USG ballot is expanded

by Nancy Bostwick
staff reporter

After two days of deliberation, Bob Wade, USG president, has announced that the deadline for filing petitions for the election of USG president and vice president was extended to yesterday at 5 p.m., according to Cindy Smith, USG vice-president and co-chairman of the USG elections and opinions board.

The decision allows for Michael McGreevey, junior inter-personal communications major and USG internal affairs coordinator, and Brad Krider, junior procurement major and USG student welfare committee chairman, to be listed on the ballot in Wednesday's election.

Prior to the decision, Wade, junior business administration/political science major, and Jeff Metzger, junior market research major and chief executive in charge of committees, were to be the only candidates listed on the ballot for the positions.

McGreevey announced his candidacy at this Tuesday's general assembly meeting. He later announced Krider as a running mate. Prior to Wade's decision, because McGreevey and Krider did not register as candidates by the March 22 deadline, they would not have been listed on the ballot and would run as write-in candidates.

At the same general assembly meeting, the legislative branch of Undergraduate Student Government voted to extend the deadline for petitions to run for the offices of president and vice president from March 22 to March 28. The USG constitution states that the president has 10 academic days to approve or veto action taken by the general assembly.

This was the first time in Wade's administration that he used his power to decide on action taken by the general assembly.

Wade said that he waited to make the decision because he wanted to investigate if any similar action had been taken in other elections in the state.

"I've been in contact with many people, finding out what is the power of the presidential veto," he said.

New candidates enter campaign

by Nancy Bostwick
staff reporter

Although their campaign for USG president and vice president started off late, Michael McGreevey and Brad Krider are confident that their campaigning in the next few days will bring them the support they need to win the election.

McGreevey announced his candidacy Tuesday at the USG general assembly meeting. McGreevey said he waited to announce his decision because there was a possibility other responsibilities would interfere with the position.

"I didn't feel I could give 100 percent; it would be doing the students an injustice," he said, adding that he is confident that he will now be able to fulfill the responsibilities of the office.

Because the announcement occurred after the deadline set by the USG elections and opinions board, McGreevey and Krider were to run as write-in candidates.

A decision by the USG general assembly to move the deadline to petition for the positions to March 28 at 5 p.m. limited the new candidates from beginning

Egg-cellent eggs

Maureen Hughes (center), junior photojournalism major, keeps a watch over the egg-decorating skills of Chris McDonald, sophomore nursing major. Also contributing to the Easter egg hunt for Bowling Green children is Valerie Voigt, freshman finance major. The egg hunt is sponsored by BGSU Greek Life, the Promote Bowling Green Committee, and Mid American National Bank. The hunt is scheduled for 1 p.m. Saturday, March 30, and will be preceded by an Easter basket judging at 12:30 p.m.

Vote to cut aid to China

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate Foreign Relations Committee, in an action aimed mostly at China, voted Wednesday to bar aid for family planning programs in any country that permits baby-killing or coerced abortion.

An amendment by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., to the proposed $12.8 billion foreign aid budget for the coming fiscal year was adopted by the panel on a 13-3 vote.

In keeping with its anti-abortion stance, the Reagan administration is not now providing family planning funds to any country that requires its citizens to undergo abortions as a population control method.

The amendment, however, also would block federal aid to non-government or international organizations with programs in such countries.

The committee adopted another amendment by Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kans., blocking funds for "any program for population planning in the People's Republic of China," including any programs by such private groups as International Planned Parenthood.

CHINA HAD BEEN singled out because of reports that government rules limiting families to one child have led to cases of baby girls being killed at birth by parents who had hoped their one child would be a boy.

Douglas Johnson, legislative director for the National Right To Life Committee, said the vote "represents a strong repugnance" to the Chinese population control program.

After two days of deliberations, the committee passed the foreign aid package on a 15-1 vote. Helms, a long-time opponent of foreign assistance, cast the dissenting vote.

The committee, meanwhile, rejected an amendment aimed at reducing U.S. involvement in Central America.

Attitude: Visually impaired BG students share views

Editor's note: This is the second in a two-part series on visually impaired students and the University.

by Diane Docis
reporter

The attitudes and actions of instructors and peers affect visually-impaired students.

