Community control of University police is long overdue, according to Richard Reed, member of the BSU (and, after nearly 30 years of investigating the operation, they say they have a solution.

Yesterday, BSU members unveiled this solution, which will be discussed by the Board of Trustee today.

The proposal would establish a board of "representatives to maintain and control the affairs of the police department," said Kenneth J. Chambers, member of the BSU (and has been since 1979 academic calendar).

donate blood today

Instead of waiting in the sun, why not lie on a table in the Grand Ballroom of the Student Center in room 218 Rodgers?

It's not bad. It takes two or three hours and is not terribly painful. In fact, it's usually rather nice. They feed you after you donate blood and there's even milk and cookies.

And if you have an aversion to donating blood, you can be a student volunteer.

It means you care about people—about people who need blood now.

That means an Ohio student could go to Penn State, Indiana University or the University of Michigan for nearly the same tuition as Bowling Green, or any other state university. Because a greater variety of economically-available universities could only be offered to a college student if the student were told which suitable program, the News opposes passage of House Bill 94.

Though research shows capital punishment has no deterrent effect on homicide, most people who favor capital punishment cite its deterrent effect as their main reason, Charles W. Thomas, associate professor of sociology said yesterday.

Thomas spoke at a luncheon concerning the relevance of a public issue or capital punishment.

According to Thomas, the Supreme Court is "very near screening" for the reasons why 7 per cent of Americans favor the death sentence.

According to Thomas, most people who favor the death sentence think capital punishment is an effective deterrent and is deserved.

"IF IN PER CENT of Americans feel the death sentence is a deterrent, Thomas said, then the public is misinformed.

"Capital punishment is another supported in an empirical research," Thomas said. "People support capital punishment because they have anacronistic expectations of what capital punishment can do."

"If we walk in the house and you see Mom hitting it with someone other than Daddy, a person is not likely to spend a long time thinking of the consequences," Thomas said.

"What the public really wants is not to kill people, but to have the death sentence on the books so people can be apprehended," Thomas said.

A congressional subcommittee investigating water pollution along the Ohio River was told yesterday that a chemical tanker in continuous to discharge into the river, in violation of federal standards.

Officials of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) told a hearing in Washington that the oil spill of the chemical to continue to discharge from a plant of the FMC Corporation at South Charleston, W. Va. and into a tributary of the Ohio.

An EPA official said the agency sent a letter to the plant on Monday, saying it must stop the illegal discharge of the chemical. The company was warned that the EPA would seek court action if it was not stopped.

RAA to compare University parking services

Residence Life Association (RLA) is collecting information about parking services at other universities to compare services at the University.

RLA recently held letters to a university, including Miami University, Ohio State University, Kent State University, Case Western Reserve University, and Ball State University, requesting information about their parking services.

Gregory J. Bertke, RLA chairman, said a varied selection of parking options was contacted to see if any differences exist among parking services.

"We write to college with different numbers of on-campus students to see how they handle their problems," he said.

Bertke said he set an April 29 deadline for the universities

After comparisons are made, RLA will set up an appointment with Parking Services Director Melvin R. Jones to discuss any changes needed to accommodate the needs of students.

Columbus tries again

By Bill Estey

One thousand of these fans were from Columbus. They came to Fairgrounds Coliseum, midway and out of two of the better played games, including a 2-1 win at Tuesday night’s 5-3 (3-4) jammer win.

One season, though, the Columbus Clippers? Can they survive in a town where fans would rather hear High Street and the ball town watch minor league basketball?

All preliminary indications are good. Early this month, the Clippers had allowed 31.78 scoring points of 32.83 average. General manager George Jr., former International League president and son of the ex-major league, claims the club has had the most successful promotion in minor league history. He says the Clippers have already made $90,000 enough to operate the team for the entire season.

"JET STADIUM, a jampacked two years ago, won by the city and refurbished to include 15,161 theater-type seats, enough to operate the team for the entire season."

The city lost the Jets, the Class AAA International League farm club of the Pittsburgh Pirates, once the strongest farm club in the minors, in 1970. Jet Stadium was badly in need of repair, and Rochester.

COLUMBUS IS the world’s largest university sports town with a metropolitan population of nearly a million. The city has gone thru two minor league basketball and three minor league hockey franchises in the last 10 years. They’ve never made any money. Last Sunday’s league opener was a near-sellout. The Clippers home opener April 22 is a near-sellout. The team is excited. The only question which remains is whether the Clippers can be at right now,” GUI Purvis, in reference to his team’s play during Tuesday’s 5-3 (3-4) jammer win.

"As a team we didn’t play as well as we could,” said Purvis’ primary concerns. "I wouldn’t use any adjectives—not little, not great-I was just disappointed,” said Purvis, in reference to his team’s play during Tuesday’s 5-3 (3-4) jammer win.
