Carlson Reveals Findings
At July 16 Assembly

John Roy Carlson, famous author and fascist expounder, will speak on Wednesday, July 16, at an 11 o’clock assembly in the Auditorium.

Let Us Preserve Our Democracy" will be the subject of the talk. Since Vol. 4, Mr. Carlson, has pursued his investigations of those anti-democratic individuals and organizations who are still seeking to shatter United States national unity.

Aside from gathering information and data on subversive groups during the war, Mr. Carlson lectured before Army organization classes and before the U. S. Treasury Department.

Mr. Carlson was born in Greece and came to America when he was 12 years old. He wrote for many small papers in order to complete his studies at New York University and he has contributed to many leading periodicals.

He spent many years in collecting the explosive material incorporated in both of his best sellers, "The Plotter" and "Undercover."

Ground Will Be Broken
For New Sorority Houses

Ground will be broken next week for the building of the five new sorority houses. Five out of the eight residences, which will each house 55 women, will provide additional on-campus housing for 175 women.

Week of June 27, contractors for the six houses have received the bid for constructing the dormitories. Two of the houses, the Lambda Lambda Lambda and Phi Delta Delta, will face Ridge Street.

Driveways and sidewalks will be placed leading into the houses facing the amphitheatre. The sidewalks will run in front of the houses and will join the campus at the north side of the Nest.

Despite the placement of the houses on landscaped grounds, not one of the trees in the area will have to be removed.

It is hoped the houses will be ready for occupancy by October of next year, although, according to Dr. Prout, no definite date for the completion can be given at this time.

Present Chinese Problems
Emphasized by Lecturer
by Jack Miller

David Lu, American born Chinese lecturer and journalist, was the guest speaker in the second of a series of six assemblies scheduled for the summer session. Mr. Lu’s topic, “The Story of China Today,” was chosen to enlighten students and faculty an insight of the multifarious problems besetting the government of China today.

Who Wants to Learn His P’s and Q’s?
A suggestion has been made to the “editorial crusaders” of the Bee Gee News to demand from their editors a better paper. One which would supplement last semester’s date with “what to do with a date after you have acquired same.”

This new subject would be a form of mind your P’s and Q’s and would enlighten the male sex on what “just isn’t being done this season on the campus of Bowling Green State University.”

To the ticket taker at the Cla-Zel theatre, you put an important hat and they were forced to wait out side until the cones were eaten. Such a practice is not to be permitted, and students of both sexes must be taught to purchase a movie ticket before entering the theatre.

Sams Water for Goyas
Art Classes Survive
No water! This was the key note of moving day when art classes moved into the new art building back of the men’s gym. Although the building itself is finished, and most of the furniture and some of the materials are on hand, workmen are still pouring water on Chinese cities.

Living Costs Up 25,000 Times
By such an increase of prices, the majority of Chinese cities the cost of living rose prodigiously and now ranges from 25,000 to 40,000 times the prewar cost of living. Inadequate transportation, according to Mr. Lu, is one of the major reasons for inflation. Almost all foreign made manna is sold goods can un dercet the products made in China itself.

In closing his address, Mr. Lu stated that China needed aid from America but that actually China must solve her own des ertion.

Student Sings
School Praises
The library is my home; I shall not wander.

Yea, though I walk through the classes;
When the winter colds of class是由, as when the sun is roused to its duty
Thou art my light, my guiding star, my life.

Surely, profs and required reading;

The Battalion
A pioneer manufacturer of a remedy for headaches is to be honored by a memorial—a tablet, presumably.

Capital Chimes
Last winter’s coal crisis in England is old stuff by now, but it’s worth recalling the difficulties the British Government faced. The coal industry was shut down, and coal was in short supply. The British Government was forced to ration coal and to close all non-essential factories.

Meanwhile the editor proudly announced that the Bee Gee News office was moving to a new location: the Associated College Press building.

The Editor's Coupe
by Harold Flagg
Flash! Late bulletin! Editor’s car lost, strayed, borrowed, or swiped. Finder please return to News office, and no questions will be asked. Four tired members of the News staff lumbered out of the printing shop eagerly anticipating a glimpse of the editor’s “new” car. “We’ll have to transport our weary bodies back to our ally mamy. Meanwhile the editor proudly displayed on the masthead the many merits of her pride and joy.

“ar’s a green coupe with yellier wings and yink floored, the vel- vey, and the horn sounds just like a cow mooing,” she announced. But one outside the print shop, she groaned, turned pale under coats of ink, and stared wildly at the “new” car. “The car is gone, disappeared!”

Action Postponed On New Fraternity

Dissent by a leaky constitution and lack of a quarum, the interfraternity council, last Wednesday night, voted to postpone action on the requested admission of Phi Beta Mu to the council.

A council investigating committee reported favorably on the newly organized group, and a study of the Phi Beta Mu constitution by five fraternity representatives proved acceptable.

Al Emerick, council chairman, said action on the request was postponed until the first council meeting of the fall term because only five of 11 fraternities were represented. There was also doubt about the legality of summer interfraternity meetings.

Phi Beta Mu may accept pledges and operate as an independent fraternity without council acceptance.
