Classified staff celebrates end of year with awards, recognitions

Classified Staff Council honored the dedication and service of BGSU employees at its annual awards ceremony April 20. Winning the Outstanding Employee Award was Sue Frost, administrative secretary for the Center for Archival Collections. The Team Award went to the parking and traffic staff. Also at the ceremony, classified employee and dependent scholarships were presented.

President Sidney Ribeau described the past year as at once "high-energy, demanding, successful, invigorating and draining." Thanking classified staff for its contributions, he said that, "for the most part, the goals and targets we've set for this year have been accomplished.

"It's been a very successful year," he went on, "but not without hard work and sacrifice. I was thinking at the recent dinner hosted by human resources for staff years of service that so many people have given the fundamental years of their lives to Bowling Green State University. It's important to hold these ceremonies to recognize them."

The president noted that college enrollment has become very competitive, and part of the reason BGSU's numbers are up is the efforts of classified staff. "People can slam the door in your face literally but also figuratively," he said. "They do it by their attitudes and the way they treat you, by the distances they maintain between faculty and students, faculty and staff and staff and students.

"Classified staff here helps keep the doors open."

Ribeau added that in the coming year he hopes to continue to add to professional development funds for classified staff in spite of budget constrictions, and to work with the newly named ombudspeople to share information and resolve difficulties.

CSC surprised Executive Vice President Linda Dobb with a plaque and the announcement of a tree to be planted in front of Jerome Library in appreciation of her many contributions to and support of classified staff. The sugar maple will be planted at 2 p.m. Friday (April 28), which is also Arbor Day.

Outstanding Employee Award

Sue Frost has that rare combination of personal qualities that makes her the ideal candidate for the Outstanding Employee Award, according to her nominators.

She is at once warm and friendly, a trusted confidant, optimistic and outgoing yet extraordinarily detail-oriented and willing to tackle the most tedious jobs. A problem solver and mediator, she is nonetheless unafraid to speak out for what she feels is right and fair.

In her job at the Center for Archival Collections (CAC), Frost "keeps the center running smoothly," says Ann Bowers, retired University archivist and former interim director of the center. "She has saved the center and BGSU more money than I can tally by her careful oversight of the budget, her professional expectation of vendors and their growing respect for her, her abilities to research and find the best products at the best prices and her knack for developing more efficient practices for the administration of the center's various programs."

Ann Jenks, the current University archivist and interim CAC director, agrees, noting that when Frost sees something that could be or needs to be done, she takes care of it without hesitation. She has assumed additional responsibilities with the recent reduction in staff, and is the person whom students rely upon to show them the way.

Jenks describes Frost as "the rare kind of person who really makes a difference in the atmosphere of an office, whose absence is most noticeable and who can pull together a group of people most unlikely to get along and have them laughing together in no time."

She brings the same spirit of dedication and enthusiasm to her involvement with Classified Staff Council. This year, in addition to being on the University Libraries' classified staff council, she is on the campuswide council and is chair of the elections, professional development, Spirit of BG, Team Award and Web site committees, and a member of the scholarship committee.

"This year, CSC was faced with a number of controversial issues and confronted each one of them in an attempt to get questions answered and find resolution. Sue Frost was involved in every one of these issues, some of which involved constituent meetings that took place from 9 p.m. to midnight," Jenks said.

"Sue can be relied upon to take on the 'hard stuff' that most of us don't want to do," wrote Linda Dobb, executive vice president. "Most recently she represented the classified staff on a committee that compiled the Handbook of Commonly Shared Employment Policies. Sue's institutional memory and willingness to pitch in were invaluable as we moved to make uniform policies that were contained in three different places and which were difficult for supervisors and employees to find."

She has diligently undertaken such tasks, for which "current employees and future generations of staff will be grateful to her," Dobb noted.

Because of her extensive involvement, fair-mindedness and caring attitude, she is known and respected across campus, her nominators said, and her opinion is sought by classified and administrative staff, managers and vice presidents.

