Dana Corp. pledges $50,000 for addition

Business is a booming business at the University.

In fact, there's been such rapid growth in the number of students interested in business courses that the College of Business Administration has outgrown its present facility, which was constructed 14 years ago.

A new $3.65 million addition to the facility is planned for the college in the near future, and Toledo's Dana Corp. has pledged $50,000 over the next three years to help make the new building a reality. The pledge will count toward the 75th Anniversary Fund, which seeks to raise $12.5 million in private contributions to ensure the University's future.

Plans have been approved for the 36,600-square-foot expansion, which will include a seminar room for graduate and upper division instruction, the presentation of professional research, publications and special programs. Everett Piper, director of development, said the room is proposed to be named the "Dana Executive Seminar Room."

Piper said the naming of the room is a fitting tribute to the Dana Corp., which has long supported academics at the University and has contributed significantly to the growth of the business college. The Dana Corp. foundation provided support for the construction of the Moore Musical Arts Center several years ago. Also, the firm supports a matching gift program through which employees' individual contributions to Bowling Green are matched with corporate dollars.

Since 1976, the University and the Dana Corp. also have jointly offered a master's degree program at Dana's corporate headquarters in Toledo, through which University faculty offer graduate business courses leading to a master's in business administration degree.

Robert Patton, dean of the college, said the program has benefited both Bowling Green and the Dana Corp. "Our faculty have found it stimulating to work with the brightest young staff in a corporation that is nationally acclaimed for its innovative, people-oriented management, while Dana employees have had the opportunity to complete their work for the M.B.A. degree without commuting to a university campus," he said.

The relationship between Dana and the University was further enhanced in 1983 when Bowling Green awarded Gerald Mitchell, Dana's chairman of the board and chief executive officer, an honorary doctor of public service degree.

The most recent Dana contribution coincides with the College of Business Administration's 50th anniversary, which was celebrated last spring. First organized in 1935, the college had a limited faculty teaching major courses only in accounting, marketing and secretarial sciences. Today, about 4,000 of Bowling Green's undergraduates are business administration majors enrolled in one of 20 specializations offered by eight academic departments.

The Dana Corp. grant is the second major gift from a Toledo firm to the college this year. Earlier, it was announced that Owens-Illinois pledged $225,000 over the next three years to fund a permanent Owens-Illinois Professorship in a business field.

Arts Unlimited reaches more children

When schools reopen this fall, Arts Unlimited is expected to reach more than twice the number of children served by the aesthetic education program last year.

Michael Moore, director of Arts Unlimited, said preliminary figures indicate 8,308 students enrolled for the 1986-87 academic year. And, he adds, those figures may be low.

Established six years ago, Arts Unlimited strives to make the arts an integral part of classroom instruction. To accomplish that goal, the program offers classroom teachers specialized arts instruction each summer and provides artists who continue to work with the teachers throughout the school year. The artists give lesson-demonstrations at schools. Field trips to live performances and art museums are planned as well.

Sponsored by the University's Continuing Education office with support from the Arts Commission of Greater Toledo, the Ohio Arts Council and individual and corporate contributions, the program benefited a record 3,800 school children last year.

"We're having a substantial increase in participation in the Bowling Green area and we've added a number of schools in the Firelands area," said Dr. Moore, noting that teacher training was conducted at both the main campus and Firelands College for the first time last June.

Arts Unlimited has received $3,190 in grants and gifts recently for its programming in the Firelands College area. Grants were received from the Lang Foundation ($690), Sandusky Mall Merchants Association ($500) and Cedar Point ($1,000). Also received was a $1,000 anonymous gift.

Preliminary figures indicate 107 classroom teachers on the kindergarten through twelfth grade levels are participating this academic year.

The teachers represent 37 schools in 20 school districts in nine northwest and north central Ohio counties.

Opening day schedule is set

The opening of the 1986-87 academic year will begin on Monday, Aug. 25, with the traditional opening day ceremonies for faculty and staff.

Classified staff will have its opening day convocation on Sept. 5, from 9-11 a.m. in the Lenhart Grand Ballroom.

The Aug. 25 ceremonies also will be held in the Lenhart Grand Ballroom beginning with refreshments at 9 a.m. A general meeting of the faculty and administration staff will begin at 9:30 a.m. with remarks by President Paul J. Olscamp and Richard Hebein, chair of Faculty Senate.

