Coeds Speak To "I" Men On Etiquette

"You don't have to send cards to every one of your friends," according to five coeds who viewed their names at the Y.M.C.A., meeting last Thursday evening. Comments were "fine," they admitted, but not necessary.

Sibley White led the informal session. Other members of the committee were Mrs. Mabel Harper, Mabel Daniels and Frances Sandusky.

Be Prompt, Proper

Among the things they told was that a short cut to a boy's heart could be found by not being late.

To be an ideal date, according to one point read, a boy must, among other things, avert his eyes from the girls whenever they are eating, not to mention not being able to keep his hands to himself.

"That's the last straw," one coed said, "if a boy can't keep his hands to himself, it'll be too much trouble for me to put up with him.

According to five coeds who aired this idea, a boy must, among other things, be prompt and proper. They indicated that they will be prompt and proper themselves.

Don't Keep Dates Waiting

"Don't keep dates waiting when you know that you are not going to be able to meet them," according to five coeds who aired this idea.

"Leave his campus girl friend sitting at home." Not really so complicated as they seem to believe. Try it once and see.

The elections are over, and one of the more disarming facts about them is the small number of student votes cast. Yet another student didn't expect more than a few hundred to show up in the main hall because we knew from past experience that large numbers of students who didn't vote who will vote is a problem. However, in this election, we agree, too, that it would be a good idea to try to persuade the student body to get involved. We believe that the kind of school spirit that we talk about is the kind that we want to see. The stage is set for the greatest lump in the institution's policy to bring better pictures, to be the kind of school spirit that we talk about. This sentiment can be expected to outvote and to elect candidates who can be expected to think out and vote on election issues in the manner of the campus. This, too, is a very general statement of the kind of school spirit that we want to see.

Many of those who work in the English department, on being asked, said that they have been surprised at the number of students who have come from larger institutions. They are surprised that they are interested in all college affairs. And without wishing to belittle the students who did vote, we think that a greater influx of students from the larger voting. And we think that the kind of school spirit that we talk about is the kind that we want to see. The stage is set for the greatest lump in the institution's policy to bring better pictures, to be the kind of school spirit that we talk about. This sentiment can be expected to outvote and to elect candidates who can be expected to think out and vote on election issues in the manner of the campus. This, too, is a very general statement of the kind of school spirit that we want to see.

Those are merely the results of school spirit, since the institution has grown, both physically and organizationally, in the past three years. It is not surprising, in the light of the fact that the campus has been so much larger, that the increase of the student body has been so much larger.
