coaching squad last spring, Coach Simmons said he was eager to get back into the sport.

He was a four-year member of the Falcon team through his college career, and also played football in high school.

Even with the break from football while he was counseling full time, Coach Simmons said “I never really got away from football.”

Nor did his wife, Linda. The couple began dating while sophomores in high school, and Mrs. Simmons remembers cheering for her future husband back then as a high school cheerleader.

When both came to BGSU, they still continued to go to as many football games together as possible.

Now with her husband as a coach, Mrs. Simmons said she plans on being at every game.

“Now that Brandon is almost one, I can take him too and let him cheer on the ‘Big Orange’” she said.

If Brandon was excited at the prospect, he didn’t show it, but instead continued climbing over his mother’s lap as she sat on the living room couch.

Mrs. Simmons is a registered nurse and works in the intensive care unit of Toledo Medical College Hospital. She admits finishing her studies was difficult (she left college for a while, then returned — first part time and then full time), especially with Brandon around.

“I couldn’t have done it without Bobbie. He babysat while I studied and while I was at the library.”

Both Coach and Mrs. Simmons said they have done a “lot of growing together” since their high school days.

Both also commented on the changes their lives have taken, “Changes which affected us separately but also affected us together,” commented Mrs. Simmons.

She explained that she had gone from a student to a working mother, back to a student again and now to a professional.

Coach Simmons went from a BGSU football player, to a professional counselor, and now back to the sporting arena again.

“And bringing this little man into the world had a big affect on me too,” Coach Simmons added with a fond look at his son.

For enjoyment, Mrs. Simmons likes golf and modern dance — both sports she plans on having more time for now that Brandon is a little older.

Coach Simmons is also a fan of golf — a pasttime which he admitted he used to think was a “chump game.” But after reading some books on it and taking a few lessons, well — “I even got my first trophy this year at a tournament in Cleveland.”

Things were pretty much the same at the Thompson household during their interview — little Brandon T. did quite a bit of climbing around.

The Thompsons live in a one-story brick home situated on a two-acre site just outside of Haskins. Mrs. Thompson (LaVerne) explained the family had always wanted to live in the country, and that they find their large yard ideal for both Brandon and a step-brother, 13-year old Brian.

The entire family enjoys the outdoors. Give them a Sunday afternoon together and all four are likely to be out hiking or bicycling together.

“And Brandon does a pretty good job of keeping up with us as he sits on my shoulders,” Coach Thompson said with a smile.

The family also enjoys hunting driftwood together, and Mrs. Thompson admits to being a collector of rocks and fossils.

Young Brian will be an eighth grader at Otsego Junior High School this fall. Like most boys his age, he said he enjoys sports, basketball being his favorite. He also likes to read, especially mystery stories. At the time of the interview, he had just finished building a sandbox house for Brandon, a project which took him about two weeks.

Coach and Mrs. Thompson met while both were at Miami University at Oxford. He, like Coach Simmons, was also a former football player for the team that he would one day help coach.

In addition to coaching with Miami, he also coached at Hughes High School in Cincinnati. He admits he hadn’t planned on coaching at all, “but I sort of backed into it. I was teaching, and they found out I had been a football player so they asked me if I would mind coaching.”

Coach Thompson joined the Falcon squad last spring, and even though he was affiliated with one of BGSU’s biggest rivals, he said he didn’t think that would present any problems for him with the Falcons.

“When I was with Miami, my loyalties were with Miami. Now that I’m here with BGSU, this is where my loyalties lie. I hope Miami wins every game — except one.”

Alumni Report

BOB ZIMPFER: DEDICATION AND DETERMINATION

By LARRY WEISS

A great trivia question for BGSU sports buffs might be “What record-setting Falcon football player in the last 10 years also lettered on the tennis team?”

Here’s your clue: This person was first-team, All-MAC in 1969 and still holds six Falcon records in pass receiving and punt returns... give yourself a passing score if your answer was Bob Zimpfer.

His pre-BG days were spent at Troy High School near Dayton where he played football, basketball, and set a school pole vault record in track. During his senior year, he was selected all-state quarterback.

