Silver Anniversary

To Be Celebrated June 3 And 4

Dr. Williams Announces Plans; Bricker Invited

The twenty-fifth anniversary of Bowling Green State University will be celebrated on June 3 and 4, according to a release from Dr. R. H. Williams announced yesterday.

The program will begin on Saturday, June 3, with an alumni dinner. A representative of the first graduating class will speak, and Robert Long, senior assistant, will preside.

Members of the faculty who were here in the first year will be invited. They are: Dr. R. H. Williams, Dr. W. L. Brown, Dr. W. G. Davis, Prof. W. B. Witty, and Prof. K. L. Yoder. Other alumni from the first classes will also be introduced.

Four smaller signs designed for use in the next year are: "This danceband is the most familiar in the history of Bowling Green State University," as signed by Mr. E. S. Brown, editor of the campus newspaper, and "Four dances every night. You've heard the eariest and the latest," as signed by the editors of the university's literary magazine.

The program for the main celebration will be announced by Prof. G. W. Beattie, general secretary. "Bowling Green State University," it is said, "is the only university that can afford to celebrate its birthday only a year after its anniversary, it being necessary to celebrate the birthday only a year after its anniversary, it being necessary to celebrate the birthday only a year after its anniversary, because that is the only year in which there are no other anniversaries to celebrate."
A WISE STEP

One of the most striking transitions through which a college man passes in his undergraduate career is the change from the bare, sprawling high school to a well-developed and polished college campus. The change is so complete that the college student is surprised to find himself settled in a real position in the world today.

A THAT IN YOUR WARDROBE

The Ohio State student in the years when all the boys were wearing the same blue uniform has grown up to the year when his campus mates are 'dressed up' or 'dressed to kill.' Along with the swing of collegians from bare gymnasiums to well-maintained halls is the changeover towards more and more varied wardrobes. It is their opinion that a hat is more than just a hat and that the common saying, "He who wins the race to the finish line is the winner," is far the focal point of the casual as well as the formal dressing. So it is that our present-day student is interested in what his classmates are wearing and is accordingly studying his own personal wardrobe. It is a well-known fact that "love me, love my hat," and that a boy should take care of his clothes and personal appearance and so should the girl. Students are adding "life" studies to their class curriculums in the study of clothes and social graces and are accordingly studying outside of the regular college curriculum.

One significant result of this personal appearance analysis is the growth of the campus dress code. What was once merely the setting of a few boys in the university wardrobe are now turning into as complete and well-planned a dress code in a given college as in a social club or fraternity. It is said that the original dress code was invented by Cornell University, and is now being followed by numerous other clubs and fraternities, as well as in high schools and colleges.

The right hat worn in the right way is what makes men feel that now is the best time of the year.

NOT OUR INTENTION

There have been some students who read our editorial last week on the subject of campus dress codes. They were those who felt we were belittling the fine work of the student dressers in their own eyes and who were substantially disturbed. But it is the wise college man who will not let the mists of yesterday (or even tomorrow) dim his perception. It is the wise student who will not be swayed by the wind of fashion, but will stand firm in the face of the dress code and try to make up his mind about what he should wear and stick to it.

Harry Mason really got his prime English paper in this issue. He wrote a very fine piece last week. Perhaps his advice should be taken.

There is a definite formality about us now that we are dressed up. We are not as casual as we used to be, and the dress code is taking over. It is a good thing that it is, for it helps to keep us from taking things too seriously. The dress code is a way of life.

This is what we are trying to do: to dress with the times and to keep up with the changes. It is important that we do, for it is a way of life.