"The first black sitting on the front of the bus, and the first woman smoking in public were no big deal," Carol Hartman, first year graduate student in speech pathology, said. She said it wasn't the action of these things happening, but instead the attitude behind them that made the difference.

"It's people's reactions and changing their prejudiced views that are important," Hartman said.

According to Jan Scottbey, director of Handicapped Services, "The University's goals for blind students are the same as for any student. We want them to be able to come here and get an education. We help them get through with the least amount of difficulty."

The one-woman department aids students by pre-registering them so they can order recordings of books for classes.

Handicapped Services also sends letters to instructors which the students then follow up on in person.

IF NECESSARY, she will meet with instructors to work out any problems before they occur.

"For the most part, we've had no problems with professors - apart from some apprehension if they've never had a blind student," Scottbey said.

Hartman feels her instructors have been very professional.

"They really care that I learn the material," she said. "They don't spoon-feed the information, but just make sure there are no obstacles for me."

Potential obstacles include exams and textbooks.

Not all of the textbooks that visually-impaired students need are available on tape.

Recordings of books for basic courses in the first few semesters of college are easy to get, but those for more specialized classes can be difficult or impossible to find, according to Jim Pelfrey, a sophomore radio-TV-film major, who is visually impaired.

Pelfrey has had to drop a class because he was unable to get a book tape.

Pelfrey believes the University needs a tape center with recordings of books unavailable through other sources. The University does not consider this idea to be cost-effective, so Pelfrey suggests students receive credit for working at his proposed tape center.

INSTRUCTORS ARE usually willing to make arrangements for oral testing, Pelfrey said.

"I try to give professors as many options as possible," he said. "They've never encountered a blind student before, but I've encountered professors, so I try to help them."

Pelfrey said each class presents its own problems.

"I've got Oral Interpretation this semester and I've had to get my literature selections brailled and figure out how to hold and read it in front of the class."

"Ray (Ray Lee, the instructor) is cool about it and really helps. It makes me more motivated," Pelfrey said.

Like Hartman, extraordinary treatment is not what Pelfrey wants.

"If I blow off classes, I deserve what I get. I'm not asking for breaks, just an equal chance." But Pelfrey said equality doesn't always come easily.

There's another way people can please visually-impaired students. "Ask questions. Ask anything. Just ask," Hartman said. "I welcome questions."

"People are going to be uncomfortable, but the more they ask, the more they'll understand," she added.

Pelfrey agrees. "Ignorance is bliss - the people who bother me are those who don't ask questions."

"Even if it seems dumb, ask. I may laugh, but I want them to know the answers," Pelfrey said. "People get scared about things they don't know about."

Along with his suggestions to the University, Pelfrey has a piece of advice he'd like everyone to follow: "Don't overlook my blindness, but don't judge me on it. Take me for what I am."

Teaching gifted

by Phillip B. Wilson
staff reporter

New state requirements for special education teachers have prompted the University's College of Education to initiate plans for two new classes.

These classes may be available for the 1986-87 fall and spring semesters.

The state department of Special Education in Columbus recently required three courses

Edward Fiscus, chairman of special education at the University.

"Recent statistics indicate that there is a need for special education programs in Northwest Ohio and the new state budget should aid this problem," he said.

FISCUS SAID that the faculty of the department view the changes as an opportunity to expand their service to areas

"Recent statistics indicate that there is a need for special education programs in Northwest Ohio and the new state budget should aid this problem."

- Edward Fiscus, chairman of special education for students planning to teach the gifted and talented. These courses include psychology, curriculum and practicum. Psychology for the gifted is the only such course currently offered at the University.

The psychology class deals with the attitudes and feelings of gifted students; the curriculum class will stress selection of modern instruction methods, and the practicum class will offer University students on-the-job training as assistants to teachers in schools, according to that traditionally haven't been served. More money from the state should mean an increasing demand for gifted and talented teachers.

"Bowling Green needs to be prepared to meet those demands," he said. "Our College of Education is traditionally known as an excellent source for teaching candidates and the special education program looks to continue that relationship with the local school districts, specifically with the gifted and talented."

Mall supported

Some Bowling Green merchants are searching for a light, but they are unwilling to enter the tunnel that could lead them to it.

The light is a profitable, bustling shopping atmosphere downtown.

