Fourteen faculty and staff who together have given 262 years of teaching and service to the University have retired from full-time responsibilities. Many of the 14, however, will return to campus in subsequent years under the Supplemental Retirement Program.

Those retiring include:

Margaret J. Tucker, who retired in October as director of the Northwest Ohio Educational Television Foundation at WBGU-TV. In that post, which she had held since 1970, she coordinated all instructional television programming distributed to northwest Ohio schools. She also edited "Scanner," a monthly publication for teachers, and created and produced "News Six," a weekly news program for sixth grade students.

Named to the All Ohio School Board in recognition of her service was then-Gov. John Gilligan. She received a University Merit Award and also received an Abe Lincoln Award given to distinguished broadcasters by the Southern Baptist Radio and Television Commission in 1975. She is a member of American Women in Radio and Television, a past vice president and former secretary of the Ohio Association of Instructional Television Centers, and a past vice chair and chair of the Ohio Instructional Television Council.

- Mary Lee Glenn, home economics, was named an assistant professor emerita earlier this fall, after more than 35 years of teaching at the high school and college levels — 20 of those on the Bowling Green faculty.

From 1971-83 she was program director for fashion merchandising and textiles and clothing in the College of Arts and Sciences, and from 1979-83 she coordinated the textile and clothing area and directed foreign areas in her department. In the textiles and clothing area she developed a series of 10-40 minute videotapes for instructional use.

A member of the American Home Economics Association, she also served on:
- William S. Jackson, University Professor of biological sciences, joined the faculty in 1957. The recipient of more than 60 grants totaling almost $1 million from private foundations, he conducted environmental research on a continual basis at the University. He has published extensively on his ecological studies and research on rodent, bird and pest control, and he has served as an environmental consultant in nations throughout the world. He frequently is invited to speak at international pest control conferences.
- Dr. Jackson has directed the Center for Environmental Research and Services since it was founded in 1970, and he currently holds positions in several state and national environmental organizations. His work has received national and international media attention; in 1979 he was interviewed on "60 Minutes" and in 1977, his feature work "National Geographic." He joined the faculty in 1970 as an expert on children's literature. During her years at Bowling Green she continued her research in that area and presented numerous papers at professional meetings.

Most recently she co-authored with Linda Petts, English, a 529-page guide to award-winning children's books. The guide was published in 1982.
- Robert W. Twyman, history, published two books and a series of journal articles during his 30 years on the faculty. His most recent book, Encyclopedia of Southern History, co-edited with David G. Ritter, history, received the 1979 Founders Award of the Confederate Memorial Literary Society and was selected by the field of Confederate history that year.

Dr. Twyman's interest in the Old South, Civil War and Reconstruction have resulted in his extensive travel and research in the South. In 1981 he received the Distinguished Service Award from the Ohio Academy of History. The University recognized his achievements twice — once in 1968 when he received the Distinguished Teaching Award and again in 1981 when he was the recipient of a Faculty Excellence Award.

- William O. Reichelt, political science, joined the faculty in 1967 and chaired his department from 1978-84. In 1970 he received the Distinguished Teaching Award in the College of Arts and Sciences. A research fellow in the Social Philosophy and Policy Center, he has contributed to a number of books in his field and has co-edited or co-authored others, including The Crucible of Socialism, co-edited with Louis Patras and scheduled for release this year. Another of his recent books, co-edited with Steven G. Luedtke, political science, focused on public policy in Ohio.
- John R. Schuck, psychology, came to Bowling Green in 1960, leaving from 1963-67 for a teaching stint at Iowa State University. A member of the American Psychological Association, he has published articles in professional journals and has contributed to books including Violence in Animals and the Human Society, published in 1976.

During his years on the faculty he served on Faculty Senate and numerous University committees.

- Mary L. Amos, educational curriculum and Instructional Library and Educational Media, has been best known as the University's resident storyteller. She has lectured on children's literature in libraries and at professional meetings throughout the state and developed a course at the University to teach future teachers and librarians the art of storytelling.

She joined the faculty in 1969 and during her years at Bowling Green served on Faculty Senate, the Student Affairs Advisory Board and many department and College of Education committees. She received the Distinguished Teacher Award of the College of Education in 1973 and is a member of the National Association for the Preservation and Perpetuation of Storytelling, the American Association of School Librarians and a charter member of the Ohio Educational Library Media Association, among other professional organizations.

