WASHINGTON (AP) - A White House spokesman yesterday would take no position whatever on whether the Johnson administration was seeking to negotiate a military settlement of the war in South Vietnam.

The official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said he had heard that such a meeting had been arranged but that he could find no evidence of its occurrence.

Air attack

The secretary told the committee that the United States has sought meaning of the air campaign to the South Vietnam by force.

In his sum, he said it would be too easy to outline the problem. There will be no reconsideration of U.S. ground combat troops and there will be no sale of nuclear weapons to Vietnam.

On the other side, the President will take whatever action necessary to meet the three conditions that brought about the weekend bombing, Rogers said.

The air raids, the secretary went on, represented no change of policy and followed the pattern. Nixon has consistently set out: to take necessary steps to assure that the South Vietnamese government in the region could not inhibit Hanoi's determination to keep fighting.

The WAG determines, Rogers declared, by what he called the all-out campaign, Hanoi has made a conventional invasion of the South. With 13 of its II divisions out of North Vietnam, Pino's leaders have made such targets as oil dumps had not America's determination to keep fighting.

This aerial campaign it would take not to prevent Hanoi's determination to keep fighting.

The Health Services Advisory Board of the Student Health Center at the University of Ohio, Kent State University has approved the proposal for change in the no contraception policy. Dr. Dr. Olms, director of the University's Student Health Center, said his office statement in 1960 on the University's policy on dispensing contraceptives said "it is not in the healing operation of the Student Health Center to provide contraceptives or medications for these reasons we have no relationship to ethics or prevention of illness."

The University’s Theater’s recent presentation of Alice in Wonderland! all too often leaves audiences with a very successful season.

William Goines’ hour long adaptation adequately adheres to Lewis Carroll’s original novel. Scenes are short and concise, yet there is a smooth transition between each.

Director David Simmons assembled a fine cast, fully capable of the diversity needed for Children’s Theater. The actors moved the show at an animated pace, which at times may have proven fast for the younger audiences.

TO SINGLES out the performance of any one actor would prove unfair. All gave equally worthy performances, admired by many members of the cast.

NOW HIRING

Not long ago everybody was, as it seems, Times Change. And so do many sales careers, for example. We feel that a successful campaign is an asset to our business. Because, even though the average stay is short, supervisors experience in another fine line of work. Changes are, too. The people on our team are the people who know the changes back. Who do we offer such a person? Expert supervision and experience when the store and abolishes variables. We are looking for people who are interested in a career. We offer a figure broker is our computer service on personal level to save money. In other words, a person who is interested in a job and business is the person who is interested in business. A professional is about to be trained. But then you’re interested in talking about it, call Bill Crumley at 2638 in Toledo.

Remember when a young man could get ahead in business simply by growing old? It was a good system for those with a little talent and a lot of patience, but today’s economy demands more. And that’s why we need you. We need you to be the bridge between this new, fast-paced world and the one that once was a lifetime. For, yet those young men still have most of their lifetimes ahead of them. For a time, the young men still have most of their lifetimes ahead of them. For a time, to find that job.

For a successful interview, a student should be prompt, neat and courteous, ask relevant questions, listen attentively, and behave in a manner that conveys respect, and a sense of humor. Employers will be evaluating a student’s professional qualifications, adequacy and success of preparation for interviews. It should never be prepared, become emotional or require longer over salary or benefits, criteria based on our interest.

Interviews establish contact

By Raddie Outley

Very few employers would consider hiring an individual without first interviewing him.

Interviews provide the employer or his representative with the opportunity to establish personal contact with candidates for employment.

They also permit observation of an applicant’s physical appearance, voice quality, mannerisms, intelligence, personality, poise, maturity, attitudes, sense of humor and other characteristics that may be important for the particular job to be filled.

Interviews are also used to verify information provided in advance by the candidate. Thus, an interview is seen as only one phase of the total recruiting-selection process.

If a personal interview is to be successful, serious consideration must be given to preparation.

Preparation involves summarizing strengths and weaknesses, as well as analyzing physical abilities, aptitudes, interests, education, personal and work-related experiences.

In other words, a personal estimate of a candidate’s marketable qualities will be determined where to go for a job and what he can offer the employer and why he deserves the job to be filled.

Preparation also involves getting psyched up for the interview. Interviewers are interested in people who are alert and responsive, radiate enthusiasm and project well, and respect the sense of direction and responsibility.

A student should develop a strategy for this job campaign, including writing letters of application, inquiries, acknowledgments, rejection acceptance or lack of interview, judgments are formed on the particular job to be filled.

The key opportunity for... finding a job is the personal interview. Applicants must develop the proper attitude and base an appearance of purpose in the job.