The tunnel - and it is risky for downtown merchants - is the proposed shopping mall outside the city limits on U.S. 25.

The mall isn't quite a "go" yet. Developer Robert Sproul, of Alliance, still needs approval from the Probate Court in Center Township, where the mall would be built, as well as a re-zoning to commercial property.

The mall won't be built within city limits partly because of the fuss the Downtown Merchants Association (DMA) caused at Planning Commission and City Council meetings last fall. So if the mall is built, the city won't profit from property taxes, unless the property is annexed.

The DMA has opposed the mall because the merchants believe it would take business from downtown shops.

That's possible. But the merchants themselves have said the city needs to attract more retail customers.

According to a recent study by the DMA, the city loses an average of 57 percent of its retail business to outside communities.

The mall probably would do two things: keep more students and permanent residents in the city to shop, and attract shoppers from neighboring cities.

Surely, with more people in the city to shop, some of that business would spill over to downtown. That's our opinion, and it's also held by City Administrator Wes Hoffman.

It's time for the merchants to relax and open their minds. The mall has potential to help their businesses.

The mall certainly would be beneficial to the town's residents by adding more variety to the selection of shops and more incentive to shop in BG.

Official briefing on a murder

by Bill Melden

The following is an unofficial transcript of an emergency briefing session held at the White House early Monday morning. The participants are President Reagan, National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane, Defense Secretary Casper Weinberger and White House Information Officer Patrick Buchanan.

REAGAN: Well, boys, I hope you have a good reason for getting me out of bed so early in the morning. I was planning to stay up late tonight to watch the Academy Awards.

McFARLANE: I'm sorry, Mr. President, but we've got a situation on our hands. Yesterday morning one of our soldiers was shot and killed by a Soviet soldier in Potsdam, East Germany. The Soviets are saying that there was provocation, but our sources say otherwise, and we're going to need a statement from you.

REAGAN: I'm particularly interested in the "Best Actor" category. Jeff Bridges is nominated, and I used to spend a lot of time with his daddy when I was a part of the Hollywood scene. And, of course, I have sort of a "professional interest" in the Best Actor award... heh, heh... I'm sure you understand why!

WEINBERGER: Yes, of course, Mr. President; we'll all be pulling for Mr. Bridges. Now, if you don't mind, we need to get down to cases here. Our soldier was a member of the Military Liaison Mission in Potsdam, which, as you know, is a non-convert information-gathering unit that's been in place since the end of World War II. When our man was shot, he was riding in a military vehicle, and was in uniform, but the Soviets are still calling him a "spy." They say they issued a verbal warning, and fired a warning shot; our men on the scene say that the shot came from nowhere, with no warning at all.

REAGAN: Well, Cap, it sounds like a tense situation, and if anyone can understand how these things get out of hand, I can. When I was a young soldier in The Hasty Heart, I saw accidents happen with my own eyes. You know, I really expected a "Best Supporting Actor" nomination for that part. There's a pretty weak field in that category this year, by the way.

McFARLANE: The shooting might have been an accident, sir, but when our soldier's partner tried to administer first aid, the Soviets prevented him, at gunpoint, for an hour. Our man bled to death. It was a very ugly incident.

REAGAN: You know, the Russians are a fascinating people, and they're certainly familiar with war. Why, this year there's even a Russia movie called "Wartime Romance" nominated for Best Foreign Film! Can you imagine?

WEINBERGER: This is a very tough situation, sir. Our man had a wife and two little daughters and was eligible for retirement in four years' time. The public will expect something firm from you.

REAGAN: War is Hell, Cap. A soldier's lot is not an easy one. That reminds me: have any of you boys seen this movie "A Soldier's Story"? It's got an almost all-black cast, and it's up for Best Picture! It could only happen in America!

BUCHANAN: Yes sir, it was a very good movie. But we really need a statement. Once this gets out, all eyes will be on you.

REAGAN: Oh, come on, Pat, this is Oscar time!

BUCHANAN: Nevertheless, Mr. President, we need a statement very soon.

REAGAN: Well, Pat, I don't know... tell me, what would Clint Eastwood say at a time like this?

BUCHANAN: I don't know, sir, but we'd better not treat this matter lightly. Anyway, Eastwood's only good for one quote per year.

