Bowling Green State University
In Brief:

Insurance assures primary carrier

Effective March 1, the University adopted and implemented the "Student Health Insurance" program for all University students. This program is designed to provide comprehensive health insurance coverage for students enrolled in undergraduate and graduate programs. The program also provides coverage for students who are not enrolled in the University's undergraduate or graduate programs.

University examines dilemma of eliminating asbestos

Although there is a certain degree of mystery about asbestos, officials at colleges and universities across the country are questioning the question of how to handle the asbestos that exists in abundance on campus.

At Bowling Green, William Boos, director of public safety, said efforts are being made to protect students and staff from the possibly harmful asbestos although funding is available for the asbestos removal projects. Boos said the University has not yet made a decision on whether to remove the asbestos.

CSC wants proposal delay

Minutes of College Senate Council voted at their April 27 meeting. The council approved the appointment of Dr. John Stang of the College of Business as program leader for the 1980-81 proposal delay. The proposal delay will be 1984-85.

Over the past two years, the College Senate Council has been trying to restructure the classified pay system. Proposed revisions to the pay system have been submitted to the Board of Trustees in the past two years. The council members did not have a chance to review the proposal delay. "We need some time to look at the proposal delay and make changes," said H. E. Ridout. "This is not important to pass a proposal delay that was written to a letter to the College Senate Committee and the request of the council's request." Hoogeij Hogeij, who adds the council if they think they are the good and bad per cents of the plan.

In other business, CSC agreed to the concept of an Employer Assistance Program. Personnel Support Services will work with CSC's administration to develop a program to help employees who have problems affecting their job. On May 31, CSC will be experimenting with a new program called "Exploring West," which will allow job seeking employees to take 12-hour courses at the university for a reduced rate.

Cultural diversity examined

Resolution passed by senate

In order to address the increasing diversity in the American experience during the 1990's, the College Senate at its April 27 meeting approved a resolution that will promote cultural diversity in the American experience. The resolution was passed by a suburban community. The resolution states that the council encourages the promotion of cultural diversity in the American experience and seeks additional resources to support programs and resources that promote this goal. The resolution also recommends that the council support the development of cultural competency programs in the future.

Resolution moved to the next agenda:

Science, business benefit from institute's leadership

When Karen Bunting came to Bowling Green last August, she knew she had a challenge before her. Not only was she starting a new job, she was the first woman ever to hold the position of director of the University's new McMaster Leadership Institute.

Bunting's success and the ideas behind the leadership institute will be the focus of a workshop held on May 15 at 11 a.m. in the Centennial Ballroom. The workshop is open to all members of the university community.

Bunting's leadership initiatives have included the creation of the McMaster Leadership Institute, the McMaster Leadership Program, and the McMaster Leadership Fellows Program. These programs are designed to provide students with the skills and knowledge necessary to become successful leaders in their respective fields.

As the second woman to hold the position of director of the McMaster Leadership Institute, Bunting has made significant contributions to the field of leadership education. Her work has been recognized with numerous awards, including the McMaster Leadership Award and the McMaster Leadership Fellow Award.

Bunting's leadership philosophy is based on the belief that leadership is not something that can be acquired, but rather, it is a skill that can be developed through education and practice. She encourages her students to be proactive in their careers and to take ownership of their personal and professional development.

Bunting believes that leadership is not about being the best, but about being the best that one can be. She is committed to creating a learning environment where students can develop their leadership skills and reach their full potential.

In her role as director of the McMaster Leadership Institute, Bunting is focused on providing students with the tools and resources they need to become effective leaders. She is dedicated to creating a supportive and inclusive environment where students can feel comfortable to express their ideas and to take risks.

Bunting's leadership initiatives have helped to create a culture of excellence and innovation at the University. Her work has been recognized with numerous awards, including the McMaster Leadership Award and the McMaster Leadership Fellow Award.

Prior learning workshop topics

The National Prior Learning Workshop will be held May 15 in the Assembly Room of the University of Cincinnati. It is designed to help faculty educate and administer credit for non college academic experiences, especially those in the army.

Petroleo credit, a fourth option for credit, will also be discussed. Workshop participants will have an opportunity to present assessment tools.

The workshop will be an all day event.

Science, business benefit from institute’s leadership

When Karen Bunting came to Bowling Green last August, she was hired with the clear mission to help the University’s new McMaster Leadership Institute.

In her new role, the director Hart said she is committed to making the institute a success and looks forward to working with others to ensure its success.

The institute was created to provide opportunities for faculty and students to explore and develop their leadership skills.

Science and business programs were also benefits for the institute.

Science and business programs were also benefits for the institute.

Bunting is a leader in the development of science programs and has experience in both science and business.

She has previously worked in research and development at a number of companies and has served as a consultant to a number of businesses.

She has also been involved in the development of science programs at the University of Cincinnati and has been a member of the faculty of the College of Business.

Bunting plans to continue her work in the area of science and business programs and to develop new programs to meet the needs of students and faculty.

Bunting said she is looking forward to working with others to ensure the success of the institute.

Schoolhouse still rings with students’ voices

The first grade class of the Field School from Fostoria visited the University’s Educational Memorabilia Center, better known as the little red schoolhouse.

In 1970, the little red schoolhouse in Norwalk, Ohio opened as the Educational Memorabilia Center, or E-MC, as part of the Department of Educational Administration. It is sponsored by the University’s Center for Community Service and Development, and is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

The first grade class, which consists of 16 students, visited the E-MC to learn about the history of education in the United States.
