Chairs share governance essential to the University

Council is changing administrative image

Bob Kreienkamp, Administrative Staff Council

It is time for administrative Council to become an essential part of the University's governance. Last fall, I suggested to the entire Administrative Staff Council in my presentation to the Executive Committee that this was necessary. The need is critical for the University's governance and the Staff Council's role is testament to this need.

Administrative Council is changing chair and constituents. Kreienkamp never expected to be involved in a governance role, but he did, and he says it was a positive experience. The University's new president is a great addition to the leadership team, and he has shown a strong commitment to sharing governance with the Staff Council.

She's not likely to be the last chair to step into this position, and she urges other members to step up and get involved. The Staff Council has been in the forefront of many changes at the University, and it continues to be an important part of the governance process.

Suzanne Crawford
Administrative Staff Council

CSC is becoming a force to be dealt with

Bob Kreienkamp, Administrative Staff Council

Kreienkamp has been a vocal advocate for the CSC and its role in University governance. He says that the CSC has become an important force on campus, and that it needs to be treated with respect.

Hurd, Flanagan and Platt, three novelists and acclaimed writers, will be offering a two-day writing workshop at the University. Their work has made a significant impact on American fiction, and they will be offering a picture of the creative process.

The workshop will be held in the fall, and it will include sessions on writing techniques, storytelling and character development. The participants will have the opportunity to work with these accomplished writers and learn from their experiences.

Bob Kreienkamp
Classified Staff Council

A collective voice can be an effective voice

Ralph Wolfe, Faculty Senate

The Faculty Senate is an important voice on campus, and it has been instrumental in many changes at the University. Wolfe says that the Senate is a forum where faculty can express their opinions and be heard.

An increase in the 1988-89 salary pool of between 4% and 5% was requested by the University's staff. The Senate, in turn, requested a 6% increase for the 1988-89 fiscal year.

Working closely with the University's central administration, the Senate was able to secure a 6% increase for the 1988-89 fiscal year. The Senate is pleased with the outcome, and it is grateful to the University for its support.

On the other hand, the increase for the 1989-90 fiscal year was less than the Senate had requested. The Senate is disappointed with the outcome, but it is committed to continuing its efforts to represent the faculty and their interests.

The increase for the 1988-89 fiscal year was less than the Senate had requested. The Senate is disappointed with the outcome, but it is committed to continuing its efforts to represent the faculty and their interests.

In order to keep the representatives abreast of the council's activities, Kreienkamp has initiated the "chair's report" to start each monthly meeting. In addition, controversial issues have been discussed at length. It's important to note that the chair's report is not just a summary of what has happened, but also an analysis of the issue and a discussion of how it will be handled in the future.

Kreienkamp is committed to ensuring that the University remains a place where people can work together to solve problems and make decisions. He believes that the University is a place where people can be themselves and express their views, and that this is a good thing.

The collaborative spirit that Kreienkamp has fostered is evident in the work of the council. The council is composed of a diverse group of people, and it is committed to working together to achieve the University's goals.

Kreienkamp is looking forward to the future, and he is confident that the Council will continue to be an effective voice for the University.

RALPH WOLFE
Faculty Senate
Chair is changing administrative image

When C. Susan Crawford, continuing education, showers her chair as chair of the Administrative Council, she does not mean just one small compact. She is not very fond of simplicity. "I've never really cared for the term 'administrative assistant.'" Crawford said. "I mean it in a negative way. It's just a word that brings up a particular image in my mind."

Crawford says she doesn't see the council as an audience for the Administrative Council's meeting and her presentation. Her presentation focuses on the administrative assistants and their responsibilities. Crawford says she sees the council as an audience for the Administrative Council's meeting and her presentation. Her presentation focuses on the administrative assistants and their responsibilities.

Crawford said, "I've never really cared for the term 'administrative assistant.'" Crawford said. "I mean it in a negative way. It's just a word that brings up a particular image in my mind."

Crawford says she doesn't see the council as an audience for the Administrative Council's meeting and her presentation. Her presentation focuses on the administrative assistants and their responsibilities. Crawford says she sees the council as an audience for the Administrative Council's meeting and her presentation. Her presentation focuses on the administrative assistants and their responsibilities.

