Administrative staff honors 'B.G. Best'

Last Tuesday (March 29), on the first truly springlike day of the season, administrative staff joined President Sidney Ribeau in celebrating the B.G. Best—those people who, through their commitment to the University, their colleagues and students, help Bowling Green be its best.

All of the winners were introduced by one of their nominators, including Diana Carpenter, assistant director of advising services in the College of Arts and Sciences, who praised B.G. Best recipient Cindy Colvin. "It's such a joy when the sun is shining like it is today. [Colvin] is like that: It's such a joy to work with her."

Colvin, who began her career at BGSU nearly 20 years ago as a residence hall adviser, continues to put students first, Carpenter said. "She has a heart for students. She goes that extra mile." She combines vast knowledge of the University with strong "people" skills and equally outstanding technical skills, her nominators wrote. Among her many responsibilities as associate director of student services for the college, Colvin coordinates its summer orientation and registration program and scholarship endeavors as well as encoding the Arts and Sciences degree audit reports—all very detailed tasks that she performs with finesse. She is also a generous volunteer, helping with many University efforts such as Preview Day.

Award winner Lee Floro-Thompson's handiwork can be seen throughout the University, though her name never appears on it. A graphic artist with Instructional Media Services, Floro-Thompson designs innumerable fliers, posters and PowerPoint presentations for faculty, staff and students, including the president's opening-day and State of the University presentations and, currently, many undergraduate research presentations for the upcoming symposium.

"She exemplifies the kind of people who make sure the University functions on a daily basis and does it so well," nominator Steven Kendall, multimedia production manager, told the gathering. "Her commitment to customer service is unmatched," he added in his letter of nomination. "Lee responds with the highest quality work no matter how close the deadline or short the lead time."

Her ability to "save the day" for students is just part of her typical day, he said. "Lee's commitment to BGSU's core values is demonstrated every day. No matter how simple or complex, large or small, organized or disorganized the materials given her, Lee treats each request with the same degree of professionalism."

Honoree Tim Koder, director of major gifts in the Office of Development, was nominated by Brent Nicholson, legal studies and director of Entrepreneurship Academic Programs in the College of Business Administration. Fueled by his belief in and excitement about the potential of entrepreneurship education, Koder was responsible for securing a $3 million pledge from Bill Dallas and Scott Hamilton to found the program, Nicholson said. He was also integral to the development office's raising another $2 million for entrepreneurship.

"He's a ground-floor organizer and a doer, and he's done a fabulous job of raising money for the program. . . . But I've also been impressed by how much he does beyond raising money," Nicholson said. "He's a tireless advocate for the program. It's no exaggeration to say the entrepreneurship program at BGSU would not exist without Tim Koder. But he's so self-effacing that he says he's just doing my job."

Koder commented, "I would never consider something I truly enjoy and have so much fun at as work. This has been exciting and invigorating, and such an exciting program to be involved with."

Award winner Paul Lopez, production manager at WBGU-PBS, "has consistently demonstrated his commitment to the University's core mission of training, mentoring and empowering students," his co-workers wrote. As an example, said Ron Gargas, director of programming for the station, Lopez proposed and implemented a system of merit pay raises for students who perform well in their jobs so they might move beyond the minimum pay scale, and has developed methods of recognizing student achievement to enhance retention. A caring person, he also organizes field trips for students and staff so they may spend time together outside of work, including jaunts to the Toledo Zoo to see the Lights Before Christmas. "He even saves food coupons for students because he worries about their well-being," Gargas said.

Lopez has an equal commitment to his co-workers. A longtime member of Administrative Staff Council and former chair, in 1999-2000, he volunteers his time for University events and programs, such as Springboard.

Lopez thanked the committee for the award but refused personal credit, saying everyone in the room was equally committed to students and BGSU. "or else you wouldn't be here today."

Board hears health care update, says farewell to Leon Bibb

The board of trustees bade farewell to a respected member at its April 1 meeting when Leon Bibb completed his nine-year term. A resolution was passed honoring his service to the University both as an alumnus and a trustee.

