BGSU history faculty contribute content for $1 million grant project

Two years ago, BGSU faculty began providing "history links" to Toledo and Fremont teachers as part of a U.S. Department of Education-funded program.

Now, they're "expanding America" for more teachers—from 21 school districts in Erie, Huron, Sandusky and Seneca counties—and with the help of more money—a $1 million award from the federal education department.

Over the next three years, the new project, called "Expanding America: Democracy, War, Diplomacy and Migration," will include 18 Saturday colloquia and three weeklong summer institutes for 105 teachers—35 per year—in grades 4-12. That's a similar schedule to the federally funded "History Links" program launched in 2002.

Liette Gidlow, history, is academic director for the first year of the project, whose purpose, she said, is "to improve teachers' content knowledge of history" through each year's six Saturday conferences and summer institute. Faculty from colleges and universities will be guest lecturers at the sessions, most of which will be held at the Rutherford B. Hayes Presidential Center in Fremont.

The content will be aligned with new state standards for social studies and should help teachers "to better be able to meet the demands of the content standards," Gidlow said. Her co-principal investigator is Scott Martin, history, who has been academic director of "History Links" and will assume the same role in "Expanding America" after its precursor ends next year.

President Sidney Ribeau spoke on opening day about BGSU strengthening relationships with the larger community for mutual benefit, "and we think this (new project) is a really terrific example of doing just that," added Gidlow.

The project, one of five in Ohio and 122 nationwide funded this year with Teaching American History Grants, will make extensive use of original, primary-source documents. Among those documents are diaries, speeches, papers, treaties and other government records, she explained, calling them "the raw data that we use to draw historical conclusions."

Partnering with the schools, BGSU and the Hayes Center will be public television station WGTE in Toledo. "This is an exciting difference" from "History Links," Gidlow noted, because WGTE will both produce an "Expanding America" Web site and help teachers learn to create their own Web sites.

Starting in October, the project's first year will be devoted to the most recent period of American history—"Becoming a World Power" after the Civil War and through the Cold War and its aftermath. For scheduling reasons, earlier periods will be covered in subsequent years, namely America and the world during colonial times, the American Revolution and the development of American democracy, and "War, Expansion and Democracy" from the Revolution to the Civil War.

Tom Culbertson, director of museum and education at the Hayes Center, said the project is a natural extension of its predecessor.

"We figured that 'History Links' was successful and we had a model to work from, although we've improved on it in this one," he said. The improvement, he continued, is in the more unified approach of having all participating teachers attend every session in a given year, rather than being able to pick and choose which ones they will attend. That approach may help organizers better measure the project’s effectiveness later, he said.

"History Links" has helped "re-energize" some of the Toledo and Fremont teachers, Cubertson added, saying "we had inquiries from teachers in surrounding districts who wanted to participate, but weren’t part of our grant population."

With "Expanding America," they’ll get the chance, and "we’re hoping that things run just as smoothly," he said.

BGSU used as case study in new PR textbook

BGSU’s response when six students returning from spring break in Florida were killed in an auto accident is cited as a case study in a new public relations textbook.

The deadly mishap in 2002 on a rain-slicked stretch of Interstate 75 in Kentucky captured widespread attention in the news media. A description of how the University handled the accident’s aftermath appears in the new book, Developing the Public Relations Campaign, A Team-Based Approach, co-authored by Randy Bobbitt of the University of North Carolina at Wilmington and Ruth Sullivan of Marshall University.

The three-page case study tells how staff in Marketing & Communications, Student Affairs and Residence Life, along with students, worked together to provide information and bring solace to the campus community, particularly to students in the residence hall where all six of the popular coeds lived.

Jill Carr, associate dean of students; Kimberly McBroom, associate vice president for University Advancement and director of Marketing & Communications, and Teri Sharp, media relations director, are quoted in the book.

When requesting the interviews, co-author Bobbitt, who has a Ph.D. from BGSU, indicated he’d heard about the accident and was impressed with how the University used its Web site to provide information.

The new textbook, published by Allyn and Bacon, is intended for use in advanced college-level “capstone” courses in public relations.

Firelands’ new Deering Terrace enhances arboretum

Construction has begun on a terrace overlooking Parker Lake at BGSU Firelands that will enable Firelands and K-12 teachers to take education outside the classroom.

Funded by a $120,000 donation from Fred Deering, the 2,000-square-foot terrace will advance the aesthetic and educational goals of James M. McBride Arboretum. It will be open to the public as well as the college.

In addition to educational purposes, it can be used as a performance space and a site for weddings, receptions or other activities. The Erie MetroParks will manage the terrace, as it does the rest of the arboretum, and will handle scheduling of events there.

Deering, a longtime Erie County public servant whose service included years as a county commissioner and Ohio legislator, dedicated the terrace in memory of his late wife, Dorothy, to whom he was married for 53 years before her death in 1998. "I couldn’t have accomplished all I did without her help," he said.

Two local firms, Poulos and Associates Architects Inc. of Sandusky and Daniel Frederick Architects of Milan designed the terrace at no charge.

The new terrace is the most recent effort by Deering on behalf of the arboretum. He was instrumental in its founding—not just in an administrative capacity but as a hands-on volunteer, planting the many flowering crabapples and other flora. He also collaborated with James McBride to have Parker Lake dug.

