Emergency Homecoming

Homecomings are a special spirit in themselves. Last year the old grads, those familiar faces of last year, appeared at the college door. The old grads are looked upon as the backbone of alumni support, and as the years pass, each year the old grads become more numerous. As the years passed, the campus seemed to become more crowded, the same excitement as familiar "glad to be back" look as ever. There was a success—all because the Bowling Green women who are constantly seen in the college made last year's homecoming week-end impossible.

This year there were few alumni where one expected to find them. There was a crowd of old grads where the traditions should be. There were a few who were happy to see their old alma mater. But there were very few alumni who showed up to make the old traditions possible.

In spite of the absence of tradition the university was able to hold its own. The students were very much interested in the events. The traditions were not forgotten, but rather, the students made up their own traditions. They held their own homecoming week-end and made it a success.

The old grads were not the only ones who showed up to make the homecoming week-end a success. The alumni, who are constantly seen in the college, made it a success as well. They were happy to see their old alma mater and to see the traditions they had known for so many years.

The old grads, the alumni, and the students all made the homecoming week-end a success. The traditions were not forgotten, but rather, the students made up their own traditions. They held their own homecoming week-end and made it a success.

There were no such stringent rules set down for the old grads as there were for the students. The old grads were free to do what they wanted to do. They were happy to see their old alma mater and to see the traditions they had known for so many years.

Impressive Military Guard Strikes New Homcoming Note

From all sides came cries of "But you should have been here last year," and a similar seed, so the idea was born that this year's homecoming celebration was just a sample of what is used to be, and a preview of what is to be. As a preview, it served its purpose, for inevitably it has been announced that next year's celebration will be even more impressive.

The number of participants was considerably larger than that of last year, and also the participation was more spirited. Snazzy uniforms, music, and the presence of the band were all elements of the program.

The program included a military guard which marched around the campus, followed by the cheerleaders and the band. The cheerleaders were dressed in red, white, and blue uniforms, and the band played patriotic music.

The military guard also took part in the annual homecoming parade, which was held in the afternoon. The parade was led by the band and followed by floats and marching bands from various schools.

The homecoming dance was held in the evening, and was attended by a large crowd. The dance featured music by a live band, and a variety of games and activities were also available.

The homecoming football game was held the next day, and was attended by a large crowd. The crowd was cheering and chanting throughout the game, and the team played with great enthusiasm.

Overall, the homecoming celebration was a huge success, and the participants were all very happy with the outcome. The community was proud of the effort that went into the celebration, and the atmosphere was festive and joyous.