- Robert C. Beard, health, physical education and recreation, has taught undergraduate courses in physical education since joining the faculty in 1967. A specialist in elementary physical education, he directed the University's former physical education program at St. Aloysius Elementary School. He also directed the Upward Bound Program on campus.

President initiates "fireside chats"

In an effort to make more personal contact with faculty and to benefit from their opinions, President Jim Olscape will schedule some "fireside chats" at his home during the next few months.

Groups of ten faculty will be chosen at random to join him in informal discussion on topics of interest to the University.

Hostel national board of directors, has led cycling tours in Europe, the United States and the People's Republic of China. He also is a member of several professional organizations, and in 1977 he received a Distinguished Achievement Award from the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education.

- Delbert D. Kames, business education, came to the University in 1970. A member of several University committees, he has chaired the University Insurance and BGSU Credit Union committees.

Dr. Kames has presented papers on business math to professional organizations and has published several articles in professional journals. A revised edition of his textbook, Business Mathematics for the Consumer, co-authored by Merwin Guthrie, business education, and William Sotero, was released in 1983.

- William H. Fichthorn, finance and insurance, chaired department from 1966-75. He joined the faculty in 1965.

A chartered financial analyst, he has been active in a number of professional organizations, including the American Finance Association and the Institute of Chartered Financial Analysts. On campus he chaired the College of Business Administration Executive Committee from 1967-69 and 1981-82. He also has been active in general...

Undergraduate Council

Undergraduate Council failed to devote to its last meeting Dec. 19 on a way to handle the problem of handling “deficiencies” in those areas after approval by the faculty. The new policy before the Ohio Board of Regents which includes two units of credit with each course in the visual area of performing arts is. The Council met Dec. 19 to consider the Senate resolution on handling “deficiencies” in those areas in the fall semester of the English language and society classes.

Undergraduate Council

An Open Letter to the Administration:

Dear Dr. Robins,

I write this letter to express my concern about the recent changes in the undergraduate curriculum at our university. As a faculty member, I have observed a steady decline in the quality of undergraduate education, which has led me to believe that we need to take immediate action to address these issues.

Firstly, I am concerned about the lack of diversity in our curriculum. Many of our courses are taught from a narrow perspective, and we need to ensure that our students are exposed to a wide range of ideas and viewpoints. Secondly, I am concerned about the decline in the quality of teaching. Many of our faculty members are overworked and lack the time and resources to provide the best possible education for our students.

I believe that these issues are not unique to our university and that they are widespread in higher education. Therefore, I urge you to take decisive action to address these problems.

Sincerely,

[Your Name]

Undergraduate Council failed to devote to its last meeting Dec. 19 on a way to handle the psychological testing and the hiring of a new psychology professor. Undergraduate Council's meetings end on Dec. 5 meeting. The Phase II plan recommends providing students planning to enroll in a bachelor-level psychology program at Bowling Green follow-college enrollment. This includes units that do not require the basic course in psychology and visual ability in performing arts.

The Council met Dec. 19 to consider a resolution that handles "depression" in those areas after approval of a resolution to change the community's social sciences, foreign languages and education.

The projects are expected to begin with construction of the Rec Center, then the University’s Central Heating Plant, and finally the new Performing Arts Center. The total cost of the projects is estimated at $120 million. The projects will be funded through a $100 million bond issue approved by the Board of Regents in November 1985. The bond issue is expected to be sold in early 1986.

The projects will take place in phases, with the Rec Center project scheduled to begin in June. The Central Heating Plant project is expected to begin in September, and the Performing Arts Center project is scheduled to begin in November.

For the past 30 years Ronald E. Seavy, history, has been collecting minerals and rocks as he has traveled throughout the world. In fact, he has collected about one and a half tons of them. Now, Seavy has donated his collection of more than 1,200 rock and mineral specimens to the department of Geology, where they will be used in advanced courses and for faculty research.

The collection, which is valued at $15,000, is a significant contribution to the department of Geology. The collection includes a variety of rocks and minerals, and is expected to be a valuable resource for students and faculty.

For more information, contact the Rec Center at 4-2000. The Rec Center will offer a 5 session summer program during the months of April and May. For information on the summer program, contact the Rec Center at 4-2000.

Hosts and Hostesses can help with campus-sponsored events

The Hosts and Hostesses program is a great opportunity for students to gain experience in hospitality and communication. The program is open to students of all ages and is designed to prepare people for careers in the hospitality and tourism industries.
