FOOD FOR THOUGHT

Get out your copy books and do the next exercise. Children place your arm flat on the desk and hold the wrist rigid, using an Clap with your finger tips. P. was a secret." This brings back memories to many of us who suffered copy-books and tedious writing for a long time. Now students have made a great step forward in the methods of teaching. The modern method of teaching requires far less time and effort than the old-fashioned methods of teaching. The new methods are economical and they fit the modern school, as the old-fashioned methods are not suitable for the modern school.

Y.W.C.A.

*All college men who are interested are cordially invited to attend the first meeting of the class year of the Y. M. C. A. Our cabinet met and planned a meeting that will be of interest to you. There are important events coming in the near future. Our annual ham-burger fry will be held one week from this Thursday night, Oct. 8. Other events of our organization follow. Let's all turn out to the Y. W. C. A. this week and try to do discover then whether it is worth our time from now on. A panel discussion will be held on some vital issues to every college man. Watch the bulletin board for our poster announcement.

G. B. GRADUATE TEACHES IN CANAL ZONE

Grady Goodson, recently a student at Bowling Green State University, entered the United States Naval Academy in Annapolis, Maryland, early this summer. "Hood," who has graduated from that institution in four years received his appointment on the basis of his high scholastic record while at the University. He is a member of the Commodores Fraternity, Book and Motor, Y. M. C. A. and is member of the local Order of DeMolay. Hood's many friends may be glad to know that already he has gained recognition both in classroom activities and in sports.
PRIVILEGES AND COURTESY...

According to late reports there are almost 1200 students enrolled in Bowling Green University. Other universities likewise report large enrolments. Yet interest in higher education, approximately nine out of ten young people of college age are not in college.

A few days ago this fact because we fear that the average college student takes his position too much for granted. Yet in the intricate machinery of mass education, he cannot realize his full potential. By resorting to rudeness he finally forced them over the brink. By being set apart from each other in their actions and also exaggerated conditions somewhat in the manner of mixers and he'll guarantee to make a success of University students to bowl at the bowling alleys any afternoon for a dime accompanied by his activity books—that he learned to live; they go to learn how to live.

Did You Know?

This year Harvard University is celebrating its three-hundredth anniversary. Once upon a time when the pioneers were noted for their rough and ready manners, there was a limit to the amount of respect that was doled out and enjoyed by the pioneers. Today, the Boggs family who move to town in the midst of troublous and changing times. We do not know where these changes are taking us, but in all fields they are tending in the direction of greater efficiency. Some colleges and technical schools, rather than the large high school, seem to be replacing the manual labor of the past. The person who is not awake to these changes will find that his way of living is outmoded in tomorrow's society. These facts would seem to emphasize the importance of higher education. When we realize that for every young person required in some classes.

Alas, in their remarks.

"Now, suppose," said the man, "what if you have a new library, a beautiful building, and just loads of books—what then?" (Editor's Note—watch for it.)

Amid all this freshman hubbub, it is perhaps not fair to name the "freshman" who seems to have the best spirit toward the oldimer. We realize that for every student receiving this type of education, there are nine who are not so fortunate, then we can realize the extent of our privilege and obligation.

It is a privilege, then, to attend Bowling Green State University. It is a privilege not only to avail ourselves of classes, but also to associate with people of highly varied interests. It is a privilege to live in an atmosphere that stimulates one to grow into a socially adaptable individual. There are few privileges, however, that do not entail obligations. Our obligation is to make the best use possible of all the facilities for growth offered by this institution. We cannot do less and be just to ourselves and to all who have made it possible for us to be here. Bowling Green has broken her past tradition and has also established a record for quality of university work and for richness of university life.

Seven Sister Scribbles

The Seven sisters opened a new fall term in the second and third weeks of September. We were all very happy to see the girls who had been away for a few days, and the campus was buzzing with excitement and activity.

Phraha Phrases

Meetings are starting. College life is here again. Of course at the first meeting we all exchange summer's gossip. "What did you do?" "I didn't do much."

All summer and M. B. still undecided. Lucky girl to have two men. L. G. plunged into the sea of matrimony during the summer. Have you seen E. B.'s little sister?

We haven't a Freshman in the house and we're worrying already about Christmas's day.

The Phraha House will have open house Sunday, Oct. 4th, from 3:00 till 5:30 p.m. at 136 S. Prospect St. Everyone is welcome.

Commoners

Greetings to all university men (yes, women too) from the Commoner's Fraternity. With a house full of good fellows and capable leaders elected we look forward to a very successful year at Bowling Green State University.

At our recent meeting, Earl Cray was elected president; Hall, to earl; this is, Grand Chief. We understand that H. B. Cravens, one of our members, is becoming accustomed to routine at Annapolis and is looking forward to a busy year at the Naval Academy.

In Shakespeare Class the other day, X. C. Long, one of our members, had trouble with his work. He asked, "What shall I do?"

I believe this pun is just about dry, so I'll sign off now.

3-Kay Kapers

Last Tuesday evening we had the most delightful picnic supper at the city park, with a band of 'solf' doing his best to please us by making the weather just about perfect. T. was a pleasant sight when he attended the regular meeting of the society, and meeting a reddish brown—sometimes black—and with the nimblest jellied pickles which should have discouraged even the most harebrained of us from believing that pickles would help! We all went home feeling like dandies. I'll assure you!

Did you ever matriculate twice in the same semester? A number of Freshmen girls have, and they seemed to enjoy doing it this time. Saturday evening we had a matriculation party including everything for a physical ed. major or a home ec. minor, etc. Even our delicious lunchroom course was a class in dietetics. The back yard was used as a gym while our front room was being used as a movie appreciation classroom. We 3-Kays made excellent teachers—when we weren't matriculating.

I hope we'll see all of you at cut open house next Sunday evening. We will. Six. We will. We will present to greet all of you with a true three-kay welcome.

Passing Attack Overpowers B.G.

W. R. 40; B. G. 0

The Bowling Green State University Falcons ran against a strong passing game Saturday night at the hands of Eastern Reserve and lost to them 40 to 0. The game wasn't as bad as the score sounds as Reserve was unable to gain by pouncing on the line and had to use the passing game.

Reserve counted 13 first downs and tried 21 passes. B. G. counted 7 first downs and tried 25 passes.

FALCON ELEVEN MEET CAPITAL SATURDAY

Local Gridders Aim For Victory

CONFERENCE SCHEDULE OPENED

The Falcon football team will climb into a bus Saturday morning headed for Columbus where the B. G. eleven will meet a worthy foe in Capital University in the afternoon. Capital was successful in defeating the Falcons last season and the local boys will be out for revenge.

Concentrating upon a swift, speedy attack, relying somewhat upon a passing game, the Ohio-kerned coated lads will shoot the works in an effort to add this game to the victory column.

J. B. Inman, Steve Potton, Tuffy Henderich, and Wayne Stewart will probably get the call in the backfield with Pick, Thatcher, Batscon, Kuhl, and Bushing ready for substitution at any time. Harland Kinney will probably make the game as an injured foot has put him on the shelf.

In the line we expect to see.

such performers as Chestwood and Clingman or Smith at tackles, Boast and Newlove at tackles, Detson and Herbert or Young at guards, and the dependable "Mitch" Wodzinski at center. This is only a guess as to the lineup. As starting players could be picked from Front, Burdi, Eichanor, Hagemeyer, Corduroy, and Trolley, Phantom Heckler, junior tackle will probably see action in the backfield if he recovered sufficient-by a hay fever attack.
