With many former college men called into the Army, and with even more accepting well-paying jobs in defense industries, it looks as if the enrollment next fall is going to be lower than in previous years. And it looks also as if the women students will again gain the edge on the male population.

It has only been in the last two or three years that there have been more women than men on the campus, and then only by a narrow margin. Now, the tables will again be turned. If things are as bad as they have been during the whole session, Sadie Hawkins dance and three times the size of BG. Bowling Green is recognized by national, regional and state college accrediting agencies.

The University theatre brings to Bowling Green excellent dramatic entertainment. We are frequently addressed by eminent authorities in a variety of fields. For those who like social life, Bowling Green has plenty to offer. Social activities are planned for almost every Friday and Saturday evening during the school year. The inter-fraternity dance, featuring a name band, and the Sadie Hawkins dance are the two social high spots of the year.

So far, friends are a-bout BG, and invite them down to look the place over. We're sure it won't be time wasted.

Last Issue . . .

This, the last issue of the summer edition of the Bee Gee News, brings to a close our journalistic efforts at Bowling Green State University. Two years on the staff of the Bee, a lot of work: fun and plenty of headaches, but the good times more than made up for the bad.

I would like to thank the staff for their cooperation, even in the sweltering weather of a Bowling Green summer. They are the heart of the paper, without them there would be no News.

I would also like to thank the faculty and administration, and the Associate Collegiate Press to outstanding college newspapers.

The number of Pro-Nazis in this country is becoming greater according to recent New Deal analysis. If the farmers now who are at fault, a regional director of the AAA charges that protests, emanating from the lower Michigan area, against the New Deals extreme wheat penalty are inspired by pro-Axis sentiment. It is obvious that the administration is becoming fed up with people who don't know what is good for them. A little regulation, under the guise of the AAA, is not worse than the regulation that is true of the farmers or anyone else in the regulated groups. The farmers cannot defend standard or pay the penalty. The individual must work for the betterment of the group. Undoubtedly it is better. No matter how you look at it the Japanese have about as much right to Indo-China as we have to Ireland. They claim the more was purely a protective one. It was such insofar as the protection of Japan's interest was concerned. They are now in a much better position to jump on the neck of the British islanders. But it is greater and so is the possibility that it is providing the Zaps with an unwholesome proximity to the Philippines. Japan is at present so often encircled by the interventionists here. There is much talk in Washington now of hopping Hitler while he is busy in eastern Europe. Nothing of our predicament if Japan chose to move to "hang one" on our Pacific fleet, while we were busy in the Atlantic. Our two ocean navy is largely on paper. Italy's Edelweiss might prove the effectiveness of fighting with paper.

We are now being told that it is vital to the wellbeing of the people to keep a good army, to try, that we keep the draftsmen in service for the duration of the emergency. Were our affairs as bad as we are led to believe, we could surely forecast this necessity last fall? What about sending the draftsmen anywhere the President sees fit? We have been putting our faith in the people's good sense. If this is also necessary. But It Is Not In The best Interests Before Congress. American people don't like to have a fast one pulled on them. They prefer theirs in small doses.

By Betty Lemmon

It is easy enough to say that democracy is dead. It is just as easy for one to sit back and think that democracy is dead. But it is not as easy to discover that democracy exists—"all's well with the world."

Such an attitude is both easy and fallacious. It is borne out of a mind. Democracy is not a matter to be had or to exist. democracy, like any other philosophy, is not an "ism" but a way of thinking. If we are to say that democracy is dead, we are to imply that the minds of the people are dead to that way of living.

European Fascism and Communism have shown how easy it is for man to forget the basic principles on which democracy is founded. It is true, "Man is not an atom" but a whole. It shows us, as Americans, that democracy is not anything that we can afford to forget. It is a way of living, in terms of the human being, in terms of society as a whole. It is such reconstruction of the social philosophy that will keep our nation from the same forces of Hitlerism, not airplanes or cannon.

The time must come, I think, when the phrase "European individualism" is considered as treasonous to our democratic way of life. It is time to stop thinking of the individual, "the man," as a thing by itself, isolated from other things that are now receiving public condemnation.

In observing traffic signals, man has learned that his thinking of himself in terms of other human beings. The complexity of the problems of millions of cars forces him to this manner of governing his life in an automobile. Just as surely the democracy of society can find no limit to men to work out social problems in the same manner. Otherwise democracy must "surely perish in the minds of men."

Fremont Judge Gives Library Set Of Books

Appellate Judge A. W. Overby, of Fremont, has presented to the Bowling Green State university library a complete set of the Yearbooks of the United States Department of Agriculture, from 1862, the year the Department of Agriculture was established, down to date.

Judge Overby, who was a member of the Committee on Agriculture in the 64th and 65th Congresses from the Thirteenth Ohio district, was able by continued effort during his four years in Congress to accumulate the set. The earlier volumes of the set are now unavailable.

With the set was also presented a twenty-five volume bound set of the Bulletins of the Department of Agriculture, containing one of each of such bulletins issued up to 1920 and several volumes of the Bulletins of the Bureau of Ethnology.

Both of these books of sets may now be current by obtaining copies each year as issued, but complete sets of either will not be found only in the library of the Department at Washington or in the libraries of some of the leading agricultural colleges and universities in the country.

Edwin Foster and Glen Cm- do, the twins in the play, also gave a creditable performance. Their simultaneous ejaculations must have required a great deal of rehearsing.

Moseley Book Published

Former students Dr. E. L. Moseley, professor emeritus of biology, will be interested in the recently published book, “Milk Sickness Caused by White Snakeroot,” a 170-page treatise on a disease which has baffled scientists for generations and about which many mysteries and misconceptions have centered.

Dr. Moseley’s work, the culmination of a study of the disease begun 35 years ago when the author was a teacher at Sandusky, has been eagerly awaited by scientists and physicians who agree that it is the first exhaustive and authoritative work on the subject.

The book represents the findings of extensive experimental and field study conducted by Professor Moseley, some of it completed as recently as last year.

The work was published jointly by the Ohio Academy of Science and the author. Dr. Moseley is a past president of the Academy.

Selectees Should Be Kept One Year, Survey Reveals

By LLOYD DULL

That the period of service for selectees should not be extended beyond one year is the sentiment expressed by a major portion of the young men on our campus who are eligible to be kept in the draft in the near future, according to a poll just conducted.

Over half of the men contacted replied that we should retain National Guardsmen longer than a year. The conclusion drawn is that guardsmen should be kept to help the regular army enrollees in illustrating the new selectees in modern military tactics.

Some of the opinions given are:

Clayce Leotherman—“As we are not in war, I believe at the end of one year’s service the draftmen should be allowed to return home. If it is so necessary to keep these men in camp why not raise their wages to a decent amount and give them the privilege of volunteering?”

Bruce Esterly—“Since our government made an agreement to keep the selectees for one year, I think it is the duty of the government to release them after that period of time. Furthermore, I think that one year of concentrated training should be sufficient for any competent man to grasp the fundamentals of warfare.”

Morton Burgin—“I favor extension of service if our government deemed it necessary. Our government officials certainly have more information on the military needs and probably use of an army than the average citizen. In this crisis force and preparation are vital on short notice.”

Jack Spencer—“I think that the guardsmen should be retained because the present army set-up calls for a continual flow of untrained men into training camps. These new men must be guided by experienced military authorities. One year is sufficient for the draftees.”