Suzanne Crawford
Administrative Staff Council

CSC is becoming a force to be dealt with

Bob Kreienkamp, WSGU-TV, got the shock of his life when he attended his first Staff Council meeting last July. He was elected chair.

"I was prepared for an open seat on the council last spring and was interested in the council and its issues," said Kreienkamp. "I never expected to be picked." He didn't even know much about the council, he said.

Kreienkamp turned up the noise of CSC during an open meeting of the council last year, and the noise was louder for staff issues. He was one of the first staff members to join the council's staff at the University of Iowa in 1985, has been a leader of staff issues for years, and is now chair of the council.

The 35-member council is the largest staff council at any university in the country. It is also the most active, with 14 committees and a staff budget of $2 million. The council's goal is to provide a forum for staff members to voice their opinions and concerns.

Kreienkamp said he was "prepared for a force to be dealt with" when he was elected chair. He has been active in the council since he was elected, and he plans to continue to be active in the council as long as he is chair.

"I've never really cared for the term 'administrative assistant.'" Crawford said. "I mean it in a negative way. It's just a word that brings up a particular image in my mind."

Crawford says she doesn't see the council as an audience for the Administrative Council's meeting and her presentation. Her presentation focuses on the administrative assistants and their responsibilities. Crawford says she sees the council as an audience for the Administrative Council's meeting and her presentation. Her presentation focuses on the administrative assistants and their responsibilities.

Suzanne Crawford
Administrative Staff Council

Bob Kreienkamp
Classified Staff Council

A collective voice can be an effective voice

Dr. Ralph Wolfe, English, does not like the word "collective" because it means "a group of people working together." Instead, he prefers to call such groups "a series of individual voices."

"These are different from the council," Wolfe said. "These are separate and distinct individuals, unlike the council, which is a group of people working together.

During the past eight years as a senator, Wolfe has learned that the council is a place where people can speak out on issues that they care about. Wolfe has been involved in a variety of topics, both academic and non-academic, during his time on the council.

"I've never really cared for the term 'administrative assistant.'" Crawford said. "I mean it in a negative way. It's just a word that brings up a particular image in my mind."

Crawford says she doesn't see the council as an audience for the Administrative Council's meeting and her presentation. Her presentation focuses on the administrative assistants and their responsibilities. Crawford says she sees the council as an audience for the Administrative Council's meeting and her presentation. Her presentation focuses on the administrative assistants and their responsibilities.

Suzanne Crawford
Administrative Staff Council

Bob Kreienkamp
Classified Staff Council

RALPH WOLFE

Faculty Senate

Chair is changing administrative image

When C. Susan Crawford, continuing education, showers her chair as chair of the Administrative Council, she does not mean just one small compact. She is not very fond of simplicity. "I've never really cared for the term 'administrative assistant.'" Crawford said. "I mean it in a negative way. It's just a word that brings up a particular image in my mind."

Crawford says she doesn't see the council as an audience for the Administrative Council's meeting and her presentation. Her presentation focuses on the administrative assistants and their responsibilities. Crawford says she sees the council as an audience for the Administrative Council's meeting and her presentation. Her presentation focuses on the administrative assistants and their responsibilities.

Suzanne Crawford
Administrative Staff Council

CSC is becoming a force to be dealt with

Bob Kreienkamp, WSGU-TV, got the shock of his life when he attended his first Staff Council meeting last July. He was elected chair.

"I was prepared for an open seat on the council last spring and was interested in the council and its issues," said Kreienkamp. "I never expected to be picked." He didn't even know much about the council, he said.

Kreienkamp turned up the noise of CSC during an open meeting of the council last year, and the noise was louder for staff issues. He was one of the first staff members to join the council's staff at the University of Iowa in 1985, has been a leader of staff issues for years, and is now chair of the council.

The 35-member council is the largest staff council at any university in the country. It is also the most active, with 14 committees and a staff budget of $2 million. The council's goal is to provide a forum for staff members to voice their opinions and concerns.

Kreienkamp said he was "prepared for a force to be dealt with" when he was elected chair. He has been active in the council since he was elected, and he plans to continue to be active in the council as long as he is chair.