Team Award

Parking is an issue that can "make or break" a person's experience with any institution, and BGSU is fortunate to have a parking and traffic staff who work hard to ensure that employees, students and visitors alike are accommodated safely and efficiently.

It is their history of dealing with this enormous task in a professional and friendly manner that has earned the staff this year's Team Award.

In addition to their regular duties, which are considerable, they frequently help campus offices with special events. According to Admissions Director Gary Swegan, "Over the years, the Office of Admissions has increasingly relied on this outstanding group to support major recruitment programming on the BGSU campus. Preview days and Presidents' Day traffic control, parking lot monitoring, and improved and professional signage in front of McFall Center have all enhanced the professionalism and organization of the Office of Admissions through the eyes of our visitors to campus."

Deborah Fleitz, director of public events for the College of Musical Arts, wrote in her nomination letter, "It is not an understatement to say that accommodating the large number of vehicles that our concert patrons arrive in is challenging, even more so when other events are going on simultaneously, such as basketball, hockey, Dance Marathon and swim meets. The parking and traffic office, as well as the field people, have always gone the extra mile to help ensure that our patrons and donors can successfully park near our building. In particular, our events attract a fair number of elderly and physically challenged people, and accessible parking is very much needed.

"These stalwart staffers are also patient with us in terms of last-minute requests for guest parking permits," she added, "and always issue these graciously."

Their graciousness is especially appreciated in light of their everyday work. Each year, the staff issues 12,000 student, faculty and staff parking permits; issues about 16,000 visitor permits; greets an average of 11,000 visitors who drive or walk into the Visitor information Center; patrols more than 62 parking areas comprising 10,000 spaces; issues roughly 40,000 parking violations; assists with traffic control; reserves parking areas as requested, and repairs and maintains parking meters and parking lot signage.

In the past few years, parking and traffic has experienced ongoing change across campus and in the office, said Director Stacie Enriquez, but "despite all the changes, each member continues to work hard, implement new processes and streamline existing processes to increase service to the University community."

They are a talented group with a great attitude who will do whatever it takes to get the job done. "You'll never hear them say 'That's not my job,'" she said.

Scholarships awarded

CSC scholarships were presented to six employees and eight dependents of employees.

Employees pursuing degrees at BGSU who were awarded scholarships were:

- Margaret (Peg) Bucksy, Career Center, a senior majoring in liberal studies;
- Kim Davis, Jerome Library, a sophomore majoring in business administration/pre-accounting;
- Kerry Foster, executive vice president's office, a graduate student in technology;
- Susan Huffine, Career Center, a graduate student in the technology;
- Carol Schermbeck-Horine, military science and leadership, a sophomore in art, and
- Karen Williams, management department, a freshman majoring in business administration.

Dependents awarded scholarships included:

- Justin Bostelman, a junior majoring in pre-mechanical design technology and the son of Marsha Bostelman, biological sciences;
- Tyler Drewes, a freshman business major and the son of Melody Drewes, College of Technology;
- Mitchell Frost, a freshman business major and the son of Sue Frost, Jerome Library;
- Laura Lindsley, a senior communication disorders major and the daughter of Bonnie Lindsley, Firelands College Bookstore;
- Charles Meyer, a junior majoring in advanced technological education and the son of Rochelle Meyer, residence life;
- Christopher Plotts, a senior majoring in mathematics and the son of Christine Plotts, Jerome Library;
- Alan Potter II, a senior majoring in technology education and the son of Pamela Potter, Continuing and Extended Education, and
- Adam Snyder, a senior majoring in business administration with a dual specialization in production and operations management and purchasing and supply chain management and the son of Linda Snyder, Student Financial Aid.

Regents meet at BGSU, approve two degree programs

The Ohio Board of Regents got a wide-ranging look at BGSU and its many areas of achievement when the board met on campus April 19 and 20. Among the actions it took on schools statewide was approval of two new degree programs for Bowling Green.

The regents also approved a $500,000 joint use agreement between BGSU and the Wood County Committee on Aging (WCCOA) for the Wood County Senior Kitchen Project. The agreement will allow BGSU gerontology, nutrition, and human movement, sport and leisure studies students and faculty increased access to WCCOA's activities and operations for service-learning opportunities.

