Task force seeks computers in liberal education

A task force in the College of Arts and Sciences has been charged with determining whether computer literacy should be considered a generic skill within the center of a liberal education. Dr. Elmer Speckle, sociology, is chairing that group, which includes faculty from a broad area within the college.

The task force will also focus on whether the college can afford to provide this kind of exposure, as well as what the implications of computer use would be on our students, and how much of what they are doing is being carried over into their future careers.

Dr. Baker said he is not sure if the university can afford to provide computer literacy in the arts and sciences.

Dr. Baker said that he does not believe educational budgets and arts and social sciences students will provide an accurate answer on whether the college can afford to provide this kind of exposure, as well as what the implications of computer use would be on our students, and how much of what they are doing is being carried over into their future careers.

Dr. Baker said he is not sure if the university can afford to provide computer literacy in the arts and sciences.

Faculty Senate

The Faculty Senate meeting originally scheduled on Thursday (Feb. 5) has been canceled and rescheduled for Thursday, Feb. 12, at 10 a.m. in the Student Union Council Chambers. The topic of discussion will be the final report of the Task Force on Faculty Compensation, which has been working to develop strategies for improving the faculty compensation package.

The Senate also will consider the following topics:

- The University’s fiscal situation and the impact of federal budget cuts on the University's auxiliary enterprises.
- The next four years because of the budget cuts, we must consider our financial strategies. These include:
  - Cutting back on non-essential services and programs.
  - Increasing student fees.
  - Reducing the number of full-time faculty.
- Graduate student and faculty with three times, 2, 3 and 4 p.m., on the schedule below.

Computer task force...

well as those who are in the more senior faculty positions. The Computer Task Force will be considering the following:

- The purchase of computer equipment and software.
- The establishment of a computer laboratory.
- The development of a computer-based learning system.

February 19 and February 26 at 12 noon in the Student Union Council Chambers.

Blood and bloodmobile are Kisseleff’s ‘way of life’

I said, ‘This is ridiculous — these people coming to me to give blood. Why is the blood needed? Who needs it? Why don’t they go up to the bloodmobile?”

I don’t want to do it. I’m not doing it. That was all Kisseleff needed to hear. ‘I don’t think there are any people left in this room. ’

I don’t think it (the lower percentage of faculty participation) is due to a policy, but rather I think they are doing what the bloodmobile people are telling them to do. ”

I don’t think we can get hundreds of people to give blood if we don’t have the proper personnel to do so. I think we need to make sure that people are aware of the importance of blood donation.”

Bloodmobile visit...

We get a computer print-out of every person who gave blood, their address and their phone number. These are the names that are sent to the center who collects information about each donor. We also have people set up further appointments.

Student volunteers also help run the computer at the computer ‘stations,” as the reception area.

The task force is working on a new guide to computer literacy; the Newbery and Caldecott Medal and the Caldecott Honor.”

The Newbery Medal is given to the author of the best of American children’s literature; the Caldecott Medal is given to the illustrator of the most distinguished American children’s book published that year; and the Caldecott Honor is given to a book that has been recommended as an excellent contribution to children’s literature.

Even though each event does not have a specific goal, the work should be done. There is a need for blood in the hospitals. We need to do it not only to save our own blood, but also because we know the families of the donors. ”

The actual process of drawing blood (including registering, medical history, and drawing the blood) is not as traumatic as it seems. Many people don’t seem to think about it when they donate blood. ”

I don’t think people do it because they are afraid of the machines. They know they are helping others, and it’s important for them to do it.”

I think it’s a better idea.”

CALL CAMPUS SAFETY FIRST. Faculty and staff are asked that in case of an accident on campus, including personal injury and traffic accidents, the University Police be notified immediately. In the case of an accident in which Life Safety and Security should be notified first to arrange a complete accident investigation. "Reports of investigations include such matters as signed, detailed statements from the injured parties and any available witnesses; appropriate photographs of accident scene; and, when important to the investigation, are instructions which would be expected to aid in proper handling of the accident.

Failure to cooperate in an accident investigation can result in serious litigation for the University.
