Most of us, the boys who are leaving and those still here, are saying it will be a long time before we see them again. They will be going into something new and exciting, but also something difficult. Their education and training will be a major part of the effort to fight for our country. But we shall have to accept all the sacrifices.

What are the things these boys whom we have known for a year, two, three, four years, going into? How do we describe it? Think of the Near between classes, bridges, games, parties. Think of the distant memory of sundays, warm spring days at the beach, the sweet-scented dawns, formally frilly. They'll think of us. And they'll think of the food they complained so heartily about, the fellows they got along with, the girls they fell in love with. They'll remember that P when they get their grades, so that they can have a chance to graduate.

Good things must come to an end. But we are grateful for the many years of service that have been put in. We hope that the best of all things will come to those who are going into the service. And we hope that the best of all things will come to those who are going to be working in the service.