President Sidney Ribeau and Ohio Eminent Scholar Milt Hakel, psychology, gave a presentation about BGSU's student learning measures, which Hakel said could be "scaled up and adopted by other colleges and universities."

Bowling Green has focused on defining learning outcomes in both general education and in majors, and on assessing students' attainment of those outcomes in tangible ways, the two told the regents. "We have tried to become a more learning-centered institution," Hakei said. "Learning goes beyond knowing. We want students to be able to do and use what they know."

Helping students assess their own learning is key, Hakei said, citing the electronic portfolio as an example of a tool increasingly used to keep track of and document progress. Surveys done by the University have shown that students who use e-portfolio have higher retention rates and higher grade point averages than those who do not.

Having a student success plan and using innovative assessment techniques is a way for universities to get ahead of the national mandate that is coming in regard to accountability, Ribeau told the regents.

"At the policy level, this is a rare opportunity for Ohio to lead the nation," he said. "An A is an A, but with grade inflation going on across the nation, what does that mean? Using e-portfolio, we can show what that means."

Regent Donna Alvarado commented, "This just blows me away. It's great stuff. I'm thinking of this as an employer. To be able to see a link where people are talking about what's meaningful to them is just wonderful."

Outgoing Chancellor Roderick Chu, who was instrumental in creating the University Success Challenge Grants that helped BGSU pursue the new student success initiatives, said, "It's tremendously exciting after all these years to see this happening."

Degree programs approved

The two new degree programs approved for BGSU are a master's degree in cross-cultural and international education and, for BGSU Firelands, an associate degree in applied science in early childhood education.

The master's degree program is designed to build a "global educator" and prepare teachers to work effectively with a diverse student population, here or abroad. It is in keeping with the "understanding cultures and nations" component of BGSU's Academic Plan and addresses the growing number of students in the United States from other cultures and the effects of globalization on American society.

Although open to all, the program is expected primarily to attract schoolteachers seeking graduate degrees. Returning Peace Corps volunteers, nongovernmental organization employees and others who have worked overseas are also likely candidates, say its designers.

Flexible and interdisciplinary, the new program will be housed in the College of Education and Human Development's educational foundations and inquiry (EDFI) division, with significant crossover to the other colleges, especially arts and sciences. Students will be required to take nine credits in other colleges relative to a particular theme, or cognate, in line with the student's interests. Students will focus their papers and projects in those courses on educational issues.

A required internship will enable students to apply their academic knowledge to the practice of education in a cross-cultural or international placement, such as an American Indian reservation, foreign school or nongovernmental organization. Students must also complete a foreign language component.

The 12 EDFI faculty have strong experience academically and professionally in international research and teaching, making the division well positioned to explore education from cross-culturally grounded philosophical and teaching perspectives.

The program had already received the approval of the Faculty Senate, Graduate College and BGSU Board of Trustees.

The associate degree in early childhood education will allow students to apply for paraprofessional licensure through the Ohio Department of Education. The students will also be able to obtain the coursework required by the Ohio Department of Job and Family Services to be a day-care director and/or lead teacher.

Cautionary words

The April 20 meeting was Chu's last as chancellor of the regents. He shared some parting observations, asserting that increasing Ohio's educational attainment is the only path to achieving the regents' goal of improving the quality of life for all Ohioans.

Ohio needs to develop "whole people," he said, those not just with skills but also with the attitudes, beliefs and behaviors necessary to succeed.

"There is so much to be done," Chu said, "but we have a population that lives largely in denial of the need to change. The ongoing quest for immediate gratification keeps us from making the commitment of resources" needed to move the state forward, "just when we need it most."

Latino Issues Conference to examine overlap of U.S., Latino cultures

The overlap of U.S. society and national and international Latino food and cultures will be in the spotlight Thursday (April 27) when BGSU hosts the 12th annual Latino Issues Conference. This year's theme is "Meeting at the Intersection of Market, Politics and Other Cultural Practices."

