Where Is The Spirit of '76?

Tomorrow is the anniversary of the great event in American history... the signing of the Declaration of Independence. When the average American thinks of the Fourth of July, visions of the Liberty Bell, the Declaration of Independence, and fireworks float before his eyes. He seldom considers the significance of the event.

For there is a small group of people in a new land dared to defy the deep-seated prejudices and conservatism of the rest of the world. Those people had self-confidence and the courage of their convictions, and they did what they believed was right.

Today many people are afraid. They lack security and self-confidence. They turn to their neighbors, their social institutions, their government for help. They lack self-reliance. They listen to other opinions and they have none of their own. People are run along an assembly-line; and the news-today will be covered by earth and seeded tomorrow it will be a beauty spot in Bowling Green.

And tomorrow is the anniversary of a day which was 'right.'

Eyes-To Be Remedied

Yesterday it was just a hole in the ground, today it's a heap of rubbish, to-morrow it will be covered by earth and seeded. — J.N.

On The Road

By ROBERT HABENSTEIN

Editor's Note: The following article was re-ceived by mail from Robert Habenstein enroute to Mexico City on a hitch-hiking trip with Ed Christian.

Laredo, Texas, June 26—Ed and I arrived here late yesterday afternoon. We had a far- pleasantly surprising visit to Mexico. We found it an easy country to get around in. We found the people friendly and pleasant. For instance, the bus conductor would wave but the less they stop. The less they stop the faster you all from?” It never fails.

Plans by the Service Department are sure to answer these and other questions on the subject. Citizens expected to have their mail delivered much more promptly. The City Hall will establish by next summer to shape it into a mound of sizeable proportions. The inside tank houses a reservoir of grass and flowers. A park-like border of soil and shrubs will complete the sylvan picture.

To those of us who enjoy a beautiful campus, it comes easy to extend a vote of appreciation to the Service Director and his staff of workers: a much needed program well planned. — J.N.

Lower Temperatures Cox stated that at one time however, state inspectors had him lower the thermo controls even more in order to preserve the crumbling ceiling, which brings us to the reasons why this cork composition job has almost early signs of deterioration.

It seems that instead of hanging down a convex roof, architects ordered square pieces cut and stuck into place with glue. Naturally, when water condenses, it seeps into open cracks and eventually melts the past. Mr. Cox said that the tradesmen responded with some satisfaction to the complete replacement in August. Outside of these uncontrollable elements, there is no fault in the performance of the tiling, machinery, and equipment. Mr. Cox has made every effort to keep this pool regulated with standard requirements and in the best condition of condition.

His Predictions Come True

EDWIN L. MOSELEY

Recent Rains Predicted
By Prof. E. L. Moseley

The rainy weather that has plagued Bowling Green during the last month and has every sign of continuing into the future, has been predicted by Bowling Green State University's naturalist, Professor-Emeritus Edwin L. Moseley.

For many years a biology professor on the campus, Moseley has, for the past few years, been working on a "ninety-year precipitation cycle" which he has worked out in great detail after extensive study and research. His findings have been published.

Data Published
Moseley claims that there will be a drought from the latter part of 1946 to 1947, and another one late in 1957 and throughout most of 1958. Abundant or excessive rain would follow both droughts, Moseley states.
