University areas to be restructured
Dobb named executive V.P.

To create greater cross-divisional integration of seven related units, President Sidney A. Ribeau has announced an administrative restructuring that includes the creation of the position of executive vice president and the appointment of Linda Dobb to serve in that capacity effective May 1. Information Technology Services; Libraries and Learning Resources; Continuing Education, International & Summer Programs; WBGU-TV, Northwest Ohio Educational Television Foundation; Affirmative Action, and Human Resources will report to the executive vice president. Dobb will report to the president.

All of the units are involved in the dissemination of information and the development of technological and human resources. Creation of the executive vice president position, Ribeau said, will provide these units with maximum support for the greatest effectiveness, growth and advancement.

"As dean of Libraries and Learning Resources for five years and as interim provost since last June, Dr. Dobb has a proven track record for accomplishing goals, achieving positive outcomes and seeing issues through a University-wide lens," Ribeau said. "I am confident that this organizational change will strategically position us to effectively address the educational needs of our learning community, our region, the state of Ohio and the nation."

"I'm very excited that President Ribeau is giving me this opportunity," Dobb said. "I'm hopeful that we will realize his vision for synergy and growth of this institution. It is really an exciting time to be at BGSU."

Student housing application process to go online

Registering for fall campus housing will become considerably easier when the online housing application process is in operation. Returning students will be able to choose a room and a meal plan on the Web from their own computers, using point-and-click technology.

The new system will be previewed by University staff next week at a demonstration in Hayes Hall. The "Housing DR2 subsystem" goes "live" Feb. 16 according to University Web Project Manager Deb Weiser. The change is part of the University's ongoing move toward more Web applications.

Students wishing to keep their rooms will be the first to use the system. Next will come weeks for seniors, juniors and sophomores and for special-interest groups. After that, the system will be open to anyone who has not yet signed up for housing or who wants to change room assignments.

"What this means is that students will have more control over their housing selection. Provided they make all payments on time, they should get the rooms they request online," said Ute Lowery, assistant director for administration in residence life.

About 80 percent of returning on-campus students is expected to be served by the system. Students with handicaps or who need other special consideration will continue to process their applications through the housing office, Weiser said.

At the end of each period, housing staff may make reassignments, Weiser said, to allow for changes necessary to conserve space or for other reasons. For that reason, the Web site contains a disclaimer warning students they are not guaranteed to get the room they have chosen.

The new method of registering for housing is expected to be both faster and more considerate of upperclassmen. Previously, students received and returned postcards stating their preferences, which made for a "first-come, first-serve" procedure.

Students will log on to the University Internet using a password and, with the system's "real-time databasing," browse the list of rooms available at that moment. They may specify a room, floor or hall and a roommate if desired and then choose a meal plan. Another screen allows them to compare rates for graduate and undergraduate, main campus and Firelands housing and dining plans.

Students will be informed immediately of their room and meal assignments after entering their requests. They will also be notified right away if there is a problem so they can amend and resubmit their request. The system will store lifestyle preference information about applicants, such as whether they tend to be neat, are early risers, prefer quiet, to help residence life match roommates.

Weiser has been responsible for designing the "user interface," the portion of the system that students use, making it clear and easy to understand. Sue Tomor, systems analyst in Information Technology Services, has handled the other end, writing programs that access the system's data.

They have worked closely with residence life staff members Jim Zentmeyer, associate director for housing and operations, and Harriet Sockrider, administrative assistant, to gather information and create the components of the old system into the new, computerized method.

From the president...

I want to thank the entire Bowling Green State University community for all of your hard work and commitment on behalf of the 1999 United Way Campaign. Each of you again demonstrated the spirit of volunteerism by honoring human dignity and the importance of committing ourselves to social action.

I am delighted to report that BGSU raised more than $82,000 in this year's United Way campaign, an increase over last year's campaign total of $79,000.

This year our campaign focused on addressing the concerns of our young people. With this in mind, all donations with no specific donor designation went to support 15 United Way programs around northwest Ohio. Clearly, the most important investment we can make in the lives of our children and young adults is to show our concern and commitment to helping them lead fulfilling lives.

As we continue to work toward our goal of becoming the premier learning community in Ohio, I am ever mindful that higher education must give back to the society that sustains it. Our institutional support of the United Way is a testament to living by that philosophy. I thank you for your generosity and for making a difference in the lives of others.

Sincerely,
Sidney A. Ribeau
President

Firelands College celebrates diversity
