New addresses will speed student mail delivery

Beginning Jan. 15, all those eagerly awaited packages and letters from home will reach BGSU students more quickly with the advent of a new address system for residence halls and Greek units, says Cheryl Purefoy, director of materials handling.

Each residence hall and fraternity and sorority house has been assigned a street address which will allow for more automated mail sorting by the United States Postal Service and reduce the amount of handling by University postal service employees.

The new addresses will also aid the Bowling Green Police Department in identifying and locating buildings in case of emergencies. Purefoy said, "I think it will be a positive step for everyone involved," she said. "This pre-sorting will enhance mail service delivery to students and the entire campus community."

She added that the changes will not affect the process of inter-campus mail addressing and delivery.

Purefoy has been collaborating for the past year and a half with the U.S. Postal Service. Bowling Green City Planner Rick Ketzleburger and then-acting assistant fire chief Jack Nimke developed an address system for campus residences. The offices of capital planning and residence life have participated in the addressing process as well.

Since the University has its own ZIP code, we didn't want to lose the unique identity of our ZIP code," Purefoy said. "The new partnership with the USPS will allow the University to make use of the USPS's automation to separate student mail from the University's business mail."

Since freshmen tend to receive the most mail (an average of 6.41 pieces a week), the biggest impact will be felt in that area, Purefoy said.

Students living on campus received a letter about the changeover before they left for winter break, and their parents also were sent a letter discussing the proper format for addressing mail to the students. The possibility of pre-sorting for the buildings is still being discussed, Purefoy said.

The upcoming issue of auxiliary services' quarterly newsletter, Service Attractions, will contain a listing of all the addresses.

Firelands dean candidates to visit

Four candidates for the position of dean of BGSU's Firelands will visit BGSU this month, with interviews on both the Firelands and main campuses. All will begin their visits by meeting with Provost John Fields and Armenian American Savage, dean of the College of Technology and chair of the dean search committee.

"I am totally impressed with all four candidates," Savage commented, "and I feel certain we have our next dean from among them."

All open forums for the four candidates will be held at 3 p.m. in the East Lounge at Firelands.

• James Ciredder is dean of the Walter E. Heller College of Business Administration at Roosevelt University in Chicago. He will interview and hold his forum at Firelands today (Jan. 16) and will be on main campus tomorrow (Jan. 17).

• Larry Froehlich is executive dean of the College of Education and Human Services at Marshall University in West Virginia. He will be on main campus Thursday (Jan. 18) and at Firelands on Friday (Jan. 19) for meetings and his open forum.

• Paul Panek, academic dean at Ohio State University at Newark, will be on the Firelands campus Jan. 22, when he will hold his forum, followed by an interview on main campus Jan. 23.

• James Smith, dean of the College of Education at Indiana University at South Bend, will be on main campus Jan. 24 and at Firelands on Jan. 25, including his open forum.

So close ... United Way nears its goal

The University is only a small step away from earning a Pillar of the Community Award and reaching its goal for donations to the United Way, says JoAnn Kroll, director of career services and BGSU United Way 2000 campaign manager.

The benchmark for the Pillar award is $100,000, and BGSU has raised $95,000 so far. A record 700 employees have donated or pledged to the campaign, Kroll said.

"BGSU faculty, staff, retirees, students and their parents have given so much. We want to bring this award home as the ultimate recognition of their generosity," she said.

The deadline for the award is Jan. 24. Kroll urges all who have not yet pledged to act now to help reach that goal. For more on how to participate, call Kroll at 2-2356.