Open to everyone, the free conference will be held from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the Lenhart Grand Ballroom of the Bowen-Thompson Student Union. Toledo Councilwoman Taylor Balderas, a BGSU alumna, will give opening remarks at 9 a.m. The program will feature BGSU students and faculty, plus guest speakers from around the nation.

Dr. Arlene Dávila, an associate professor of anthropology and American studies at New York University, will deliver the keynote address, "Latinos, Inc.: Marketing and the Making of a People," at 12:30 p.m.

A cultural anthropologist interested in popular culture, media, cities and urban culture, Dávila has studied Puerto Ricans in the East and Latinos nationwide. She is now examining the mainstreaming of U.S. Latinos.

The morning's events will include two sessions. The first, "Between Grassroots Politics, Film and Dominican Food," from 9:10-10:20 a.m., will include Dr. Marc Becker of Truman State University in Missouri speaking on the "Indigenous Movement in Ecuador" and Gerardo Cummings, romance languages, on "The Importation of Third World Talent to Hollywood: A Look at the Entertainment Industry from a Latin American Perspective."

"Between Traveling, Migration and Cuban Food," from 10:30-11:45 a.m., will feature Dr. José Buscaglia, from the State University of New York at Buffalo, speaking on "Catch Me if You Can: The Story of the First Puerto Rican to Lay Claim to the World," and Dr. Azfar Hussain, ethnic studies, on "The Political Economy of Migration: The Case of Puerto Ricans and Cubans in the United States." BGSU student Rachel Kizer will give "A Portrait of Cuban Food."

Afternoon session topics will be "Between Black Skins, Science and Argentinean Food," from 1:45-2:50 p.m., featuring Dr. Jesse Hingson of Georgia State College and University on "Making the Invisible Visible: Studies on Africans in Mexico and Argentina," and Diorka Hernández of the Xerox Corp. speaking on "The Society of Hispanic Professional Engineers: Creating Communities among Latinos in the Technical Field." BGSU student Clarissa Steele will present "A Portrait of Argentinean Food."

The day's final session, "Between Gender, Race and Hope," will be held from 3-4:15 p.m. Poet Tatiana de la Tierra, from SUNY-Buffalo, will present "Paint Me a Dangerous Mujer," and Dr. Luis González of Indiana University will speak on "Abolition in Brazilian Social Memory." Carlos Adams, ethnic studies, will discuss "Machismo and Geographies of Hope."

Six speakers will address May graduates at BGSU

A professor, two alumni and three members of the spring 2006 graduating class will be speakers at commencement exercises May 5 and 6. That weekend, four separate commencement programs will be held, with nearly 2,300 students receiving degrees. Ceremonies will be held in Anderson Arena. Tickets are required for admission.

Dr. Robert Vincent, geology, will address degree candidates in the Graduate College during commencement ceremonies at 7 p.m. May 5.

Winner of the University's 1994 Olscamp Research Award for outstanding scholarly accomplishments during the previous three years, Vincent is known for inventing spectral ratio imaging. A principal investigator on both LANDSAT I and Skylab earth resources experiments, he has been a consultant to the world's major petroleum and mining companies as well as several aerospace companies. The founder of two private companies, one of which was sold to Kodak, he also is former director of OhioView, a remote-sensing consortium of 11 public research universities in Ohio.

Kathy Cleveland Bull

Kathy Cleveland Bull of Hilliard, who received degrees from BGSU in 1983 and 1985, will speak at the graduation ceremonies for students in the College of Arts and Sciences at 9:30 a.m. May 6.

Founder of N-Compass Consulting, Bull is a highly regarded professional speaker, trainer and consultant who helps clients navigate change. She recently appeared with Dr. Phil McGraw and Deepak Chopra at "The Power Within" live events in cities across North America. Bull conducts personal and professional development seminars for Fortune 500 companies, and is one of three professional speakers recommended by Dr. Spencer Johnson to provide training built upon his book, Who Moved My Cheese? A Phi Beta Kappa psychology graduate of Bowling Green, she has two master's degrees, one in college student personnel and another in counseling. In 1989 she received the Recent Graduate Award from the BGSU Alumni Association.