In an emotional farewell, the Cleveland television anchorman said, "It's been a difficult day for me, knowing this is my last meeting on the board of trustees. My mind goes back to the early '60s, when I met [fellow trustee] John Moore on day one." He also met his future wife while both were students here. He related how the country was in a state of great change at that time, and BGSU faculty helped see students through it. His last day as trustee reminded him of graduation day in 1966, which, he said, was filled with some regret: "I hate to go."

After graduating, Bibb went off to serve in Vietnam, applying to BGSU graduate school from there, and received his acceptance while in the jungles. "I wanted to come back to this campus," he said.

He thanked President Ribeau for creating the values initiative, saying "that's really what we're all about—values. Bowling Green has added value to my life."

In other business, the board awarded tenure and promotion to a number of faculty. (See related story.)

A-n overview of the University's health care situation was provided by Dr. Christopher Dalton, senior vice president for finance and administration; Rebecca Ferguson, assistant vice president for human resources, and Gaylyn Finn, University treasurer.

The University has hired Findley Davies, a Toledo consulting firm, to evaluate the current program and provide some perspectives on possible changes to try to keep costs under control. The firm is also handling the bidding process for a new third-party administrator.

Dalton pointed out that, between employee and University contributions, $15 million is spent each year on funding health care benefits for faculty and staff. That represents 6-7 percent of the educational budget, and is larger than all academic budgets except the College of Arts and Sciences', he said.

When dollars are going into health care costs, they aren't going into salaries, Dalton added, saying an evaluation of those costs' impact on salaries is part of the effort.

Health care costs, which have grown exponentially, are expected to rise even further, and the University must look for ways to manage them while providing the best value possible,

Dalton said.

The key is that BGSU has to move in a direction to contain costs and gain some flexibility, Executive Vice President Linda Dobb added.

The University has taken many steps over the years to achieve that goal. For example, in 1982, BGSU's health care system became self-funded. In 1986, a separate drug card program was begun to supplement prescription drug benefits under the health care program. In 1991, Section 125 was added, allowing employees to set up pre-tax spending accounts for health care expenses. In 1994, Medical Mutual became BGSU's health care administrator. A "spousal rule" later went into effect regarding spouses of University employees hired after January 2002. The rule requires spouses who are employed full time and have medical insurance available through their employer to take that insurance as their primary coverage.

Since then, Bowling Green has joined a consortium for prescription drugs and has lowered costs by removing dental insurance from the health care plan, and choosing Delta Dental as the administrator for the fully insured dental plan. It has also joined a health care consortium with Kent State University, the University of Akron, and county governments and municipalities including Lima and Bowling Green to help curb costs.

Now, Findley Davies is taking a fresh look at every aspect of medical insurance at BGSU, said Ferguson. The evaluation process includes asking such questions as whether the University should continue to be self-funded, whether it has the right plan mix and whether it should explore consumer-driven accounts as a way to encourage employees to use their benefits thoughtfully.

Also under discussion are providing health benefits to part-time employees and changing from the traditional 80/20 split in employer/employee contributions to a tiered system based on hourly wage. That national trend is already being implemented, with variations, by Ohio, Kent State, Ohio State and Miami universities and the University of Toledo, Finn said.

In addition, the Health, Wellness and Insurance Committee has recommended that the spousal rule be extended to all employees as of January 2006.

Ferguson said a recent survey showed that employees are concerned about their out-of-pocket health care costs, and more than 45 percent said they are ready to participate in a wellness program to help reduce costs. However, the survey also showed that many do not feel that individual health habits influence the cost of health care, indicating that some education is needed on that point.

Also at the meeting, the trustees:

- Approved an honorary degree for Dr. Cynthia Stong, founder of the University's marine biology laboratory and the person most responsible for the development of the program. Stong taught at BGSU from 1963-93.
- Set the next meeting for June 24.

Faculty achievement rewarded with tenure and promotion

The board of trustees at its April 1 meeting approved promotion and tenure for a number of University faculty. In addition, two new faculty members were hired with tenure.

The board approved Dr. J. Oliver Boyd-Barrett as a full professor and the new director of the School of Communication Studies. An internationally known scholar in the area of mass communications, Boyd-Barrett has most recently taught in the department of Communication at California State Polytechnic University-Pomona.

