Letters help solve historical puzzle

In the January-February issue of Annals of Science, Dr. Motz, a retired professor of psychology at the University of Michigan, detailed her research on the role of women in scientific research and her efforts to create a more inclusive environment for women in science. The article, titled "Gender in Science: A Personal Perspective," was published in the January-February issue of the journal.

Dr. Motz's research, which was supported by the National Science Foundation, focused on the experiences of women in science, particularly in the fields of physics and psychology. She found that many women were discouraged from pursuing careers in science due to gender stereotypes and lack of role models.

Motz also discussed the importance of creating a more inclusive environment for women in science, highlighting the need for policies that support diversity and inclusion.

Dr. Motz's work has been recognized by the American Psychological Association, which awarded her the 2009 William James Award for Distinguished Scientific Contributions to Psychology.

The article was published in the January-February issue of Annals of Science, and is available online at https://annals.org/doi/10.1177/0003312409348278.

STAS campus Retirement option to participate in the Supplemental Bill 410... The financial committee, with the approval of the administrator, will conduct a feasibility study to determine if the plan is feasible for the University. The study will include an analysis of the financial impact on the University, an evaluation of the University's financial position, and a review of the University's financial policies and procedures. The study will also consider the University's financial forecasts and projections. The study will be conducted by the University's financial advisors and will be reported to the Board of Trustees.
SAVE THOSE CANS, PAPERS AND BOTTLES. It's the year for the national political conventions, and for the forth time students of Emil Dansker, journalism, will be present at the political science, this time at the Republican National Convention on April 10 on campus and April 28 in Toledo.

Faculty members are asked to start saving recyclable items now, at home and in the office. Further details will be announced later.

ART ON DISPLAY. A small sampling of the diversity in 20th century two-dimensional art will be shown in a special exhibit Friday through Sunday (March 25). The exhibit will rotate through the Moore Musical Arts Center.

The works, on loan from the Ohio Citizens Bank in Toledo, will be shown in the Green Room at the center from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday and Saturday and from 1-5 p.m. Sunday. It also will be open for viewing during intermissions of performances of the Opera Theater production.

The exhibit is intended to illustrate different attitudes toward art in this century. All works have been acquired by the bank since it began its collection in 1972.

Discussions precede opera performances

Frank Baldaizen, English, will host mini-discussions before each performance of the Opera Theater production "The Barber of Seville" to be staged March 24-26 in Kobacker Hall of the Moore Musical Arts Center.

Dr. Baldaizen's informal discussions, about 20 minutes in length, will be given in the Bryan Recital Hall about 30 minutes before each performance.

"I'll talk about the opera as it was derived from the French writer Beaumarchais, who wrote it as an opera before it became a play and a musical comedy, which included "The Marriage of Figaro" and "The Guilty Mother,"" Dr. Baldaizen said.

An opera buff, Dr. Baldaizen is currently on faculty improvement leave and recently returned from a trip of German operas where he attended 11 operas.

Certain times for the campus performances are 8 p.m. March 2 and 3 and 2 and 3 p.m. March 4.

Tickets for all performances are $5, $4 and $2 and can be reserved by calling 372-0711 or visiting the Moore Musical Arts Center box office. Box office hours are 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Thursday, April 20, and 7-9 p.m. March 2 and 3, and 2:30-3:30 March 4.

Classified Staff Advisory Committee

The need for work incentives among classified employees was discussed at the Feb. 15 meeting of the Classified Staff Advisory Committee.

A memorandum signed by eight classified staff was received by CSAC on that matter. The employees voiced concern about the lack of incentives for classified staff. A copy of the memo will be sent to Richard Rehmer, personnel, for discussion.

Dr. Vogt, vice president for operations, also discussed the need for work incentives with casino games for jobs well done or for cost-saving suggestions that are successfully implemented. It was also noted that any classified staff with suggestions about an incentive program should contact hoe or any member of the CSAC with their ideas. Also discussed was the possibility of having a survey sent to all classified staff which would determine what kind of incentives employees would prefer.

It was announced during the meeting that an operations overview will be reviewed by the office of Personnel Support Services. That committee will be headed by Ingram Millington, management support services, and will include three members of the CSAC.

Also discussed was the possibility of having classified staff longevity pay issued in one check annually rather than in paychecks throughout the year.

Irreverent, library, was appointed to investigate what kinds of library privileges are available to classified staff and how those privileges currently are handled by faculty and administrative staff.

It was announced that Jim Harris, assistant director, will speak at the Falcon Club at the Brown Bag Luncheon on March 7, in the Northeast Commons.

Advisory Committee has new members

Two new members have been elected to the Classified Staff Advisory Committee. Sherry Briggins, Commons dining hall, has been elected to represent that area, in the area. She may be reached at 372-2563.

Linda Glomski, journalism, will represent the academic affairs area. She may be reached at 372-2076.

Dr. Baldaizen received an invitation to contact CSAC members with any concerns throughout the year.