As a BGSU freshman, Bob was a running back and garnered “Freshman Back of the Year” honors. The following year, again at running back, he was selected “Varsity Back of the Year”... no small accomplishment for a sophomore. However, the best was yet to come.

Switching to wingback as a junior and split end as a senior, he recorded seasons that would make anyone envious. A glimpse at the Falcon record book verifies that Bob was an excellent performer throughout each of his three varsity years (the Falcons were 18-10-1 during those seasons).

His name still leads six offensive categories:

- Yards Gained Pass Receiving (Game) — 164
- Yards Gained Pass Receiving (Season) — 785
- Punt Return Yards (Game) — 152
- Punt Return Yards (Season) — 379
- Punt Return Yards (Career) — 958
- Punt Returns (Career) — 72

In addition his name appears in second place twelve times and in third place five. That he could be so gifted and accomplished in pass receiving, punt returns and kickoff returns, certainly speaks well for Bob Zimpfer the athlete.

Although tough to do, Bob did recall three experiences he counts as his most memorable: a 68-yard punt return for a TD in his first varsity game as a sophomore; throwing a halfback pass for a touchdown in the Rose Bowl Stadium; and being selected All-MAC, first team.

Zimpfer’s talents went far beyond the gridiron. While a student he was selected to ODK (men’s leadership honorary), was public relations chairman for his social fraternity, a member of the Dean’s List, and received honorable mention for a woodcut in the Student Art Show.

His tennis career began during his sophomore year. A year later he made the BGSU varsity team. Since then he has become a most proficient tennis player. He has won the Kettering Tennis Center Men’s Championship three of the past four years. He lettered on the 1969 Falcon team that registered a 10-6 season.

In August, 1969, prior to his senior year, he married Wendy Whittinger. Wendy also graduated from BGSU in 1970 and has served a term on the Alumni Board of Trustees.

Bob and Wendy’s “on campus parents” were Willard and Jane Wankelman and the Zimpfer’s are ever grateful. Will provided Bob with inspiration and confidence in both the fields of art and football. It’s a friendship that continues today.

Both received teaching offers near Dayton following graduation so they settled in that area... Bob teaching art and coaching football — Wendy teaching English and tennis.

A year later Bob ventured into the building business. The Zimpfer Construction Company is now five years old. It began as a home building and remodeling company. Bob now designs and builds custom homes. In addition, he has also acquired a swimming pool franchise.

Bob, Wendy, and their two-year-old daughter, Melissa, reside in Centerville and still enjoy tennis. In fact Bob’s pet project for 1976 was to build a soft court tennis court in their backyard. It’s a source of real enjoyment for the family.

A look at the Falcon record book quickly lists Bob’s talents as an athlete. His success in business demonstrates his talents professionally. To have accomplished so much at such a young age is a tribute to his determination, dedication and intelligence. With those in hand, almost anything is possible... Bob Zimpfer proves that.

Saturday afternoon can bring excitement, festivity, and a lot of good food.

For millions of Americans, the inherent pleasure of attending a college football game is not a total experience unless it includes a Tailgate Party, hereinafter referred to as a TP. Things happen at TPs that don’t happen at games. It has often been said that if the NCAA were to investigate TPs, dozens of football stadium parking lots would be placed on probation for minimum five-year periods. The TP has, in recent years, become such an integral part of the collegiate football scene in the United States and the subject of so many theses for doctoral candidates in sociology that the layman should now be fully informed of the derivation and current status of this most American of gala fetes. Thus, what follows (a complete history of the TP) is but another slice of the native memorabilia in this, our Bicentennial year.

THE NAME: From that of Amos Quincy Tailgate, a 19th Century Iowan who enjoyed picnics and invited most of the townspeople to them. On any given nice day in Ames, Iowa, one could hear the inquiry, “Coin’ to a Tailgate party?”

COINAGE: Tailgate was a noun until one day in 1952 a sedan was following a station wagon too closely just outside Fort Smith, Arkansas. “He’s right on our tailgate,” said the wife of the driver of the station wagon, at which point the driver replied, “Yes, dear, he’s tailgating us,” at which point the word became either a participle or gerund, depending on where one was driving.

