Handcapped as they were by loss of voice, a faulty staircase that kept the audience standing in the Recreation Hall below, the all-frasmens Workshop Players, cast managed to do a good job with "Stage Door," a recent hit on Broadway.

Though not up to the usual standards, the Workshop Players did well considering the lack of experience.

all campus sororities in a Panhellenic council. All contributions throughout the country and carloads of old but usable clothes for war which should be given to this worthy collecting center. Such an undertaking is being conducted all over the United States; last administration? This campaign is being reported in the press. We may all be proud. It served as a reminder of how bad our stuff was getting—so now it is on the whole clean and in good order. We are glad that our women are more beautiful, or beautiful enough to win the hearts and addresses of major University plays.

It is to be realized that this is one student—society function at which we don't take advantage of the frequent plays, assembly programs, and concerts at the University. Attending these events is an important part of college life at a University. When we go to the movies, we should be well-supplied by our fellow classes mates and by the faculty. There is nothing quite so discouraging as to talk to someone who just 'don't bother to attend.'

Pros

Although the Workshop Playmakers' "Stage Door" wasn't quite up to the standards of the typical University theatrical, it was a try for some of the large freshman cast and student director John Smith who, with his credit for their work, it was a try for something new. We hope that the group will try to play or a water pageant, for instance, they had planned to do. "Door" wasn't quite up to the standards of the usual University Theatre productions, the Stagelab proved that we can do better. Let's cheer on all the skits, skits, skits, and adresses of major University plays.

CAMPUS VISITORS

Wonder how close the sudden interest of this year's attention is to the University? There were about four of them here last week, are they the ones that can be the best friends for our girl. We are sure that our women are more beautiful, or beautiful enough to win the hearts and addresses of major University plays.
Coach Anderson Can Show Movies Anytime

"Movies of the Fabulous Basketball team at Madison Square Garden," shows at six times University students wish to see them, Coach Harold Anderson, athletic director, said.

Two of these movies, showing the team in action at the National Intercollegiate Tournament, have been given by Coach Anderson in many Ohio communities.

Last night they were presented at the Lyric Theater here.

"The conquering group or our boys,' Mr. Anderson said, "may be a special show for students." Added that he will be glad to show them any time the Junior Committee wishes him to or at any time there is a free date or time on the University social calendar.

Coeds Give Course in Water Safety

Again this semester a course in "Water Safety" has been offered by the Women of Baldwin-Wallace, under the direction of Miss H. P. Gingerich.

This class meets each Tuesday and Thursday at four in the afternoon of each week, if membership is sufficient to complete the course and if the water is suitable.

The course has been advertised and attendance has increased. Both men and women are eager to learn to swim.

As the last day of class is Tuesday, January 19, students who wish to swim are urged to sign up now.

Coach Anderson said that most of the students in the class expect to attend the national swimming meet at college.

Archer Club Opens Season

Now that weather is here some women in the archery club have opened their season.

Coach Anderson has expressed his hopes that the membership in the club might increase to two or three hundred if the girls are interested.

Members wishing to attend the fall meetings are to be present by 4:30 on Monday, May 19, when the first meeting will be held.

A special show for students," Mr. Anderson said, "may be a special show for students." Added that he will be glad to show them any time the Junior Committee wishes him to or at any time there is a free date or time on the University social calendar.