Also approved was Dr. Madeline Duntley, who will join the sociology department as an associate professor with a joint appointment to American culture studies. Duntley is

Public Health Foundation director to give Baker Lecture

Dr. Vaughn Mamin Upshaw, a member of the Public Health Foundation Board of Directors, will discuss "Working with Local Elected Officials to Improve Public Health" Friday (April 8) at the University.

Also a faculty member at the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill, Upshaw will deliver the sixth annual Ned E. Baker Lecture in Public Health at 1 p.m. in 101 Olscamp Hall. Her lecture will be followed by a reception.

Upshaw is a lecturer in public administration and government at UNC, where she teaches courses in health administration, public health leadership and health care governance. She works with elected officials and public managers in North Carolina as well, to improve their leadership and governance effectiveness.

Since 1997, Upshaw has also been a clinical assistant professor in the Department of Health Policy and Administration at UNC, where she earned master's and doctoral degrees in public health in 1984 and 1999, respectively. She also holds a doctoral degree in education from North Carolina State University.

A former county health board member in North Carolina, Upshaw is a founding member and past president of the Bowling Green-based National Association of Local Boards of Health. NALBOH is sponsoring her address along with the BGSU College of Health and Human Services, Cove Charitable Trust of Boston, the Northwest Ohio Consortium for Public Health, the Western Reserve Geriatric Education Center and the Wood County Hospital Foundation.

NALBOH was the vision of Ned Baker, a BGSU graduate who served on the Wood County Board of Health for 12 years, including two terms as president. The lecture named in his honor is simulcast to local health boards nationwide via the Internet.

The event is part of the monthlong celebration of Building Dreams: The Centennial Campaign for Bowling Green State University.

Criminal Justice Forum to mark opening of research laboratory

The University's new Crime & Justice Research Laboratory will officially open April 11 in conjunction with the third annual Criminal Justice Forum on campus.

The forum, set for 7 p.m. in 101 Olscamp Hall, will feature Drs. Paul and Patricia Brantingham, both professors of criminology at Simon Fraser University in Burnaby, British Columbia, Canada. Their topic will be "Building Collaborative Research Partnerships: University and Government."

The Brantinghams are internationally recognized experts on the geographic distribution of crime and environmental criminology. They work extensively with various government agencies to analyze crime patterns, map crime and criminal behavior, and identify useful interventions for addressing crime in communities.

They also run Simon Fraser's International Center for Urban Research Studies, which has a formal affiliation with the new BGSU laboratory to work collaboratively, when possible, on research and evaluation.

The Crime & Justice Research Laboratory's role includes working "on behalf of, and in concert with, any criminal justice agencies on research and evaluation topics that are important for understanding the impact of criminal justice policies, and on how to address crime and justice in society," according to Dr. Steven Lab, director of BGSU's Criminal Justice Program.

Located in the former Link building at 315 Thurstin Ave., the laboratory includes space for dedicated computers and software needed to conduct program evaluation and analysis of data from criminal justice agencies.

It will also offer training to current students, as well as criminal justice agency personnel, on how to undertake meaningful crime analysis. "One example of this is training in the area of creating and using crime mapping," Lab explains. "This is a growing area in the criminal justice arena. But even with this growth—mainly in large cities—many medium and smaller agencies are still seeking assistance to use these technologies to their fullest extent in crime prevention and control."

The laboratory's equipment was purchased with funds committed by the Graduate College, College of Health and Human Services, Information Technology Services and Criminal Justice Program.

This event is part of the monthlong activities for Building Dreams: The Centennial Campaign for Bowling Green State University.

Memorial service for Fayette Paulsen set for April 6

In February, BGSU lost an honored colleague with the death of retired administrator Fayette Paulsen.

Paulsen was part of the BGSU community for 27 years, serving as the associate dean of students, acting dean of students, dean of women and, later, as the assistant vice president for student affairs residential services.

Nationally known for her work in residence life, she retired from the University in 1990 but remained active in the Bowling Green community.