Then in 1957, tailgate passed into adjectival form in the parking lot of Stanford University Stadium in Palo Alto, Ca. A catering truck struck the rear of a nine-passenger station wagon as both vehicles contended for the same parking spot. Contents of the truck were spilled onto the lot’s turf. Because the driver of the truck had sustained a whiplash and was too woozy to protect his goods, wrapped sandwiches and soft drinks were pilfered and eaten stealthily in the backs of station wagons. The occupants of one station wagon had grabbed so much of the food, they had to let down their tailgate to support the booty. They pulled over to a remote area of the parking lot and invited a few friends to help them devour the largesse on the premise bologna sandwiches are not good the next day. And so 13 people gathered around the rear of the station wagon and giggled merrily, telling each other they were having a “tailgate party” and should do this more often. Which is precisely what occurred every Autumn Saturday thereafter. When one of the partying couples moved East to Princeton, N.J., in 1961, the phenomenon spread. It was only a question of time until the TP reached every campus football stadium parking lot in the land and by 1965 it had.

WHAT IS THE RIGHT TAILGATE FOR A TP: There is, of course, no perfect tailgate. Choose one most comfortable for you whatever the size, shape or opening apparatus. The recent trend toward station wagon tailgates that swing out horizontally is to be ignored.

WHO TO INVITE TO YOUR TP: Anyone with a small, foreign car clearly doesn’t belong—unless they bring all the food. Anyone with children is questionable, especially anyone with small children because small children tend to jump on tailgates. Anyone with a van or motor home is debatable, for van and motor home owners tend to get pretentious and showy in a sea of station wagons. It is best that van and motor home people have a TP with their own kind in a far corner of the parking lot. Many of these larger vehicles stay there for days anyway, and it is reported that some stadium lots are now accruing extra revenue as mobile home campgrounds.

Every TP should include at least four people who know something about the football game that will follow the TP. Plus six other people who know something about football. Their presence will add a sense of relevance to the TP, give the TP meaning beyond the scope of being a mere social function. Also, it is wise to include on the guest list at least one person who knows how to get from the parking lot to the stadium following the TP; this guest, referred to at most TPs as The Pathfinder, preferably should be a person with limited drinking capacity. Elsewise, trouble looms and your guests may not reach their seats until well after halftime. Of the following week’s game.

CASING THE PARKING LOT: The prudent, savvy TP giver leaves nothing to chance—especially site location. Choice sites are available through two basic methods: bribery and cunning.

Bribery: Know your parking lot attendant. Know his needs. After you give him money, give him a rope. He will then rope off an area for you and protect it with his life. Should he be run over by a van or mobile home, while protecting your area, it will be necessary to give his widow money. Necessary, and proper. Also give him your leftover beverages. Many parking lot attendants—especially those who move cars—do their best work shortly after consuming leftover beverages. And always compliment them on their ability to “burn rubber.” They are proudful people. Cultivate them in the off-season, for they will pretend to forget you otherwise.

Cunning: This requires an advance scouting party and signmakers. No later than two days before a game, this party must reconnoiter the lot and drive stakes into the ground at a choice site. Signs on these stakes will read: “Reserved for the Chancellor” or “The Coach Parks Here” or “Quarterback’s Limousine Only; All Others Will Be Towed” or, in the case of a state university parking lot, “The Governor (and His 12 Well-Armed Security Officers) Use This Space; They Are Authorized To Fire Upon Other Vehicles.” That should do it, depending on the stenting ability of your signmakers. Bear in mind that some parking lot attendants pay no heed to any signs, so a bit of bribery may still have to come into play.

