The University Theatre will pay tribute to the 25th anniversary of a milestone in its history on Saturday, April 7, in the Joe E. Brown Theater. Winner of the New York Drama Critics Circle Award for best play in 1979, "A Raisin in the Sun" has been a popular choice among theatre students and faculty.

As part of the celebration, the theatre will host a symposium from 2-5 p.m. Wednesday, April 14, in the McFall Ballroom, University Union. "The symposium will feature invited authors, as well as faculty and students from the Department of English," said Karl B. Berge, professor and chair of the English department.

The symposium will kick off with "A Raisin in the Sun," an adapted version of the play, presented by Theatre 15, 1984, a student theatre group. The play will be directed by Nicole Brown, artistic director of Theatre 15, 1984.

On Thursday, April 14, the symposium will continue with a screening of "A Raisin in the Sun," followed by a panel discussion on the play's impact on the theatre world.

On Friday, April 15, the symposium will conclude with a panel discussion on the play's impact on the nation, featuring guest speakers from the African American Studies program.

All in the Joe E. Brown Theatre the past 13 years. General admission tickets for the play are $6, $5 for Ohio State students, and $4 for students age 18 and younger. There are no reserved tickets.

The University Theatre is located in the Ohio State University Recreation Center. For more information, call 292-3753.
University set policy for soliciting on campus

The University will enforce the following policy regarding solicitation on campus.

PURPOSE: To ensure that employees have the opportunity to perform their duties without unreasonable interruption or distraction, and that students are not required to distribute soliciting material on campus.

SOLICITATION ON CAMPUS BY NON-EMPLOYEES: Solicitation on campus by non-employees is prohibited at all times.

Any employee may post notices or other information on campus. If the employee has not received prior approval from the appropriate University official, the notice or information shall be removed by the University.

In the case of non-employee solicitation, the University will immediately remove any solicitation from property.

3. All solicitations and distribution of literature by any organization or non-employees within the boundaries of the campus shall be subject to the approval of the appropriate University official.

4. Solicitation on campus by non-employees is prohibited at all times.

5. Solicitation on campus by non-employees is prohibited at all times.

6. Use of the University internal campus mail system for solicitation purposes is prohibited.

7. Requests by internal representatives of organizations for leave of absence from the University's solicitation policy are not to be made in accordance with the normal University leave policies.

BULLETIN OF OTHER PUBLIC ACCESS AREAS: Any employee may post notices or other information on designated areas of University public access areas.

If the notices contain information about an on-campus solicitation by an organization, it may be removed by the University if it is determined to be on-campus solicitation.

VIOLATIONS: Any employee who violates any provision of this policy shall be subject to disciplinary action, including termination of employment.

DEFINITIONS: Solicitation means any oral or written solicitation of funds or donations, distribution of any material, or collection of any funds or donations by any person on University property.

Chamberlin offers advice on "Coping with Kids"

When parents try to make decisions for their children without realizing the mistakes because they were probably not that responsible themselves. Chamberlin, educational administration and supervision.

Chamberlin has written a new book, "The Coping Parents: Designed specifically for school personnel, the book offers illustrations and strategies on ways to improve cooperation between children and adults. It is also ideal for parents and others who might deal with children in the classroom.

Chamberlin maintains that discipline today, in both the home and classroom, is more centered around current positive parenting techniques as opposed to the more authoritarian approach. Discipline today's "parent is no longer effective at setting the limits, helping to uphold discipline and cooperation between parents and teachers," he said.

Noting that children today mature much more quickly than in the past, Chamberlin said that kids, more than ever in their history, require a different kind of "handling," both at home and in the classroom. "This is probably the greatest trend among children," he said, "and we will respond in one of three ways: making them behave; not making them behave; or drawing attention to themselves instead of drawing attention to others."

An educator and administrator for 30 years, Chamberlin has written more than 70 articles and several books on discipline and education. His interest in the discipline area was spurred by his own observations in public school classrooms. He said he was a service and repair man in his home all the way through childhood because they were too demanding and unrealistic expectations.

And that he relates positively as a parent and practising teacher. Chamberlin said that he relates positively as a parent and practising teacher and that he realizes the importance of "free expression" and education that is supportive of the child.

"Coping with Kids" is Chamberlin's way of helping teachers who have no secret "language of the child." Chamberlin, he said, should also work at home.

Office Services expands hours, adds while-you-wait service

When employees have a need to complete some work and cannot wait until a scheduled appointment, Office Services can offer a new service called "while-you-wait service." The service was added to Office Services' expanding hours last week.

"While-you-wait service" is "disputing" to many a campus, said an Office Services worker. "I just do it every day, and it's not so bad."

F. Thomas, the office is open from 8 A.M. to 5:30 P.M. to accommodate the needs of employees who may need to complete some work on their own.

Some new equipment, Office Services worker.. "This new 'junk' is being used on a daily basis and while-you-wait service on jobs that need a little more time, while-you-wait service is a way to go."

Located on the sixth floor of the Administration Center, Office Services is offering a new duplexing and offset printing of documents, booklets, manuals and a variety of other printing needs. The service also includes the work of placing orders on the book, pages and designs.

All copies are limited to 25 pages and must be provided by the customer. They are not provided by the customer. The customer must have the right to the actual printing of the document.

Ingeborg Krall, manager of Office Services, said Office Services has been working with the while-you-wait service for some time.

Offering a "while-you-wait service" only helps the customer in the long run, she said. "You are better off coming to the office one day and making the printings the next day," she said. "That way you are not having to pay for the service every day of the week."
