New library dean comes to BGSU by way of South Africa

Lorraine J. Haricombe, associate dean for the public service division of Northern Illinois University Libraries, has been named dean of libraries and learning resources. The appointment is effective at the end of June.

As dean, Haricombe will oversee 25 full-time faculty, 80 full-time staff members, 250 part-time student staff members, and collections totaling to more than two million volumes.

Haricombe has served as associate dean at Northern Illinois since 1998. The prior six years she was head of the circulation department at NIU and was involved in library and statewide initiatives to prepare libraries for emerging changes in the profession, including initiatives to serve regional distance education centers.

From 1975-86, she was library director at Peninsula Technikon in the Republic of South Africa.

Haricombe received a bachelor's degree and a graduate degree from the University of the Western Cape in the Republic of South Africa and a diploma in higher education from the University of South Africa. She earned both her master's degree and doctorate in library and information science from the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign.

She has written several publications and co-edited the book, Creating the Agile Library for a Changing Environment, published in 1998 by Greenwood Press.

Leadership society inducts new members

Two alumni—one a BGSU staff member and the other a county official—a faculty member and a number of students have been tapped for membership into the BGSU circle of Omicron Delta Kappa, the most prestigious collegiate leadership honor society in the nation. They were inducted during ceremonies held April 6.

The new members include BGSU alumnus Alan Mayberry, Wood County prosecuting attorney, Janet Parks, sport management, and Paul Krebs, director of intercollegiate athletics.

Mayberry received his bachelor's degree in political science at BGSU in 1975 and his law degree at the University of Toledo in 1978. He was named Wood County assistant prosecuting attorney in 1980 and was promoted a year later to chief assistant prosecuting attorney, a position he held until being elected to his current post for the first time in 1988.

Latino Issues Conference looks at nation

New York Daily News columnist Juan Gonzalez, winner of the 1998 George Polk Award in journalism, will keynote the seventh annual Latino Issues Conference to be held Thursday (April 12) in 101 Olscamp Hall. Gonzalez will discuss "A History of Latinos in America."

The day-long event will feature lectures and panel discussions related to the theme "A Profile of Our America." The conference also will feature sessions titled "U.S.-Latin American Relations," "Latinos in the Arts and Mass Media," "Between Work and Music" and "Latino Mural: Voice, Dance and Ensemble."

Among the speakers are music columnist Ramiro Burr, writer Lucretia Guerrero, and television producer Heli Sota.

Sponsors of the conference include the Latino Student Union, University Activities Organization, Multicultural Activities, Latino Cultural Arts Committee, JUNTOS, Sigma Lambda Delta international fraternity, Office of Student Affairs, the Latino Networking Committee and Sigma Lambda Gamma sorority.

Admission is free but there is a charge for lunch. For reservations to attend, call 2-2642. See Monitor online for more details on the conference.

Transformation Project begins Victim advocate to serve students, staff

BGSU's Transformation Project, aimed at stopping violence against women, has taken two big steps forward with the recent addition of two staff members. Michelle Clossick is the project coordinator, and Deidra Bennett is the victim advocate. Within a few weeks the third person in the project, the community educator, is expected to be in place as well, said Mary Krueger, director of the Women's Center.

Bowling Green's project is the only one in Ohio and one of 20 nationwide to receive funding from the U.S. Department of Justice this year to address violent crimes against women on college campuses. BGSU is also unusual in that it is the only project committed to providing equal attention to employees as students, according to Krueger, the author of the $400,000, two-year grant.

"I believe this project has the single biggest potential of any initiative to change the climate for women at BGSU with the exception of the creation of the Women's Center," Clossick said.

Overall climate change—a change in the ingrained culture of fear and the threat of violence against women—is the transformation the title refers to, the three said. The goal is to change individual lives through education and intervention, to hold perpetrators accountable and to help guide institutional policies. Education will focus on stopping the "blame the victim" attitude that still prevails even among young women, Krueger said, and emphasizing accountability on the part of male offenders and appropriate consequences for them.

Krueger said the Office of Human Resources has given "incredible support" for the project. Rebecca Ferguson, assistant vice president for human resources, and BGSU Police Officer Anthony Dotson have participated in the quarterly training required by the grant.

In her role as advocate, Bennett is available to any student or employee who has been a victim of domestic violence, sexual assault or stalking at any time, whether immediately after the incident or years later. A licensed social worker, she has a strong background in victim advocacy, having worked as a clinical therapist with victims of violence and with the YWCA Battered Women's Shelter in Toledo and at a number of other agencies.

It is important for women to know they need not be interested in bringing charges against their assailant or in getting involved in the legal system to use her services, Bennett said. She is available for everything from crisis intervention in the aftermath of an assault to simply talking with victims. For those who do choose to pursue legal or civil avenues, she will accompany them if they desire. She is very familiar with all the legal and medical resources available to victims and works closely with Behavioral Connections in Bowling Green to provide advocacy for their clients who are affiliated with the University. Confidentiality is strictly maintained, she said.

Contact Bennett at 2-2190 or deidrab@bgnnet.bgsu.edu. Her office is in 105-A Hanna Hall.

Clossick, a social worker, is already familiar with the Bowling Green campus, having been an instructor in family and consumer sciences and coordinator of the Partnerships for Community Action project called Peace Begins at Home, a domestic violence study. She has also worked in marriage and family therapy.

Contact her at 2-7253 or mlcloss@bgnnet.bgsu.edu. Her office is in 106 Hanna Hall.

Parks, who has taught at Bowling Green since 1965, is the author of numerous books and articles and a founding editor of The Journal of Sport Management. A former chair of the Sport Management Division of the School of Human Movement, Sport and Leisure Studies, she is now graduate studies coordinator for the school.

She has coached women's golf, track and tennis during her tenure at Bowling Green, and conducted numerous research projects in the areas of sexist language, gender issues in sport, and career development and job satisfaction in sport management.

Krebs became director of intercollegiate athletics at BGSU in the spring of 1999. A 1978 graduate of Bowling Green, where he earned a bachelor's degree in business administration, he completed a master's degree in athletic administration at Ohio State University in 1981.

He serves on the University's Crisis Intervention Committee, among others, and chairs the Student Affairs Training and Development Committee.

Brief steam-plant shutdown planned

The rehabilitation of the Central Heating Plant tunnel and addition of back-up steam and condensate mains is nearing completion, according to Robert Boucher, design and construction. In order to make final connections and revisions to the tie-ins to the campus steam distribution loop near Shatzel Hall, the campus steam system will need to be shut down briefly.

The shutdown is planned for 8 a.m. Friday, May 18, and should last until noon on Sunday, May 20. During this time there will be no hot water on campus. Also affected will be other steam-dependent processes such as in the dining halls.

Boucher said the shutdown was planned for these days to cause minimal disruption of services on campus.

Date change

The ICS Lecture by Sharona Ben-Tov, "A Father's Secrets," originally scheduled for April 5 has been rescheduled to April 20. It will begin at 3:30 p.m. in 117 Olscamp Hall.

Correction

An incorrect phone number for reservations for the Easter Buffet on April 15 appeared in last week's Monitor. The correct number is 2-6951.