“I’ve watched it grow and develop since the very beginning. It was the work of a lot of different people. The spirit of cooperation, of work and of donations is so strong,” he said of the arboretum board, past and present. The board was very excited about having the terrace, he explained, so “I figured the least I could do was fund it.”

“This gift to the James H. McBride Arboretum is a wonderful testimonial to not only Dorothy but to Fred Deering as well. Fred, in every sense of the word, is a community leader. This gift is just another example of his leadership within and for our community,” said Firelands Dean Smith.

“The terrace will provide additional access to a beautiful facility that enhances our campus in so many ways. With students more often invited out to the arboretum, I feel certain that the arboretum board, especially Chair Tom Roberts, will be overjoyed by the increased traffic in an area that is splendidly gorgeous year-round,” he added.

The three-level terrace will include a narrow, 25-foot pier extending into Parker Lake. Nestled between the Peace and Tranquility Garden and the sumac planting bed, the multi-use terrace is designed to enhance the overall experience of the arboretum, the architects said.

New media group to give campus a voice during GOP convention

The new media consortium, The Screensavers Group, will give people all over the world—including the BGSU campus community—a voice at the Republican National Convention through technology and an experimental software.

The Screensavers Group, based in New York City, is comprised of artists, new technology professionals and community activists.

RNC Redux is part art performance and part live video stream. Using a new software called Keyworx, the Screensavers Group will produce a video that is created and edited in real time and will be streamed over the Internet each night of the convention.

Keyworx was originally used in New York clubs and art venues to allow people to mix different media such as sound, images, video and text like a disc jockey mixes music. For the convention, the Screensavers Group will use the software to combine thousands of text messages, images, videos and audio clips that will be placed on the Internet each day by people who use blogs, instant messaging, emails and Web sites.

RNC Redux will present video projections of the streaming images on the streets of New York City each night of the convention, giving anyone who participates both a symbolic and physical voice at the event.

The event will also take place at BGSU as a projection on the Bowen-Thompson Student Union. The public will be encouraged to add their voices to this collective documentary via cell phone, email, and instant message or written text as the video projections happen. People can voice their opinions regardless of their political affiliations.

People may participate in the RNC Redux by stopping by the union from 8-10 p.m. Tuesday-Thursday (Aug. 31-Sept. 2) or by going to the Internet at those times:

Lot 4 closes for improvements

Lot 4, the commuter parking lot across the railroad tracks from the Heating Plant, will close beginning today (Aug. 30) for construction, including paving. The project is expected to continue through mid-November barring no weather-related delays.

In the meantime, the University will attempt to offset the displacement of those who would normally park in Lot 4 by offering a special shuttle run. Shuttle stops will be at Perry Field House, the Ice Arena and a site yet to be determined near the Bowen-Thompson Student Union. Those who normally park in Lot 4 are asked to park either at the field house or Ice Arena and use the shuttle. It will operate from 7:30-10:30 a.m. and 2:30-5:30 p.m. daily; although those hours will be reviewed periodically to determine if adjustments are needed.

ABC picks up BGSU/Oklahoma season opener

Saturday's (Sept. 4) season-opening football game between Bowling Green and Oklahoma will be televised regionally by ABC Sports and will be available nationally as part of ESPN's Game Plan. The game will kick off at noon Eastern time.

This will mark the first of three scheduled national television appearances for BGSU in 2004. The Falcons also will play on ESPN/ESPN2 at Northern Illinois on Sept. 24, and at Toledo on Nov. 23.

Last year, Oklahoma was 12-2 and played in the Bowl Championship Series title game, losing to LSU in the Sugar Bowl. The Falcons were 11-3 and won the Motor City Bowl. BGSU, which also captured the MAC West title last season, was ranked 23rd in the final Associated Press and ESPN/USA Today polls.

Since the 2001 season, the Falcons are 8-1 against BCS-affiliated opposition, including a 3-0 mark against teams from Oklahoma's conference, the Big XII.

Education Abroad offers program development workshop

The Education Abroad Office will sponsor a workshop to assist faculty in developing short-term education abroad programs. Topics to be discussed are course proposal; course approval process; course schedule/itinerary; program budget; overseas logistics; liability management (health and safety issues); student recruitment; financial aid; and pre-departure and on-site orientation and re-entry activities.

The workshop will take place from 3:30-5 p.m. Sept. 9 in 307 Bowen-Thompson Student Union. To attend, contact Sally Raymont by Thursday (Sept. 2 at sallyr@bgnet or 2-0309.

BGSU, MCO, UT announce collaborative parking agreement

Faculty and staff who are involved in collaborative research or academic initiatives with the University of Toledo or Medical College of Ohio should find it easier to park beginning this semester.
The Office of Inter-Institutional Collaboration has announced a parking agreement in which the three institutions will honor one another's valid parking permits in all valid parking spots. Those parking at the host institutions must follow the parking regulations for each campus. Parking maps and regulations are available at the following Web sites:

BGSU http://www.bgsu.edu/offices/safety/parking.html
MCO http://www.mco.edu/depts/police/parking.html