"I've never really cared for the term 'administrative assistant.'" Crawford said. "I mean it in a negative way. It's just a word that brings up a particular image in my mind."

Crawford says she doesn't see the council as an audience for the Administrative Council's meeting and her presentation. Her presentation focuses on the administrative assistants and their responsibilities. Crawford says she sees the council as an audience for the Administrative Council's meeting and her presentation. Her presentation focuses on the administrative assistants and their responsibilities.

Suzanne Crawford
Administrative Staff Council

Bob Kreienkamp
Classified Staff Council

A collective voice can be an effective voice

Dr. Ralph Wolfe, English, does not like the word "collective" because it means "a group of people working together." Instead, he prefers to call such groups "a series of individual voices."

"These are different from the council," Wolfe said. "These are separate and distinct individuals, unlike the council, which is a group of people working together.

During the past eight years as a senator, Wolfe has learned that the council is a place where people can speak out on issues that they care about. Wolfe has been involved in a variety of topics, both academic and non-academic, during his time on the council.

"I've never really cared for the term 'administrative assistant.'" Crawford said. "I mean it in a negative way. It's just a word that brings up a particular image in my mind."

Crawford says she doesn't see the council as an audience for the Administrative Council's meeting and her presentation. Her presentation focuses on the administrative assistants and their responsibilities. Crawford says she sees the council as an audience for the Administrative Council's meeting and her presentation. Her presentation focuses on the administrative assistants and their responsibilities.

Suzanne Crawford
Administrative Staff Council

Bob Kreienkamp
Classified Staff Council

RALPH WOLFE

Faculty Senate

An increase in the 1986-89 salary pool of at least 7% percent was high on the University's list of priorities for the 1987-88 fiscal year. The University has been working to increase the salary pool as a way to retain key employees and improve the overall quality of its workforce.

The increase in the 1986-89 salary pool of at least 7% percent was high on the University's list of priorities for the 1987-88 fiscal year. The University has been working to increase the salary pool as a way to retain key employees and improve the overall quality of its workforce.

An increase in the 1986-89 salary pool of at least 7% percent was high on the University's list of priorities for the 1987-88 fiscal year. The University has been working to increase the salary pool as a way to retain key employees and improve the overall quality of its workforce.

An increase in the 1986-89 salary pool of at least 7% percent was high on the University's list of priorities for the 1987-88 fiscal year. The University has been working to increase the salary pool as a way to retain key employees and improve the overall quality of its workforce.

An increase in the 1986-89 salary pool of at least 7% percent was high on the University's list of priorities for the 1987-88 fiscal year. The University has been working to increase the salary pool as a way to retain key employees and improve the overall quality of its workforce.

An increase in the 1986-89 salary pool of at least 7% percent was high on the University's list of priorities for the 1987-88 fiscal year. The University has been working to increase the salary pool as a way to retain key employees and improve the overall quality of its workforce.

An increase in the 1986-89 salary pool of at least 7% percent was high on the University's list of priorities for the 1987-88 fiscal year. The University has been working to increase the salary pool as a way to retain key employees and improve the overall quality of its workforce.

An increase in the 1986-89 salary pool of at least 7% percent was high on the University's list of priorities for the 1987-88 fiscal year. The University has been working to increase the salary pool as a way to retain key employees and improve the overall quality of its workforce.

An increase in the 1986-89 salary pool of at least 7% percent was high on the University's list of priorities for the 1987-88 fiscal year. The University has been working to increase the salary pool as a way to retain key employees and improve the overall quality of its workforce.

An increase in the 1986-89 salary pool of at least 7% percent was high on the University's list of priorities for the 1987-88 fiscal year. The University has been working to increase the salary pool as a way to retain key employees and improve the overall quality of its workforce.
Nominations are taken for award

Nominations currently being solicited are for the Paul and Ruth Ockman Research Award. The award is given annually to a member of the faculty for outstanding scholarly work or creative accomplishment in the past five years. Such accomplishments include publications (books, monographs, articles, conference papers), grants, compositions, arrangements, exhibitions, honors or prizes, public service, and other work that qualifies for such consideration. Nominations should be made by a brief paragraph outlining the nominee's contributions to music, a copy of the supporting information, and a brief summary of the information will be submitted to the committee.

