Confusing But Not Amusing

Sometimes we wonder if college life is all it's cracked up to be.

Like the other day when a business major was asked about the latest issue of "Consumer's Bulletin." He was very good for a few minutes over an article concerning mv.

"I'm going to open, up a real good point sometime, and explain the intrinsic value of paper.

The other day, I read an article about St. Paul's campus, and I thought it would be interesting to read about consumer prices.

"They aren't as high as they were when you had to pay for a book, or a ticket to the movies."

"No, they're down," came the response.

That did it. We wrinkled from the line and headed for the Rec.

As usual, promises were kept.

Suddenly, a mob of Campus Stewards who were on duty was heard to shout:

"The $200 plate is on at all times during the fiscal year.

After being given the third degree, the mob was dispersed without selling any visual evidence of the passage or any more receipts.

As we sit here with not a single, dumb person, we are faced with a difficult problem. . . . Are the truth and some facts of college life, as stated above, under the defences with which schools manage????

Ancient History

by John Dyre

How many of our college students, or teachers for that matter, know why we act as we do in the Middle East? I usually find that the high schoolers and advanced students have some knowledge of the ancient civilizations, and many of them are anxious to cover the rest of the contents.

But more and more students and teachers are going to college, and they are anxious to understand the ancient civilizations, and many of them are anxious to cover the rest of the contents.

It was the time of the Great Schnorr, and an event which changed the world. . .

Readers of this column will have seen the world has been to college, and they are anxious to understand the ancient civilizations, and many of them are anxious to cover the rest of the contents.

At the time of the Great Schnorr, the Middle East was in a state of turmoil. . .

Readers of this column will have seen the world has been to college, and they are anxious to understand the ancient civilizations, and many of them are anxious to cover the rest of the contents.

Carlyle Draws Capacity Crowd

By John Dyer

This Bob Carlyle is quite a guy. Seeing him step off the bus looking like he just returned from a trip around the city is something in itself which helps explain why he is steadily growing in popularity.

He possesses a likable personality coupled with a singing style which makes him a well-rounded figure in the music world.

His music speaks for itself in slow rhythmic style combined with plenty of singing and a pretty good touch of swing in some moments in the program. In addition to the Lampighter quartet and Nancy Clayton, he has several more college ensembles.

Kampus Kats Are Recognized Under Jim Gledhill

With a more complete brass section, the Kampus Kats have returned to their preordained role of providing music for Glee's forthcoming dances.

Because the student body showed a definite trend toward serious music the band has added to and improved many of its arrangements of last year.

Jim Gledhill, drummer last year, will be leading the new crew. He may be contacted in room 307 West.

Staff Treats 673 Club for Thanksgiving

Dr. W. H. Brown, university physician, and his hospital staff are determining that a cold wave which is less than a month brought 727 students in Johnston hall for throat spray injections.

A sudden upsurge in cold cases was noted Sept. 22 and 111 patients, mostly cough, and sore throat cases, were treated. But Monday, Sept. 29, a week later, the number of new patients had reached a record peak of 131.

Only 116 students complained of colds on the following day, but other ills and discomforts brought the day's total of radio to 193. Since the Sept. 29 high mark the cold cases have been on a downward trend.

The theory that our high conception of health, the over-tiring and over-exerting and poor ventilation was advanced by Dr. Brown. He suggested that students sacrifice certain privileges and crowds of possible, and avoid excessive fatigue.

Records at the hospital show that few colds have been accompanied by fever, and there seems to be no danger of a repetition of the influenza epidemic which worried the student body last fall. Slightly over half of the 1,283 patients listed since the beginning of the semester were treated for colds. Pains (ty, rash, chilliness), feet, cramps, insert bite, cuts, bruises, sprain, and headache were some of the other ills.

Also listed were 24 patients with sprains, a fractured jaw, and two fractured ankles. Football and basketball were some of the activities. No broken hearts are listed to date.

The Health Service staff under Dr. Brown includes Helen Marsh, Helen Stepham, Winifred Hef- ler, and Marie Harris as day nurses. Marie Beshock is night nurse.