THE RIGHT PARKING SPOT: For practical Tpers, as near to the stadium gates as possible. However, most Tpers are not practical. (Otherwise, they’d eat at home and THEN go to the game.) And so spots nearest “aisles” are the most preferred, permitting Tpers to see and be seen. A proper TP must include elements of ostentation, although on sunny Autumn days one risks the spewing of dust onto one’s tailgate. Still, dust—according to TP hosts—is looked upon as “part of the charm and tradition” of TPing. Guests soon learn to enjoy dust; the good guest will bring his or her own bag of dust. Most supermarkets sell dust bags on the same shelves as dust cloths.

ADVISORY: Turn off all motors before beginning a TP … unless your menu includes carbon monoxide fumes. Some do make them tasty.

WHAT TO SERVE: In early days, TPs featured simple fare: potato chips, pretzels, olives, pickles, radishes, egg salad sandwiches with or without sliced tomatoes, large jugs of root beer and butterscotch cupcakes. Eventually, that basic menu underwent severe changes on the premise that anybody can make a halfway decent egg salad sandwich. It became pointless to have a TP if your TP was just like everybody else’s TP.

The evolution of the TP menu passed through the stages of turkey dinners (for games played during Thanksgiving week) to cold buffets (which included an assortment of 38 types of cold cuts, 12 varieties of cheeses and four types of bread) to “bring your own pointed sticks and let’s have a shish-ke-bab bash” bill of fare.

Currently, the best TPs fall into two categories: on-site cooking and catering.

On-site cooking: Double, self-cleaning ovens with transistorized batteries and nuclear-powered rotisseries are now on the market for purchase or rental/option. At good terms. These ovens reject all food save filets and chateaubriand. Salads are mixed in tailgate-sized tureens while the TP is in progress. After your guests finish their liquid refreshments, suggest they “help themselves to the salad bar and then let me know when you’re ready for your filet.” The smart host will pass among his guests with a pepper grinder. The smart guest will tell his host what to do with the pepper grinder.

Catering: Special TP catering services have popped up all over the country in the past two seasons. Here is how they operate: TP guests remain in their vehicles. The caterer walks up to the vehicle and politely asks the occupants to roll down their windows. He then attaches to the windows a small metal tray holding a cheeseburger, french fried potatoes and a chocolate milk shake. There are no menu variations, although the caterer will bring more catsup if asked. When the occupants have finished dining, they are instructed to turn on their headlights. The caterer then removes the tray and gives his bill to the TP host. In some cases, the caterer places trays on the tailgates; this is termed al fresco catering and is popular in warmer sections of the country or in sections of the country where people continued on 18t
Preoccupation with numbers causes us to remember coaches more for their records than for their overall contributions to the game. Too often, success is determined by the wins and losses which make or break a season. The figures who escape such scrutiny, the coaches, admired by their peers for their approach and styles, perhaps are to be the most appreciated. Such a man was Glenn S. "Pop" Warner, the legendary football coach who not only was successful in the record book, but who also devised many of the basic approaches in effect today.

An opinionated soul who often wrote about his theories for magazines, Warner died in 1954 at the age of 83. But his methods, created when some of his ideas were not fashionable, remain with the game. It was Warner who realized that starting a play from a crouched position might facilitate blocking and running. He once commented about the forward pass after it was legalized in 1906: "It may be basketball, but it's in the rules, so let's use it."

Far ahead of his time, Warner would fit the mold of today's college athletic director—concerned about costs and the bigness of college football. He was well-known for being the coach of Jim Thorpe, but Warner called Stanford's Ernie Nevers the best player he ever coached.

For all his abilities as a motivator and an originator of everything from gadgets to equipment, Pop was an outstanding field general, too. "The death of Andy Smith (coach of the Wonder Teams at California from 1916-1925) left Warner as the acknowledged kingpin of the Coast and the coaches," wrote Howard Jones and Braven Dyer in 1933, when Warner was at Stanford. "Knute Rockne was only beginning to come to the front with his famous Notre Dame elevens. Warner not only outstripped us all in the matter of coaching experience, but his countless contributions to the game in the way of new plays and formations stamped him as the outstanding genius of the gridiron."