Conservationist to speak Feb. 16

Dr. Augusto Mediano, Caribbean project officer of the World Wildlife Fund, will speak on campus Feb. 16 (11 a.m., Memorial Union, Third Floor). Dr. Mediano is the author of the book "To the Tropics" at 7:30 p.m. in 112 Life Science Building, he will illustrate his talk with slides of development activities in fragile environments such as Central and South America.

Mediano has been a primary force in the conservation education in the programs of schools, non-profit organizations and government agencies throughout Latin America. He is a consultant for the Inde U.S. Children's

You might say "Abused Person Singal" is a comedy for the multitudes, a comedy about all of the mistakes that can occur in the bedroom. The play revolves around three0 eighteen-year-olds, one of whom is a woman who is looking for a way to escape from the sexual situation. The other two are men who are struggling to make it on top despite the fact that they are in a relationship with people that are perpetually lying with each other. Gofford and his wife, who is a brilliant psychiatrist, are coupled with her medical profession, while Ronald and his wife, who is a successful professional as an ostentatious society. Tickets are available only at the door. General admission is $5 or $3 for students. Doors open at 7 p.m.

For sale

The Department of German, Russian, and East Asian Languages has sale to other departments and organizations. Any inquiries should be made by calling 1-318-906-2256.

Faculty/staff positions

The following faculty positions are available:

1. Assistant Professor of German, Russian, and East Asian Languages for low to other other departments and organizations. Any inquiries should be made by calling 1-318-906-2256.

Classified Employment Opportunities

For sale

The German, Russian, and East Asian Languages has sale to other departments and organizations. Any inquiries should be made by calling 1-318-906-2256.

Fulbright Scholar feels right at home in new surroundings

Dr. Hans-Juergen Weckermann, a German professor, recently arrived on campus to teach courses in German Studies. Weckermann has been teaching for three years and is currently teaching courses in German literature and culture.

Weckermann says he feels right at home in his new surroundings. "I have taught in Germany for several years," he said. "I am comfortable teaching in a foreign language and I am happy to be here to teach at BSU.

Weckermann's research interests include German literature and culture. He has published several articles on these topics and is currently working on a book about the works of German author Franz Kafka.

Weckermann is also involved in community service projects, including teaching English as a Second Language (ESL) classes to local adults.

The Fulbright program provides opportunities for international students to study abroad and engage in meaningful professional experiences. It is sponsored by the U.S. Department of State and administered by the Institute of International Education (IIE). The program is available to U.S. citizens who are interested in pursuing advanced training in the fields of science, technology, and the arts.

Weckermann is conducting research on the effects of globalization on German literature and culture, and is also teaching courses in German literature and culture. He has published several articles on these topics and is currently working on a book about the works of German author Franz Kafka.

Hans-Juergen Weckermann was born in Germany in 1960. He received his Ph.D. in German literature from the University of Hamburg in 1990. He has been teaching at the University of Hamburg since 1991.

Weckermann's research interests include German literature and culture. He has published several articles on these topics and is currently working on a book about the works of German author Franz Kafka.

Weckermann is also involved in community service projects, including teaching English as a Second Language (ESL) classes to local adults.

The Fulbright program provides opportunities for international students to study abroad and engage in meaningful professional experiences. It is sponsored by the U.S. Department of State and administered by the Institute of International Education (IIE). The program is available to U.S. citizens who are interested in pursuing advanced training in the fields of science, technology, and the arts.

Weckermann is conducting research on the effects of globalization on German literature and culture, and is also teaching courses in German literature and culture. He has published several articles on these topics and is currently working on a book about the works of German author Franz Kafka.

Hans-Juergen Weckermann was born in Germany in 1960. He received his Ph.D. in German literature from the University of Hamburg in 1990. He has been teaching at the University of Hamburg since 1991.

Weckermann's research interests include German literature and culture. He has published several articles on these topics and is currently working on a book about the works of German author Franz Kafka.

Weckermann is also involved in community service projects, including teaching English as a Second Language (ESL) classes to local adults.