It is news on the Bowling Green campus when nearly 20 per cent of the student body gets out to vote in an all-campus election. For the past half dozen years a tenuous show of hand has not been an unexpected sight that demo- crats down the years have been accustomed to favor. Only the freshman election of the Class of '48 broke this in. But in the beginning of the present semester the records of those new hoteliers will meet a worthy challenge. The freshman rally tomorrow may set in task for the Class of '50 the job of student government begun by them.

Key to Victory

Open campaign has proved the success of the election since the least concerned students may be caught by a tricky phrase or a clever stunt that other appeals are of no effect. Even Ralph Klein, whose underestimation operation appeared to be the keenest into the students' choice, was defeated. It may prove an unflattering, especially for future career women.

Eight right now the board is broker with noticed announcing scholarships for graduate study by many well-known colleges and universities. In most cases the only requirements are that the candidate be a gradu- ate of an accredited college or univer- sity and have a good scholastic record.

These opportunities offer pro- posal for many different kinds of students, from the viewpoint of every interested student.

Some of the political students voted, but if women enthusiasm is currently preferred to work of it. Adequate provisions can be taken by the student government through an election public- ity committee which would approve campaign stuff but that such mishaps need not occur.

Power of the Press

Ironically as it appears, the success of the recent election seems to have been despite the influ- ence of the campus newspaper which has been an open advocate of student government.

Last week cartoonist Graham legitimately doubted students' right to an open election this week before columnist Zorrro questioned the con- tinued life of the newspaper. So far this week both Zorrro and Graham have been con- tinued good news. So far the daily has more enthusiasm than edito- rial meat, and last week every editorial was decided and uninterested notice of this. To top it off, every camp- us newspaper had been decided.

In this a loss of face among the readers is seen in shrugs aside. All the fact remains that student democracy is back on the road to health.