Warner attended Cornell and originally sought a career in law, but after graduation in 1894, he left law for coaching, setting out to prove brains were as important as brawn for winning games. He secured his nickname because he was older than most of his classmates. "I didn't have any idea of coaching when I left college," he recalled in 1927. "I graduated in law, and had started to practice, when the Superintendent of the (Carlisle) Indian School sent to my old coach a request for a part time man to coach their team. The letter was sent on to me, and I thought three months of football might help out a struggling young law business, so I went down there. And I just stayed on."

In 1895-96, he coached at Georgia. In 1897-98, he was at Cornell. In 1899-1903 he coached at Carlisle, then returned to Cornell in 1904 and served three years. From 1907-1914, Carlisle was his employer. Pittsburgh was his next stop from 1915-23. Then he moved west to Stanford, coaching from 1924-32—the Indians were national champions in 1926. He finished his active coaching career at Temple from 1933-38, though he was an advisory coach at San Jose State in 1939-40. Though records are not consistent, most sources place Warner's record at 313-108-32 in 44 years, a winning percentage of .726. Only Amos Alonzo Stagg had more wins (314) in a career. Next to Stagg, Warner had the longest continuous coaching career in American football. Yet it was not his record nor his length of service for which Warner is most appreciated.

By today's standards, it is most unusual to find a successful head coach who has not had extensive experience in the game of football. Warner was an exception. Though he was the heavyweight boxing champion one year at Cornell and though he was on the track team for two years, his knowledge of football was limited.

"I was fortunate to be coaching in the early days when football was having growing pains and it was not then difficult to see how the game and the equipment could be improved," Warner wrote in 1951.

By comparison, Rockne contributed little that was new to football. Pop, meanwhile, sought wider avenues of attack—concentrating on putting finesse and mobility into the game. He developed the single wing and double wing attacks, the latter featuring reverses, fakes and spinners. That offense put a premium on a big, powerful, hard-running quarterback and fullback.

Warner would fit into the mind of a recreation quarterback today because he loved trick plays. While coaching at Carlisle in 1903, Pop—whose teams there never averaged over 170 pounds—decided it was time for deception. Jimmie Johnson caught the know what al fresco means. The use of a caterer also is popular among those who like to give TPs but don’t wish to mingle with their guests.

LIQUID REFRESHMENTS: Conditioned by the applicability of state laws and the knack of sequestering oddly-shaped thermoses. The safest TPs are preceded by house parties, known as HPs.

ADVISORY: Pre-TP HPs are inadvisable in connection with Army, Navy and Air Force Academy games unless one wishes to risk the wrath of MPs, SPs and APs.

THE FUTURE: Where is the TP going? And how will it get there? Many sociologists, including concession stand operators and vendors holding degrees, are inclined to believe the TP is faddish, a mere symbol of these easy, carefree times, a boredom-reliever that is bound to be replaced by a hot dog and a beer once the austere '80s arrive. A further hindrance to TP growth is the fact many campuses are now replacing parking lots with classroom buildings, a totally innovative academic enterprise.

On the other hand, culinary devotees believe the TP has yet to see its finest hour. In fact, some gastronomes are convinced that by 1987 TPs will take place inside the stadium and the games themselves in the parking lot.

There has been talk in NFL circles that the best TPs will be drafted to add a touch of class to the professional genre. NFL TPs, as they are now constituted, consist only of orange or tomato juice and Russian spirits.

Some college athletic directors are taking the middle course (no, not the salad). They see TPs as a means of subsidizing their hard-hit budgets or as a vehicle for financing womenperson varsity sports.

This subsidization would take the form—according to one athletic director—of putting a per-plate tax on each TP. Athletes would make the selections at the start of each TP, thus adding a touch of celebrity to the TP.

“What’s a party anyway without names?” said this athletic director.

The TP, in sum, seems to be a permanent part of the American college football scene, much as the American college football scene has managed to become a permanent part of the TP.

The TP, then, is here to stay. Now if you will turn on your headlights, we will remove the tray.
Headquartered in New York, the National Football Hall of Fame strives to honor the great men of college football and inspire the nation's youth to excel on the athletic field and in the classroom. To achieve its aims, the Foundation seeks to establish the true concept of football and gain recognition of its significant role in the preservation and advancement of our way of life.

