The magazine "Newswear," in a recent article credited Gregor Piatigorsky, who plays here next Wednesday evening, February 17 at 8 p.m., with a "cello renaissance." The editorial writer of "Newswear" wrote: "In receiving

Hats Off In Bowling Green

About once every year it is found necessary to remind a percentage of the men of our University that they are not, and not only high school boys, we are reminded of those men who persist in wearing their hats inside the university buildings.

This practice is not only noticeable on our campus, but is inconsiderable that this habit has gotten to such an extent that even-...worn inside buildings' is a bad habit to get into at this matter. It is now up to the men of this Green campus.

Throughout the past semester, this practice has been noticeable, but during the past summer it has become considerable. It is to such an extent that we can no longer look back and say, 'What's the matter? There is little to be done regarding this matter, so far as the faculty is concerned. It is simply a matter of assumption, and even the students themselves, there are several suggestions whereby this habit can be stopped. Probably it is, eventually will warrant its complete abolition.

In the First place, the various fraternities and Kohl Hall could establish some sort of unwritten law, outlawing the practice. In this way, by the percentage of rules, the men would soon find that the practice was frowned upon. It is not only unnoticeable in the residence halls. Secondly, if such a step were taken, the good example that would set would probably be followed. Probably it is, eventually, all men living off-campus would accept the unwritten law.

The women, too, could help a great deal in this matter. If they were to show their disapproval, by making it known this is, it is very possible that the practice would not happen from the Bowling Green campus.

That is all that can be said regarding this matter. It is now up to the men of this University to see for themselves that their hats worn inside buildings is a bad habit to get into.

Let's see if it isn't possible to make Bowling Green State University, not only for its athletic teams, but also for the manners of its students.

Newspaper Sports Editor

Elmer Brown, Sports Editor of the News, became the second member of the Bee Gee News staff to leave school last week. Last week it was Cupid who left the News without its Managing Editor, Dotty Salisbury, and now, for the issue, Elmer Brown signs thirty for the University for a position with the Army, Friday.

Elmer is a native of Bowling Green, Kentucky. After handling the newspaper Fall, wrote headlines, and managed the sport column in the "Sports Briefs" every week. He covered each football game at home and on the road last fall, thereby giving the local fans a real eyewitness account of the happenings.
