Sociology graduate program ranked among nation's best

A national study of graduate programs at colleges and universities throughout the United States has named Bowling Green's sociology program among the nation's best, according to the latest U.S. News & World Report ranking of the nation's graduate programs. The sociology program was one of 32 programs in the nation's top 100 graduate programs, ranking 52nd.

Faculty Senate

Last year the Faculty Senate approved a salary resolution that provided for a 40 percent increase in the base salary of all faculty. The Senate and the administration reiterated their commitment to a fair salary for the faculty.

Undergraduate Council

Proposals to institute minors in special education and reading and to establish a nursing program in the College of Education were approved by the Undergraduate Council at its Jan. 15 meeting.

Attention

Following the vote, several members voiced concern over the wide range of courses required for different minors. It was pointed out that the minors are designed to be part of a major program, but the Council agreed with the concern and recommended that the course requirements be examined more thoroughly.

At the end of the meeting, four members voted to refer the minor programs in their respective areas to the faculty senate for consideration at their Jan. 18 meeting.

Administrative Staff Council

The Administrative Staff Council endorsed full participation in the University's shared governance system as a means of improving the working conditions of the University's employees.

Sociology graduate program ranked among nation’s best

A national study of graduate programs at colleges and universities throughout the country has placed Bowling Green’s doctoral program in sociology among the nation’s best. The study, conducted by the American Sociological Association Research Consultant, was based on a comprehensive survey that involves ranking 28 sociology programs at 32 universities in the nation’s top 50 in the field. The study, done by the National Council on Research in Education, focused on the number and quality of doctorate students and faculty engaged in the field.

Faculty Senate

Last year the Faculty Senate approved a salary resolution that provided for a 40 percent increase in the faculty budget. There was great support for the resolution, and the Board of Trustees in June, was to be at least as generous, if not more so. Although the budget was to be 30 percent, the salary increase was only 10 percent. A faculty member was held Jan. 24 in the McFarland Office.

Undergraduate Council

Proposals to institute minors in special education and reading, to require students in the College of Education were presented at the Undergraduate Council meeting Jan. 18.

Administrative Staff Council

Executive Committee met last week to consider matters related to faculty meetings and the University’s budget. The Committee recommended that all meetings be held in the faculty meeting and that the budget be reviewed and revised annually.