As part of the Foundation's honors program, the Hall of Fame enshrines those college players and coaches whose deeds and lives during and after their playing days have been exemplary and inspiring. Each year, through a national referral network, new members to the Hall are inducted and the list grows.

Below are the players in the Hall of Fame as of July, 1976.

What omniscient football fan could deny the immortality and greatness of one Ernie Nevers of Stanford.

kickoff on the five-yard line. Immediately the Indians gathered in a huddle facing outward. Johnson slipped the ball under the back of Charlie Dillon's jersey. Dillon was a guard who could run a 10-flat 100, but still nobody expected him to be carrying the ball.

"Go!" yelled Johnson and players scattered toward the sidelines at the quarterback's command. Every back clutched his helmet to his chest as if he had the ball. Meanwhile, Dillon was running straight downfield, both arms free. When he neared safetyman Carl Marshall, the Harvard captain actually sidestepped the ballcarrier. The fans had seen the bulge in Dillon's back, but not the Harvard players. "We never considered it a strictly legitimate play and only employed it against Harvard as a joke on the haughty Crimson players," Warner would write years later. Alas, Carlisle lost the game, 12-11.

For all Warner's devious trends, he had a brilliant mind for the game, an unexplained source of inner strength which placed him far ahead of his peers. "He was one of the more intelligent and visionary minds that helped bring about the evolution of football from a mere physical test of unimaginative brute strength to a contest of skill in which the college youth was given the chance to show that there was something underneath his long hair besides his skull," noted historian Allison Danzig.

Pop's passion for the written word... The Notre Dame system gambles on wide end runs and open spectacular play. It is axiomatic that a gambling attack must be inconsistent. With luck it goes to town. When things don't click, it looks very bad. Personally, I would rather bank on a steady, well-rounded, consistent attack. My money would go down on such an attack to win the majority of games.

"I teach my teams to shoot for a steady succession of first downs rather than to gamble on the spectacular. The gambler may go for 40 yards. He may go for a touchdown. Or he may be thrown for a healthy loss."

"I would rather be reasonably sure of a small gain every time than to gamble for big gains on plays which frequently result in big losses."

Conservative in his approach? Maybe. But in a concluding statement which would have him battling with the nation's top recruiters today, Warner conceded: "In the last analysis, other things being equal, the team having the best individual players will win, regardless of the system used."

Like all coaches, Warner would do practically anything to win. His use of trick plays, new methods which were copied soon and his adaptability to different teams made him the talk of football and yet, with all the publicity which came his way, the man saw through its importance—as early as 1933.

"The time has come to deflate football down to normal," he wrote then. Little did he know that in the '70s, coaches from other sports on campus would be echoing the thoughts of the well-rounded Warner. "Like many another business, football was overinflated during the boom days," he added. "As in many industries, extravagant practices and the urge to get rich quick have injected evils into amateur sports. What we need is a new-deal code to restore normal, sane conditions to college and school athletics, and to football in particular."

... The various athletic conferences have for years maintained strict codes to curtail professionalism on the part of the individual athletes," Warner continued. "But so far, no conference has given any great thought to controlling the earning power of teams. There is no control over the competition for the 'big gates' which, directly or indirectly, are responsible for many of the unsavory angles of athletics.

That was the way of Pop Warner. Brilliant, perceptive, intense—yet cautious. He didn't want sport ruined by money. He didn't need a big coaching staff—in fact, he spoke of the financial dangers of too many aides. He saw no reason to take hordes of players to "exhibition games," as he called them. "These junkets may be justified as rewards to the football squad, but they are not necessary from a strictly athletic viewpoint," he noted. He advocated reduction in ticket prices because he didn't think it was right to make a gold mine out of the bigger games.

"In most schools and colleges, I expect to see football deflated to a saner status," Warner wrote 43 years ago. On that particular point, he was wrong.

It was a rare misfortune.

