Note holiday

Monday, Jan. 15, Martin Luther King Day: All University offices will be closed on Jan. 15. Most university offices will be closed on that day and all University offices will be closed Jan. 16. There will be absolutely nothing by area supervisors should change during the holiday period.

Weather policy is announced

The University has announced its weather policy. In the event of snow or freezing rain, the University will close at 1 p.m. on the day the snow or freezing rain begins. The University will change its weather policy under these conditions:

1. All employees must be notified of the change in weather policy by 7 a.m. the day of any decision to cancel classes.
2. The public relations office will notify the news media of the change in weather policy.
3. The University will not return to classes if the snow or freezing rain continues beyond 5.0 p.m. on the day of the decision to close classes.
4. The University will return to classes if the snow or freezing rain is cleared by 5.0 p.m. on the day of the decision to close classes.

New classroom facility top priority of capital budget improvements

A new classroom building will be the top priority for the University's capital budget improvements for the fiscal year 1992.

Most of the funding for the proposed new building was included in the 1991-92 University budget recommended for the state by the University for the Ohio House of Representatives for that fiscal year.

In addition to the new classroom building, the University is planning to spend $1 million on renovations of teaching facilities as well as other major projects.

Continued on Page 3

---

Special program on Jan. 17 honors King

A special program honoring Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. will be held Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the Center for Performing Arts on the University campus.

Continued on Page 3
Program receives overwhelming response

Recreation center provides an option to the high calorie lunch

The holidays are over and reality is starting to assert itself. People are starting to look more trim and fit than in their usual winter months, but there's still a hint of that holiday cheer that chokes a bit of joy out of it. On top of it all, Americans have to start thinking that in the new year they may not have to buy their year's Supply of fat. So, what's the solution? A healthy lifestyle is a must, and the first step is to choose a healthy diet. In fact, many people have started planning their meals for the new year, and one option is to consider a high calorie lunch.

Recreation center provides an option to the high calorie lunch

The holidays are over and reality is starting to assert itself. People are starting to look more trim and fit than in their usual winter months, but there's still a hint of that holiday cheer that chokes a bit of joy out of it. On top of it all, Americans have to start thinking that in the new year they may not have to buy their year's Supply of fat. So, what's the solution? A healthy lifestyle is a must, and the first step is to choose a healthy diet. In fact, many people have started planning their meals for the new year, and one option is to consider a high calorie lunch.

Honors Program seeks faculty to teach special interest classes

The Honors Program at the University of Central Florida offers a wide variety of special interest classes to its students. The program is designed to provide faculty members with an opportunity to teach courses that are not typically offered in the regular curriculum. The program is open to all faculty members, and the classes are offered on a credit or non-credit basis. The classes cover a wide range of topics, including art, history, literature, and science. Faculty members are encouraged to develop classes that are specific to their areas of expertise, and the program provides funding to support the development of these classes. The classes are open to all students, and they are offered during the fall, spring, and summer semesters. The Honors Program seeks faculty members to teach special interest classes, particularly those who are interested in teaching during the summer sessions.
Honors Program seeks faculty to teach special interest classes

Each semester, the Honors Program offers a wide variety of special interest classes taught by Northwestern faculty. The classes are open to all Honors students and a limited number of seniors in the five University divisions. For the 1991-92 academic year, the Honors Program is particularly interested in faculty willing to teach special interest classes in the following areas:

- Psychology
- Economics
- History
- English
- Geography
- Computer Science
- Mathematics
- Biology
- Chemistry
- Physics
- Environmental Studies

The Honors Program has recently received funding from the College of Science and the School of Engineering and Applied Science to support special interest classes. Faculty members in all University divisions are encouraged to propose classes on topics of special interest. These classes should be designed to attract students who are interested in exploring a specific area of study in greater depth than is possible in the required curriculum. Faculty members are encouraged to propose courses that will complement the existing curriculum and that will appeal to students with diverse backgrounds and interests.

The proposal should include a description of the course content, learning objectives, and expected outcomes. The proposal should also indicate the number of students who are expected to enroll and the anticipated duration of the course. The proposal should be submitted to the Honors Program Director, Dr. Robert Markwick, by January 1, 1992.

The Honors Program values the contributions of faculty members in all University divisions and is committed to providing a supportive environment for the development of new and innovative courses. Faculty members who are interested in teaching special interest classes are encouraged to contact the Honors Program Director or any member of the Honors Program faculty for more information.

SCHOLARSHIPS: A GREAT WARM Welcome

Dr. Ramesh Varma, dean of the School of Medicine at Northwestern University, announced today the establishment of a new scholarship program for incoming medical students. The Varma Scholarship will provide five-year scholarships of $250,000 each to five outstanding students who demonstrate exceptional academic achievement, leadership, and community service. The scholarships will be awarded on the basis of a competitive application process and will be renewable for a total of $1,250,000 over the course of the student's medical education.

In making the announcement, Dr. Varma said, "We are delighted to be able to offer these five-year scholarships to outstanding students who are poised to become tomorrow's leaders in medicine. These scholarships will enable our students to focus on their academic and professional development and to make a significant contribution to the field of medicine."
Faculty Senate to act on Jan. 16 meeting delayed consideration of a resolution recommending action regarding a lack of confidence in President Olscamp’s leadership.

The Faculty Senate is scheduled to meet on Jan. 16 to consider a resolution recommending action regarding a lack of confidence in President Olscamp’s leadership. The resolution was introduced by Senator Michael Doelling and has been on the agenda for several meetings. The Senate has been discussing the resolution for several weeks and is expected to vote on it at the Jan. 16 meeting.

Williams expects a smooth transition

New business dean makes quality his top priority

Dr. Fred Williams, new dean of the College of Business Administration and Management at WBGU, is expected to bring a strong business background to his new position. Williams has a Ph.D. in business administration from the University of Michigan and has held several high-ranking positions in the business world.

Faculty tables resolution table lack confidence in President Olscamp's leadership

The Faculty Senate is scheduled to meet on Jan. 16 to consider a resolution recommending action regarding a lack of confidence in President Olscamp’s leadership. The resolution was introduced by Senator Michael Doelling and has been on the agenda for several meetings. The Senate has been discussing the resolution for several weeks and is expected to vote on it at the Jan. 16 meeting.

Williams expects a smooth transition

Dr. Fred Williams, new dean of the College of Business Administration and Management at WBGU, is expected to bring a strong business background to his new position. Williams has a Ph.D. in business administration from the University of Michigan and has held several high-ranking positions in the business world.

New business dean makes quality his top priority

Dr. Fred Williams, new dean of the College of Business Administration and Management at WBGU, is expected to bring a strong business background to his new position. Williams has a Ph.D. in business administration from the University of Michigan and has held several high-ranking positions in the business world.

Williams expects a smooth transition

Dr. Fred Williams, new dean of the College of Business Administration and Management at WBGU, is expected to bring a strong business background to his new position. Williams has a Ph.D. in business administration from the University of Michigan and has held several high-ranking positions in the business world.