Wins Emmys and OBIE for DePue family program

Brady's editing abilities earn more awards for his shelf

WBGU-TV producer-director Shawn Brady is getting quite a collection of gold trophies in his office.

For the second time in four years, he has won Emmy and Ohio Educational Broadcasting (OEBIE) awards for his work at the campus station. This spring his documentary video, "Music for Every Occasion: The DePue Family Musicians" received Emmys in the areas of cultural affairs programming and outstanding achievement in non-news programming (editing). The Emmys are awarded by the Cleveland chapter of the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences. The OBIE was for best cultural affairs production.

Brady said the focus of his work was not on the performance aspect of the DePues so much as "a family story, predominantly. I was interested in the uniqueness of a family of four boys, all studying music, and the role their father played in their development."

Dr. Wallace DePue, music composition and history, and his sons were very cooperative in giving Brady long interviews in which they discussed their lives and experiences. The program is a montage of "bits and pieces," said Brady, in which he has interwoven old family home movies, videotape made of the DePues in 1983, parts of a 1973 film of DePue's opera performance footage and the interview segments. Editing all the pieces together was tricky and Brady noted that the family has said they are very pleased with the results.

Others in the WBGU-TV office gave "critical support" to the project, said Brady. He credits Scott Kisabeth, the technical director, who played an important advisory role and Tim Westhoven, the station's photographer, for doing the "copy standing," transferring all the disparate material to slides so it could be re-shot, and for filming some of the interviews as well. Richard Mathey, BGSU choral director and a friend of the family who is featured prominently in the video, provided much background information from his long association with the DePues. Fritz Lalendorf, a former WBGU-TV employee, helped find corporate financing for the project. Rev. Jim Dumke, pastor of the Lutheran Church in Pemberville, did the narration, written by Brady, for the film for no charge.

Brady said the D. S. Brown Company, which has a family relationship with the DePues, provided a grant to fund the production and the station lent in-kind support by providing him use of equipment.

Brady said he became interested in the DePues when he was the producer of "Artbeat," a magazine show on Channel 27 featuring various area artists. He did a segment on them then but wanted to do a longer story about the family than the show's format could accommodate. Eventually he began work on the hour-long video. In making the program, time was his main frustration, he said.

Brady said of the DePues, "Theirs is a big story," and added he would actually have preferred a 90-minute production that would have allowed him to delve more into the DePues today as the sons have matured and begun to follow their separate paths. However, said Brady, he

Author, publisher Fred Bauer to receive alumni award

A New Jersey publisher and northwest Ohio native will receive the 1994 Distinguished Alumnus Award during summer commencement exercises Saturday (Aug. 6).

Fred Bauer, a noted writer and founder and president of Littlebrook Publishing Inc., Princeton, N.J., will be the 35th recipient of the award, the highest honor given by the Bowling Green Alumni Association.

Born in Montpelier, Bauer began his writing career at the age of 15 with the Montpelier Leader Enterprise. Also before graduating from Montpelier High School, he did some sports announcing for radio station WONW in Defiance.

He enrolled at Bowling Green in 1952 but his schooling was interrupted for two years to serve in the U.S. Army where he was stationed in

Fred Bauer

Hawaii. He returned to the University and graduated in 1957 and for the next several years was a reporter and editor for newspapers in Montpelier, Bryan and Fort Wayne. He also was a correspondent for The Blade in Toledo.

In 1960, Bauer turned his journalistic skills to broadcasting and for the next two years was sports director at WONW.

He next joined the staff of Guideposts Magazine in New York City, eventually becoming the publication's executive editor before launching his own publishing company in 1980.

Bauer has edited, authored or co-written numerous books, including the autobiography of George Beverly Shea, the Billy Graham Crusade gospel singer; a book on Everett Dirksen's final senatorial campaign; a book on Brooks Robinson, the Baltimore Hall of Fame third baseman; an autobiography of inspirational poet Helen Steiner Rice, and The Faith of America, about the life of illustrator Norman Rockwell.