ATHLETICS AT BOWLING GREEN STATE UNIVERSITY

Double your pleasure, double your fun. That's the spirit of 76 and the rallying cry for the massive intercollegiate athletic program at Bowling Green State University which will be more than doubled during the 1976-77 year.

Through the efforts and approval of President Hollis Moore, a full-scale unique reorganization plan for intercollegiate athletics will be put into effect at Bowling Green this fall when 12 existing sports for men and the nation. BG's rich tradition includes six NIT mark at 33.

Best record with a 30-14 mark. The 1976 squad set the all-time win record is outstanding. The 1972 teams won the MAC championship. Two MAC titles in 1972 and 1973 and NCAA "Top 30" finishes in the same seasons are high points along with competition on its own 18-hole championship golf course. The women swimmers also have a reputation after winning the state tournament in 1974 and finishing second in the state and third in the Midwest last season.

GOLF—Ten tournament championships in the last five years and consistent "top five" finishes gives the men's team one of the best tournament records in the Midwest. Two MAC titles in 1972 and 1973 and NCAA "Top 30" finishes in the same seasons are high points along with competition on its own 18-hole championship golf course. The women's team also have a reputation after winning the state tournament in 1974 and finishing second in the state and third in the Midwest last season.

GYMNASICS—One of the fastest-rising BG programs from the point of spectator interest and competitive skill, the women's team has placed second in the last two state championships.

HOCKEY—Last year's team won Bowling Green's first regular-season CCHA championship and ranked eighth and ninth in the final national polls. Averaging 20 wins a season in the last five years has attracted capacity crowds to one of the best ice arenas in the nation.

LACROSSE—In the last three years, the men's team has a 32-2 record which ranks as the best in the nation. Three Midwest championships and 97-25 record in 11 years of varsity play are also on the books. The powerful women's team was 12-2 last spring and laid claim to the Midwest championship.

SOCCER—NCAA tournament invitations in 1972 and 1973 highlight the soccer program which has seen the Falcons rated as one of Ohio's top four teams each of the last four years.

SWIMMING—The women's swim team will defend its Ohio and Midwest championships this winter. In two of the last three years the mermaids have finished among the top 30 teams in the nation. They will be seeking their fourth straight state championship. The men's team has broken almost all of the school records in the last five years while keeping alive the rich swimming tradition highlighted by a record five-straight MAC swimming championships from 1956 to 1960.

SYNCHRONIZED SWIMMING—For the past two decades, Bowling Green's synchronized swimming program has been regarded as one of the best in the nation with its regional success providing a springboard for success of the women's swimming and diving teams.

TENNIS—Up-and-coming fits both the men's and women's teams at BG. The men's team returns its top four players from the MAC's fourth-best team and the women's team does the same after compiling a 17-3 record and placings of third and sixth in the state tournaments for the last two years.

TRACK—Both the men's and women's programs are rated among the finest in the nation. Men's highlights include Dave Wottle's Olympic gold medal in the 800 meters, Sid Sink's American record in the steeplechase, the MAC title in 1972 and the runner-up spot at the 1972 NCAA indoor championships. The women's team last spring won the Ohio state championship and placed 30th among 145 teams at the nationals.

VOLLEYBALL—The women's team has a habit of compiling winning seasons and ranking among the top teams in Ohio.

WRESTLING—With 20, non-losing seasons in the last 22 years, the Falcons are planning to continue BG's winning tradition that includes three MAC team titles and 15 individual champions in the last two decades.

BASEBALL—During Don Purvis' five-year coaching operation, the Falcons have averaged 26 wins a season. Don's "even-year" record is outstanding. The 1972 teams won the MAC championship and ranked 13th in the nation. The 1974 club compiled the all-time best record with a 30-14 mark. The 1976 squad set the all-time win mark at 33.

BASKETBALL—Four consecutive first-division finishes (two seconds, one third, one fourth) in the MAC have put Falcon basketball back on the map as one of the most respected programs in the Midwest and the nation. BG's rich tradition includes six NIT appearances, five NCAA tournaments, one NIT tournament and four MAC titles. The successful women's team has finished second three times and fourth once in the first five Ohio state championships.
