OBOR proposing $15.2 million to fund University’s capital projects

The Ohio Board of Regents approved in December a $152 million capital budget for the 1995-96 biennium for Ohio’s public colleges and universities.

The proposal has been sent to Governor George Voinovich and the Legislature for their consideration.

The project includes a number of items in the budget spending plan by July.

The Regents’ goal, which is in line with the $10.4 million that was allotted for the current two-year budget period.

The under-reg nationalists, however, would reduce $10.4 million, approximately $12 million less than requested by the University.

The proposed funding would provide seed money for the Steindorff Program in the Arts, with plans to request funding for three- to five-year projects.

Plans being made to demolish and replace South Hall

One of the University’s proposed projects that received capital budget funding under the Board of Regents’ proposal was the construction of a new student housing facility.

If approved by the Board of Regents, the project would be located on the north campus at the site of the current South Hall.

The campus community has been encouraged to provide input through the use of an electronic bulletin board.

Two thousand years ago, Aristotle wrote in his book Politics that critical thinking is essential to the human condition. The phrase "critical thinking" has been in widespread use for decades.

The editors asked the participants how they would apply the concept of critical thinking to their daily lives and careers. In general, their responses were positive.

The next step is to develop a series of workshops and seminars on critical thinking.

Reddin Symposium to focus on Canada’s current state of politics

The United States adapts quite well when compared to the rest of the world as far as the former “good neighbor” policy is concerned. If we look at the history of the United States under the presidency of Ronald Reagan, we see a policy of detente towards the Soviet Union in which the United States and the Soviet Union would work together to avoid a nuclear war. This policy was successful in reducing the possibility of a nuclear war.

The United States also adopted a policy of containment towards the communist countries in the Cold War. This policy was successful in preventing the spread of communism in Europe and Asia. The United States also pursued a policy of regime change in the Middle East, which is ongoing to this day.

The United States also adopted a policy of economic sanctions against the communist countries, which was successful in isolating these countries economically. The United States also pursued a policy of military intervention in the Middle East, which was successful in achieving its objectives.

Reddin Symposium to focus on Canada's current state of politics

The United States adapts quite well to the shock of testing its students, but it suffers from a lack of emphasis on learning by those in other parts of the world. One of Canada's most serious problems is that it has a political system that is not as well developed as the political systems in other countries. This is because Canada's political system is based on the idea of having a single-party government, which allows the government to make decisions without much input from the people.
