Anatolia is a biannually tourism and hospitality research journal which aims to contribute to the dissemination of knowledge through publication of high quality peer-reviewed research papers, reports and book reviews, while serving as a unique forum for case studies. Through its updates on Mediterranean tourism, Anatolia also aims to heighten awareness of the Mediterranean region as a significant player in international tourism. Anatolia is dedicated to the provision of constructive, objective, and timely reviews of research papers through a double-blind review process by internationally well respected scholars. Anatolia welcomes submissions based upon both primary research and reviews in such vital areas as:

- ◆ Tourism and hospitality operations
- ◆ Marketing and consumer behavior
- ◆ Economics
- ◆ Human resource management
- ◆ Strategic management
- ◆ Attitude research
- ◆ Planning and development
- ◆ Cross-cultural and multicultural management issues
- ◆ Research methodology, including quantitative and qualitative methods
- ◆ Mediterranean tourism

Authors are also encouraged to submit research notes, book reviews, conference reviews, case studies, and thesis/dissertation abstracts.