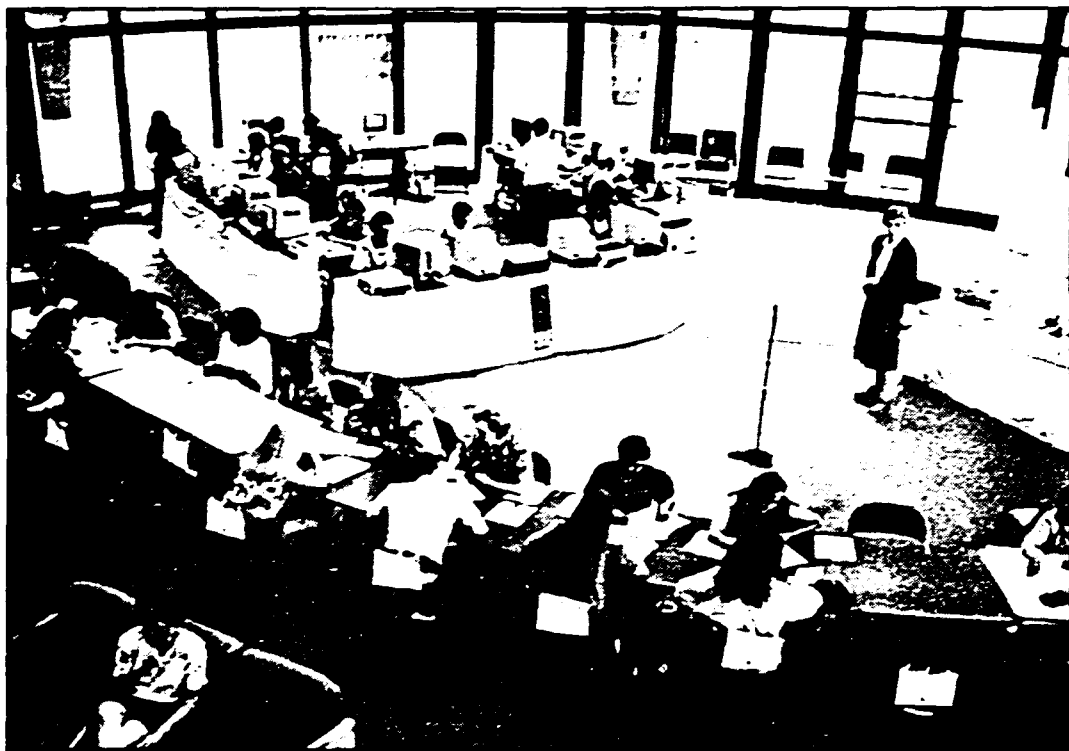

Inspirational stories about common occurrences in people's lives are a common theme of his writing and his articles have appeared in many of the country's leading periodicals, including several recent pieces in Reader's Digest. He also originated an annual devotional book, called Daily Guideposts, now in its 16th year which sells more than 700,000 copies annually.

In addition to his book publishing and writing, Bauer's combination of wry humor, insight and common sense have made him a popular public speaker around the country.

Summer hours to end Aug. 5

Summer hours in University offices will end Friday (Aug. 5). Beginning Monday, Aug. 8, regular work hours will resume. In most cases, offices will be open from 8 a.m.-noon and 1-5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Incoming freshmen participating in pre-registration sign up for classes in the forum of the Student Services Building. Approximately 2,800 students came to campus with their parents for pre-registration between June 27-July 22 with 200 more expected to sign in in August. During their day-and-a-half sessions the new BGSU students also buy books, get parking passes and photo IDs and attend various educational programs on how to prepare for campus life. In the evenings they were entertained by a cabaret show performed by undergraduates. Classes for fall semester begin Aug. 24.

SNEAK PREVIEWS

Did you know that Bowling Green State University houses the world's largest collection of fruit flies?

Four hundred species of fruit flies in 4,000 different strains reside at the campus. Several of the species are extinct in nature. The University serves as the National Drosophila Resource Center, supplying fruit flies internationally to scientists involved with basic genetics, genetics engineering, evolution and cancer research.

Seize your opportunity to see the fruit flies and other University highlights. Plan to attend BGSU's first ever all campus Open House on Sept. 24; fruit is optional.
