Trustees approve increased auxiliary budgets

Misallocate budgets totaling approximately $4.3 million would have been spent with an annual 10.4 percent increase if the April 11 meeting of the Board of Trustees had not approved four action items. The items represent approximately a 3.1 percent increase that was adopted following a review of the University's budget for auxiliary areas that are subject to Board approval. The review included a variety of services and activities for the 1987-88 academic year, including telecommunications services, auxiliary areas at the University at Buffalo, State University of New York, colleges for students in separate housing arrangements, and other programs.
The board left until its May meeting the approval of the university's budget for telecommunications services. The trustees also approved the division in August 1985 of the budget for the University at Buffalo for auxiliary areas that were funded by the university. The resulting funding sources for the auxiliary areas are the University at Buffalo, State University of New York, colleges for students in separate housing arrangements, and other programs.
