Tropical Fish Are On Display

Fish raising for pleasure instead of profit is the aim of Tommy Glenn, 16 year old Bowling Green state high school student. Part of his large collection of tropical fish has been placed on exhibit in the biology department of the Bowling Green state university.

About a year and a half ago Tommy purchased his first aerated tropical fish of varying types. His collection has grown since then. He now has over 800 fish of 15 different species.

The most unusual fish of his collection is the caramel glass morph, which are gray black and orange in color and excited the stripes disappear.

Now that the display is complete the collection are the black mollies, orange and blue mollies, the centeno blue, and the multi-colored rainbow mops. At the present time Tommy has several thousand fish in his tanks, with a capacity of 80 gallons. He has built most of the tanks himself. In addition he also construct the heaters and pumps which are necessary to keep the water at a constant temperature of 70 to 75 degrees Fahrenheit.

Bedlam Reigns

by Jean Baldwin

"The bedlam reigns and all through the university's building creation of the thing the dorms, the halls and the gyms...and the lounges and the dorms, the halls and the gyms...and...Jane Allen got a telegram..." If it sowed the wind of belated demands on the administration wishes to avoid any more "temporary housing problems" and "housing crisis" possibly could be foreseen in the future. Situated as it is in the middle of the nation, Bowling Green is exposed to the same situations that all other colleges are experiencing. With enrollment at an all-time high, the "temporary housing problems" have become a serious problem for all the university's administration. While the administration is trying to come up with solutions, the students are suffering the consequences. The situation is so severe that the administration has had to declare a state of emergency to prevent any further spread of the "temporary housing problems." The administration has taken several steps to address the situation and has vowed to continue working towards finding a permanent solution. In the meantime, the students are urged to be patient and to continue to support the efforts of the administration and the faculty in this matter.

Fire Warning

Fire danger was emphasized Wednesday as Senate had discussed the problem of fire in campus buildings, when the city on the fire floor around the older buildings. Additionally only minor fire damage was caused to the additions to the building. A student from Science had completed his private pilot training and is undertaking a further course in commercial aviation in the university airport.

Designed to encourage increased safety precautions, fire drills in each part of the university are to open to any pilot of a plane in the area.

Players must complete the test by Oct. 31. They may be individually or in groups of their choice, in the science buildings until they are finished. They must be students in Science or those who are finished in the science buildings during the day.

Flying Boys Whoed

Veterans taking flight instructors and have been offered the opportunity to take part in the U.S. Navy's aerial training program.

"You are being offered the opportunity to become a member of the U.S. Navy's aerial training program," said Commander of the Navy's aerial training program to the men who were interested in taking part in the program.

The men were given a brief description of the program and were shown a film about the training. They were then taken to the navigation center and were shown the various equipment that would be used in the training.

The men were then given the opportunity to fly on their own and to make their own decisions about whether or not to join the program. They were also given the opportunity to ask questions and to learn more about the program. The men who decided to join the program were then given a physical examination and were instructed on the various aspects of the training.

The men who joined the program were then given a list of the various courses that would be taken, the dates when they would be taken, and the locations where they would be taken. They were also given the opportunity to ask any questions they had about the program and were given the opportunity to speak with the instructors about their experiences.