Three graduating students will be the commencement speakers at the 1 p.m. ceremonies May 6 for the colleges of Business Administration, Health and Human Services, and Technology. They are Amanda Szabo of Swanton, Julie Beam of Tipp City and Kent Truckor of Swanton, respectively.

Amanda Szabo

Szabo is a bachelor of science in business administration degree candidate with specializations in management information systems, purchasing and supply chain management, and production and operations management. Upon graduation, she will join General Electric Aviation's Operations Management Leadership Program.

Her many honors include the GlaxoSmithKline Outstanding Senior Award for Excellence in Procurement, the General Electric Student Intern/Co-op Contribution Award, Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges, and first place in the 2005 Donald W. Fogarty International Student Paper Competition. An officer of the Institute for Supply Management and the Association for Operations Management on campus, she also participated in the BGSU Dance Marathon and was a Junior Achievement classroom instructor. In addition, she is a member of Phi Eta Sigma and Alpha Lambda Delta honor societies.

Julie Beam

Beam, a speech pathology major, will receive a bachelor of science in communication disorders degree.

Winner of the Albert E. Dyckes Scholarship for her senior year, she has been a peer facilitator for the BGeXperience program and a member of the College Ambassadors for the College of Health and Human Services. An active member in the National Student Speech-Language and Hearing Association, she was included in the 2006 edition of Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges. She plans to attend graduate school at Miami (Ohio) University.

Kent Truckor

Truckor, a candidate for a bachelor of science in technology degree, majored in construction management technology and has a minor in entrepreneurship.

The recipient of seven scholarships from building and construction companies, Truckor had internships with Rudolph/Libbe and Gleckler Brothers, and placed third in design/build in the Associated Schools of Construction Competition. President of the Student Construction Management Association, he chaired its 2005-06 Gulf Coast Katrina Rebuild Initiative and was a member of the championship-winning 2005-06 Forensics, Speech and Debate Team. He also was an Undergraduate Student Government senator and took part in Dance Marathon, Heart Walk and Habitat for Humanity.

Wiley Blevins

Wiley Blevins, a 1987 BGSU graduate, will deliver the commencement address during ceremonies at 4:30 p.m. May 6, when students in the colleges of Musical Arts and Education and Human Development will be conferred degrees.

Blevins is vice president and editorial director of MacMillan/McGraw Hill's education group. He previously held a number of positions with Scholastic Inc., where he participated in management and edited teachers' guides and ancillary materials for an elementary reading program. Blevins taught at the elementary school level for a number of years and is the author of some 20 children's books. His works also include more than a dozen books for teachers on phonics and reading success, instructional programs for Scholastic, and professional articles and studies. He holds a bachelor's degree in elementary education from BGSU and a master's degree from the Graduate School of Education at Harvard University.

IN BRIEF

Two programs to spotlight suicide

Suicide prevention will be the topic of two programs this week sponsored by the psychology department and Counseling Center, along with the Wood County Alcohol, Drug Addiction and Mental Health Services board and the Wood County Historical Society.

"Let's Talk Honestly about Suicide," a panel discussion, will be held at 3 p.m. Friday (April 28) in the Bowen-Thompson Student Union Theater. Myths surrounding suicide, how to recognize risk factors, suicide on college campuses and where to go for help are among the topics to be covered. The panelists will be Dr. Ellen Anderson, a counselor with Person to Person Resources in Perrysburg; Dr. Craig Vickio, director of the BGSU Counseling Center; Dr. Catherine Kocarek, assistant director of the center; Dr. William O. Donnelly, clinical director of the Children's Resource Center in Bowling Green, and Dr. Eric Dubow, psychology

"Suicide: The Final Taboo" will be Anderson's topic in a 2 p.m. talk Saturday (April 29) at the Wood County Historical Center and Museum, 13660 County Home Road in Bowling Green. Beginning with the Greeks and Romans, Anderson will explain cultural attitudes toward suicide and how they have changed over time. She will describe how mental health professionals and those affected by depression and suicide are working to change current perceptions.