Eloise E. Clark, vice president for academic affairs, will preside over the session, which also will include the presentation of the annual teaching excellence awards by Kelly McCoy, president of Undergraduate Student Government.

College faculty meetings will be held at the following locations:

At 11 a.m.

Graduate College faculty will meet from 2:30-3:15 p.m. in 115 Education Building.

An administrative staff meeting will be held at 3 p.m. in the Alumni Room, University Union.

School and departmental meetings will be held at 3:30 p.m. in locations to be arranged and announced by directors and chairs.

Noble testifies in Washington

Biology professor Reginald Noble was one of four scientists invited to testify recently about U.S.-Soviet scientific exchanges.

Dr. Noble, who has gained an international reputation for his work on the effects of air pollutants on forests and other vegetation, testified before a House of Representatives' subcommittee on Europe and the Middle East, which is part of the Committee on Foreign Affairs. He represented the Environmental Protection Agency during the proceedings because he has headed a joint Soviet-American environmental study since 1982.

All the scientists who testified said both countries benefited from the scientific exchanges, allaying concerns that the Soviets were receiving more information than they were giving.

Dr. Noble said scientific exchange projects know no international boundaries. "Concerns about which side contributes most to the solution of a problem are dwarfed by benefits that accrue to humankind as an outcome of the solution," he said.

"In environmental concerns, we all benefit from the work being done by both Americans and Soviets," he said, adding that he has seen no evidence that the Soviets are using the exchanges for intelligence purposes.

Dr. Noble said he was optimistic about the future of the exchanges and was looking forward to a visit from his Soviet colleagues to this country sometime in the fall.

Wolfe family endows scholarship

The family of Mary and Ralph W. Wolfe, longtime Wood County restaurant owners and parents of Ralph H. Wolfe, English, has endowed a memorial scholarship in the hospitality management program in the College of Business Administration.

IMC production lab open to faculty, staff

Effective today, Aug. 18, the materials production laboratory of the Instructional Media Center, 206 Education Building, will provide regular hours of service dedicated exclusively to faculty and staff.

The faculty-staff workroom is equipped with a photocopier, computer graphic work stations, a videodisc station, a slide photo-copy station and other pieces of instructional material, including handouts, slides, photocopies, transparencies, ditto-masters, audio tapes, laminated posters and other items that can be produced.

The lab, which will be staffed by a coordinator and graduate assistants, will be open from 8 a.m.-noon, Monday through Friday.

Beginning Wednesday, Aug. 27, the lab will be open to students as well as faculty and staff from noon-5 p.m.

A grand opening will be held in 206 Education Building from 9 a.m.-noon on Sept. 15 to introduce the new features of the lab to faculty and staff.

No steam, no parking

There will be no University steam available in any building on Aug. 17, 18 and 19. This may affect air conditioning systems, hot water, cooking autoclaving or any laboratory use of steam. The steam will be back on on Wednesday, Aug. 20.

Also, no cars may be parked in lots E (central heating plant) or lot 4 (across the railroad tracks from central heating plant) on Aug. 18, 19, 20, 21 and 22. At this time, the smoke handling system will be repaired by a spray process.

Faculty and staff who normally park in lots E and 4 will find adequate parking in lots J and 3 during this time.

Fee waiver forms are due

Employees are reminded by the Office of the Bursar that dependent/employee fee waiver forms for the fall semester should be completed and forwarded as soon as possible.

The fall term begins Aug. 27.

Supervisor training sessions begin in September

One-hour training sessions will be held to acquaint supervisors of classified employees with newly revised discipline and grievance procedures.

The new procedures have been added to the 1986-87 classified staff handbook for full-time and part-time employees.

The training sessions will be held at 9 a.m. on Sept. 9, 10, 11, 15 and 16 in the Campus Room, University Union, and on Sept. 23 in the Alumni Room, University Union.

These sessions will be followed by mini-workshops, the dates and times of which will be announced at the training sessions.

The training program is mandatory for all supervisors in the operations area and optional for all other supervisors.

Supervisors planning to attend should contact Ruth Friend, management support services, to indicate which session they plan to attend.
