Deans named to colleges of Education and Human Development and Musical Arts

Josué Cruz named education dean

An educator with a strong background in both academics and administration has been chosen as the next dean of the College of Education and Human Development. Josué Cruz, of the University of South Florida, was named dean of the college on April 18. John Folkins, provost and vice president for academic affairs, announced. Cruz's appointment becomes effective August 1.

An internationally recognized advocate for children, families and quality teacher preparation, Cruz has been a member of the board of directors for the World Organization for Early Childhood Education and participated in educational reform in El Salvador for the U.S. Agency for International Development.

His professional service includes membership in some of the most prestigious bodies in the field of education. He is vice president of the National Association for the Education of Young Children, chair of the Coalition of Organizations for the Preparation of Professional Educators, and serves on the executive board of the National Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education.

The position at Bowling Green will mark a return to the state for Cruz, who was at at Ohio State University from 1982-95. There he served as an associate professor and program coordinator for Professional Introduction, coordinator for Early Childhood Education, and then professor and assistant vice president for minority affairs and assistant to the dean in the Graduate School.

In 1999 he moved to the University of South Florida as a professor of childhood education and faculty assistant to the president. In this position, he serves as liaison to academic affairs, Faculty Senate, Athletic Council, Student Affairs and a number of universitywide committees.

Cruz received his Ph.D. in education administration at the University of Wisconsin in Madison in 1973. Throughout his career, he has been active in scholarship and continues to publish in the field of early childhood.

He and his wife, Lollie, have three daughters, two of whom are undergraduate school students and one, a high school junior.

Ellen Williams, who has served as interim dean of the college for the past two years, will return to the faculty in special education and rehabilitation counseling, following a Faculty Improvement Leave and trips abroad to other universities. See Monitor online for more on Williams' plans.

Kennell named dean of the College of Musical Arts

Administering a college of music calls for a special combination of skills and abilities compatible with the artistic nature of its members.

In Richard Kennell, BGSU has found a person who understands the needs of musicians firsthand, is adept at administering the multifaceted aspects of the college, and has a strong commitment to both recruitment and music outreach.

Kennell has been named the dean of the College of Musical Arts. John Folkins, provost and vice president for academic affairs, announced April 22. Kennell has served as interim dean of the college since 2000.

Nationally known for his expertise in recruitment and retention, Kennell is a frequent speaker at music educators' conferences. Under his direction,

Bowling Green has developed a reputation for innovative approaches to recruitment, which feature early communication with, and preparatory assistance to, high school music students.

Kennell has published widely in the area of music teaching methodology, with more than 20 scholarly publications and 50 presentations on applied music study and issues in music education.

Kennell came to BGSU in 1980 as an assistant professor in the Department of Performance Studies and was promoted to full professor in 1999, teaching undergraduate and graduate courses. He served as assistant dean from 1980-87, acting dean in 1982-83 and associate dean from 1989-2000, when he was appointed interim dean.

He also oversees the MidAmerica Center for Contemporary Music, the BGSU Festival Series, the Music Plus program and the Summer Music Institute.

A saxophonist, Kennell received his Ph.D. in curriculum and instruction (music education) from the University of Wisconsin at Madison in 1989. He received a master's degree in music from Northwestern University in 1974 and a bachelor of music education degree, also from Northwestern, in 1971.

See Monitor online for more on both new deans.
