Seminar to illustrate asking right questions

Asking the correct questions during a selection interview is not only critical in making a good hiring decision, but is likely to keep the new employees and the organization on the right path. The seminar will be conducted by experts in the field of personnel and professional development. The seminar will be conducted in four one-hour sessions (March 10, 17, 24, and April 7) at noon in the Alumni Room, University Union. The seminar will cover the following topics:

- Assessing your priorities and objectives
- Identifying the key issues
- Evaluating the candidate's qualifications
- Establishing your personal objectives

Faculty/staff positions available:

- Assistant Professor of Psychology (full-time)
- Assistant Professor of Sociology (full-time)
- Assistant Professor of Biology (full-time)
- Assistant Professor of English (full-time)

Dr. Randle Finn, an assistant professor of psychology at Bowling Green State University, has been awarded $10,000 by the National Science Foundation to study the effects of cognitive training on children with attention-deficit/hyperactivity disorder (ADHD). Finn's research focuses on understanding how children with ADHD learn and how to improve their learning outcomes.

Finn's project, titled "Cognitive Training for Children with ADHD," will involve developing and testing a new cognitive training program designed to improve attention and executive function skills in children with ADHD. The program will be implemented in four small groups of five to ten children, and the effects of the training will be evaluated through pre- and post-training assessments.

Finn's research is important because ADHD is one of the most common and costly childhood disorders, affecting an estimated 3-5% of children in the United States. Children with ADHD often struggle with inattention, hyperactivity, and impulsivity, which can lead to academic difficulties, social problems, and behavioral issues.

"Cognitive training has the potential to improve the long-term outcomes for children with ADHD," Finn said. "By enhancing attention and executive function skills, we hope to improve academic performance and reduce behavior problems in these children."
HPER faculty publication rates rank among top 25 in United States

The study, "Publications and Citation Patterns for FACULTY/STAFF PRESENTATIONS," was conducted by250 physical education journals for a six-year period from 1984-88. Their findings were published in the fall for Physical Education Research and Administration.

Bowling Green was ranked 16th nationally in a survey of physical education journals for faculty publication rates in the six-year period. The researchers noted that the study of publication rates is important to assess the quality of a program.

Campus police first employees to unionize

Seventeen members of the University police division have become the first employees to unionize. The division, a 15-strength force on Dec. 1, was formed as a result of negotiations with the International Union of Police Associations.

The State Employee Relations Board conducted the election, which seven members of the police force examined. The union was represented by a union of theEmporia Police Department. A majority of the members voted in favor of union representation.

HPER faculty publication rates rank among top 25 in United States

The faculty members of the Department of Physical Education and Recreation at Bowling Green State University have authored the highest number of journal publications per faculty member in the nation. This is based on a study recently published in a leading physical education journal for a six-year period from 1984-1988. Their findings were published in the fall for Physical Education and Recreation, a leading journal in the field.

Bowling Green was ranked 16th nationally in the study, which included master's degrees (M.A./M.Ed.), doctorates (Ph.D./Ed.D.), and professional doctorates in physical education. The study was conducted by researchers from Emporia State College in Kansas and was based on a national survey of physical education departments.

The researchers noted that the study of publication rates is part of assessing the quality of a program.

Campus police first employees to unionize

Seventeen members of the University police division have become the first public safety officers at Bowling Green State University to unionize. The division, a 15-person unit on Dec. 1, 1990, issued themselves with the International Union of Police Associations.

The State Employee Relations Board conducted the election and a majority of the employees wanted to be represented by a union. The employees want better wages, fringe benefits, hours, and a retirement plan. The police bargaining unit members will be negotiated with the University through the union.

ASU from FISU

ASU Board approved $4,918,600 in construction funds for the University to build a new 20,000 seat arena to house the new ASU basketball teams. The arena will be located on the site of the former ASU gymnasium.

The new facility will be able to accommodate up to 4,000 spectators and will feature state-of-the-art technological advancements. The arena will also have a dedicated press box, public address system, and video production studio.

The construction of the arena is expected to be completed by 2023. Once completed, the new facility will serve as a significant enhancement to the University's athletic program and provide a world-class venue for ASU basketball games.
Hess explores history of the Vietnam War

How could a Communist revolution in a country as relatively obscure and economically backward as Vietnam bring the U.S. into a war which would have ramifications for American society long after the shooting stopped?

Hess, a Distinguished Research Professor of history and chair of the history department, is an internationally known expert on U.S. policy in Asia.

In the book, Hess recounts the political and military involvement of the United States in Vietnam, which began during World War II.

He traces this activity through the 1950s and 60s, until March 8, 1965, when then-President Lyndon Johnson sent two Marine Corps battalions as combat units to fight in Vietnam.

The book then follows U.S. policy through the war and follows the tensions—over MIAs and other issues—which continue between the two countries since the shooting stopped in 1975.

Hess said he wrote the book to be used as a textbook in college classes for that reason he said a large portion of the book attempts to view the war through the eyes of the Vietnamese, something which has not been done in other recent books about Vietnam.

Currently, he is president of the Society for Historians of American Foreign Relations.

In 1986, he was one of 10 American, French and British scholars invited by the Center for NATO studies to participate in a seminar on the French-American relationship during the Indochina crisis of 1954.

The next year, he was among 15 American, British, Soviet and Chinese scholars to meet in Italy under the auspices of the Henry Luce Foundation and the Rockefeller Foundation to participate in a seminar on East Asian International Relations during the Eisenhowers administrations.

In 1990, Hess was named a Distinguished Research Professor by the Board of Trustees, the highest honor a faculty member can receive at Bowling Green.

Income tax affects two school districts

Beginning Jan. 1, school district income tax for Elmwood and Perrysburg goes into effect. In January 1991 employees were asked to submit school district tax forms. The forms will be used to load school district taxes. If employees have had a change of district or have not completed a form, please contact the payroll office at 2-2201.