The community is invited to join in a Celebration of Life in her honor on Wednesday (April 6) at 1:30 p.m. in Prout Chapel. A reception will follow in 314 Bowen-Thompson Student Union.

Tributes and memorials in Paulsen's honor can be made to the BGSU Foundation. Condolences can be sent to her family in care of: Eleanor and Alfred Paulsen, 3144 Stonewood Lane, Hudsonville, Mich. 49426.

Get your "Reality √ 2005" at Health Fair

"Reality √ 2005" is the reality TV theme for this year's Health Fair, scheduled from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Wednesday (April 6) in the Lenhart Grand Ballroom of the Bowen-Thompson Student Union.

The fair will give participants the chance to take part in various health screenings, including blood pressure testing and a lifestyle analysis. Interactive displays will feature quiz boards, games, demonstrations and hands-on activities.

"Reality √ 2005" is sponsored by the BGSU Student Health Service and the Wellness Connection. Awards, product samples and prizes are being provided by participating northwest Ohio agencies and businesses.

Expert on disability issues to discuss FDR's lessons

"My Disability Does Not Define Me: Lessons from FDR about Disability and Society" will be the topic of an April 7 campus presentation by Richard Harris.

Harris, a nationally known expert on disability issues and director of Disabled Student Development at Ball State University, will speak at 7 p.m. Thursday in 221 Olscamp Hall.

Harris's multimedia presentation combines his longtime interest in Franklin Delano Roosevelt and his extensive knowledge of disability issues to explore the current societal treatment of individuals with disabilities against the backdrop of FDR's political life.†

Roosevelt famously hid his inability to walk from all but his closest advisers. His deception is an ironic story of how a nation and its president dealt with his severe disability. Using rare photographs of FDR and a rarely seen four-second video of him "walking," Harris describes the 32nd president's life and political career both before and after the onset of his disability.

Harris is in his 32th year of directing Ball State's efforts to provide access and opportunity for students with disabilities. He was among the founders of the Association on Higher Education and Disability and has twice served as its president. He has made hundreds of presentations on both the history and place of disability in American society.

Slave ships to be explored in the Arts & Sciences Forum

Dr. Marcus Rediker, professor of history at the University of Pennsylvania, will be presenting "The Slave Ship: A Human History of an Inhuman Vessel," as the next College of Arts & Sciences Forum on April 12.

African, European, and American societies are haunted by the legacies of race, class and slavery. Rediker will explore the largely unexamined history of the vessel that made possible history's greatest forced migration and an entire phase of globalization.

The lecture will take place from 12:30-1:15 p.m. in 202B Bowen-Thompson Student Union. A soup, salad and baked potato buffet will be served at noon for $7.95 plus tax. Lunch is payable by cash, check or BGSU ID card, which must be presented at the time of payment. Those wishing to attend the free lecture only may arrive at 12:30 p.m.

Reservations are required by Thursday (April 7), and can be made by calling 2-2340 or emailing mjhitt@bgnet.bgsu.edu. With your reservation, include your BGSU identification number.

Neoliberalism is next topic in Provost's Lecture Series

Dr. Aihwa Ong, an anthropology faculty member at University of California-Berkeley, will discuss "Neoliberalism, or the Shifting Ground of Politics and Ethics" as the next speaker in the Provost's Lecture Series. Her presentation will be held at 6:30 p.m. Monday (April 11) in 228 Bowen-Thompson Student Union.

Ong will look at the concept of neoliberalism from an anthropologist's perspective rather than the traditional economic perspective, which sees it as a doctrine that seeks to limit the scope of government. She will present an alternative view of neoliberalism as a mobile technology of government that articulates with constellations of political and ethical elements.

Ong is a prolific scholar whose books include Global Assemblages: Technologies, Politics, and Ethics as Anthropological Problems, Buddha Is Hiding: Refugees, Citizenship, and the New America, and the award-winning Flexible Citizenship: The Cultural Logics of Transnationality. Her newest book, Re-engineering Citizenship: The Shifting Ground of Politics and Ethics, is forthcoming from Duke University Press.

Her talk is hosted by the Institute for the Study of Culture and Society.
