Little Fellow Has Aspirations Of Becoming Basketweaver Manager

A little fellow with big plans for the future is Dick Stephens, four-foot-two freshman from Scanstolto. St.

As an artist, Dick plans to go pro on the Winter Olympic team after his graduation from Bowling Green State. He made the decision last year when he found that his advertising campaign for the Winter Olympics helped attract the biggest audience ever to attend a basketball game at Bowling Green State High. And to quote Dick, "The local people will never believe it!"

His plans for the more immediate future include trying out for the freshman basketball team. He has had experience in that line, having served as high school basketball manager for the past three years.

Another of Dick's favorite sports is hunting and he joins the Rifle Club to keep in practice for shooting squarebear near his family's farm.

The diminutive freshman, who bears his name religiously, enjoys the Bowling Green camp and very friendly and thinks he will be here a long time. In fact, he has only one complaint—"that walk from my house on South Summit St. to the Fine Arts Atrium, for an eight o'clock morning class a week." Describing his first encounter with unorthodox Share, Dick says "I didn't go to the advertising business at all and just kept looking up. It was as if I was walking down the street and saw an elephant," he explains.
