Black History Month features Dick Gregory

Civil rights activist Dick Gregory, Angela Davis and U.S. Rep. Walter Fauntroy will be the keynote speakers during Black History Month activities at Ball State University.

A speech by Gregory on Feb. 28 will take a series of events intended to recognize the contributions of blacks to world and American history and culture. The events include films, speakers, a viewing of the film "Angela as My Mother, Myths and Realities," a segment of the film "The Man in the Arena," and a presentation by the principal of the Farmers' Market.

University begins first ad campaign

The University's first advertising campaign will get underway this week with the airing of prime-time television and radio commercials on area stations.

The venture was prompted by recent findings of the University Communications regulations concerning the use of public announcements (PA) time on television stations.

The PSA matrix, which guides Bowling Green State University's public announcements, will go into effect in March and the FOH-260 network stations will be running them, said Dolin Bussel, director of public relations. "We want to get the word out about Bowling Green, its faculty and program packages," he said.

Beginning today, six television and five radio commercials will be transmitted weekly in the University. In addition, three television and five radio spots will be running in the youngest of the three networks, the University of Southern Ohio.

Guide develops writing skills

Robert L. Hiltchick knows something about reading and how to teach it. He is the education professor at Ohio University and has recently published a guide to teaching reading that was recently released by Prentice-Hall.

Teaching children to read is one of the most important tasks a teacher faces, and there are many adults who recognize the value of early reading instruction. In his book, "Reading for the 1990s," Hiltchick offers a broad perspective on the subject of reading and offers practical advice for teachers.

In the book, Hiltchick discusses the importance of reading instruction and provides strategies for developing reading skills. He emphasizes the need for teachers to provide a balanced approach to reading instruction, combining reading, writing, and thinking skills.

Hiltchick also provides a number of practical tips for teachers, including:

- The importance of modeling good reading behaviors for students
- The use of technology to support reading instruction
- The importance of assessing students' reading comprehension skills

Hiltchick's book is a valuable resource for teachers and education professionals who are interested in improving their reading instruction.

Ballet dance evolution studied

Sandra Dagliato's Batiste Russell had a tremendous impact on the development of dance in the United States between 1950 and 1990.舞者's evolution of the art of ballet in America had a lasting influence on the work of future generations of dancers. Her work was characterized by a combination of classical technique and modern innovation, and she was known for her ability to push the boundaries of traditional ballet forms.

Russell's work was not only groundbreaking in its time, but it also continues to be relevant today. Her influence can be seen in the work of many contemporary ballet dancers, who continue to draw inspiration from her unique approach to dance.

Transcript progress made

By mid-April computerized transcription services will be available at the University. This is a major step forward in the field of language arts. The service will allow students to request transcripts for a wide range of courses, and the requests will be processed as quickly as possible.

The service will be available through the Office of the Registrar, and it will be staffed by trained professionals. Students will be able to request transcripts online, and they will receive a confirmation email when their request has been processed.

In addition to transcripts, the service will also provide students with access to educational resources, such as course materials and study guides. This will be a valuable resource for students who are preparing for exams or studying for final projects.

The availability of this service will make it easier for students to manage their academic records and ensure that they are meeting all of their academic requirements.

Guide develops writing skills

Robert L. Hillerich knows something about reading and how to teach it. He's the education professor at Western Reserve University in Cleveland, Ohio. To teach others how to teach writing, he has written a new guide, "Guide develops writing skills." Hillerich, a five-year-old native of New York and a graduate of Fordham University, has taught writing at Western Reserve for 10 years and is recognized as an expert on the subject. The guide is intended for teachers, parents, and anyone who wants to improve their writing or their experience in teaching writing.

Ballet design evolution studied

Senga Diaphetera's Balinese Design has maintained a substantial impact on the design community, not only in the United States between 1985 and 1988, but also in the field of design and the arts. The study, conducted by Dr. Robert Hansen, examines the design evolution of the Balinese Design, with a focus on the interaction between the design and the Balinese people. The study found that the design has been influenced by the Balinese people's cultural and historical context, and that the design has evolved to reflect these influences.

National Council of Teachers of English

The National Council of Teachers of English (NCTE) is a professional organization for English teachers. It was founded in 1925 and is headquartered in Washington, D.C. The NCTE is committed to promoting the teaching and learning of English language arts, including reading, writing, speaking, and listening. The NCTE's mission is to support teachers in their efforts to help students achieve excellence in the study of language and literature. The organization provides resources, professional development opportunities, and a community of support for English teachers.

Faculty/Staff Grants

The Department of Education at Western Reserve University is offering faculty and staff grants to support research and creative projects. The grants are intended to support projects that align with the university's mission and values. The grants are available to faculty and staff members at all levels, and the application process is open to all eligible applicants. Painters keep rolling along

And a University painter who's a big job is and he may point to the 300 brush and can and paint in the paint shop refinished for use in the renovated Main Hall.

But according to Donald Sinheimer, Jr., the painter, the painter's job is not just to paint. "We are in a place where we must concentrate deeply with students, and there are some who just don't want to learn," he said. The painters try to make the students feel at ease when they enter the shop. Yet, it is usually the painters who have been known to hold or steal the paint cans, sinheimer said.

One working for the painters is a former employee who is no longer working for the painters. "We are a group of people that are very committed to students and work," he said.

Painting is an art form that requires time and planning. "I love painting the paintings," said Stilley, a painter. "It is a big job, we have to be precise and get the job done right."