REAGAN: Details, Pat, details! What would Burt Reynolds say? Say, why wasn't Burt nominated this year? He must not have been working. Look into that, Pat.

BUCHANAN: Yes, sir. Now, if you can give me a statement...

REAGAN: Pat, you're a stern taskmaster! To wonder Ted Turner wanted you on his team! Well, let's think. It's a tragedy, that's for sure. It reminds me of when they shot down that Korean plane. What did we say then?

McFARLANE: Not much, sir. You "deplored" the incident, if I recall.

REAGAN: Well, then, that's exactly what I'll do this time! Pat, tell the press that I deplore this tragic act. We'll make a stern protest.

BUCHANAN: Yes, sir, I'll get the word out right away.

REAGAN: Yes, don't waste any time! By George, I won't have our fighting men saying their Commander-in-Chief is out of touch. By the way, have any of you seen "The Killing Fields"?

A convincing yacht

by Art Buchwald

The recent savings and loan scandal in Ohio has shaken the banking industry very badly.

When word got back to Ohio that Home State Savings Bank was stuck with bad paper, the good citizens of Cincinnati decided it might be prudent to take their money out of the bank while there was some left.

Unfortunately everyone got the idea at the same time, and panic set in, not only for Home State customers, but also for other banking institutions in Ohio.

I asked a former Ohio banker (not Home State) who also got burned how something like this could take place.

"We made a mistake. It could have happened to anybody."

"That's what the people of Ohio are afraid of," I said. "Why would a bank risk so much money with a small Florida securities company?"

"You should have seen their offices in Florida. Every dealer had a suite overlooking the ocean."

"You mean you invested your depositors' money in a firm because you were impressed with their offices?"

"Of course not. I didn't give them any funds until the officers took me for a ride on their 70-foot yacht. I'll say this, people in Florida really know how to live."

"Hold it," I said. "Bankers don't risk their customers' savings in a company just because it owns a yacht."

"It wasn't only the yacht. They also paid more interest than other firms in the bond business. The competition for deposits is fierce these days, and if we can offer just a quarter of a percent more to the public we can put the guy across the street out of business. People don't understand that we can't let their money sit in our vaults. If we offer them a higher rate of interest, then we have to get a higher rate of interest for ourselves. That's why we went to Florida. They were able to pay us more, and at the same time it was safe because they were backing our deposits with government securities. Is that a sure thing, or isn't it?"

"Probably, except many of the securities didn't exist."

"Now you're getting into technicalities."

"Why didn't you ask to see the bonds?"

"We did. Do you think we're from Missouri?"

"And what happened?"

"They showed them to us and then put them back in the safe."

"Didn't it occur to you that they might have been showing the same collateral to different customers over and over again?"

"Frankly it never crossed our minds. This one guy had a home you wouldn't believe, with a tennis court, Olympic-size pool and race horses. Nobody lives like that unless they're honest."

"In retrospect wouldn't your bank have been better off if you had taken the bonds back to Ohio instead of leaving them in Miami?"

"I couldn't have done that. If I had asked for the securities I would have hurt their feelings, and they would have told me to invest my money somewhere else."

"Perhaps that would have been the best thing that could have happened to you. At least you wouldn't have tossed all your depositors' money into the Okefenokee swamp."

"Yeh, but at the same time I would never have gotten such a good interest rate for them either."

Prevent pregnancy

I, like many others, attended the showing of "The Silent Screamer" on March 21, when it was shown by the campus pro-lifers. Dr. Nathanson, the narrator of the film, pointed out that after viewing the ultrasound picture, both the doctor and the woman involved immediately reversed their stands from pro-choice to pro-life. By doing this, Dr. Nathanson transformed what could have been an objective presentation into blatant sensationalism which promoted his position. I realize abortion is a sensationalist issue. Middle-of-the-road does not exist. I believe both (pro-lifers and pro-choicers) have valid points. Abortion has been much abused since it was legalized in January 1973. However, the elimination of abortion is unrealistic, basically because abortion is as old as conception.

However, amid the fury between pro-lifers and pro-choicers the issue has been grotesquely distorted. Abortion has become a question of morality. What is overlooked is that no one believes abortion is a good thing. We must be reminded that abortion is a method of contraception, one way of preventing unwanted children. A woman at the Guttmacher Institute in Washington, D.C., a firm that provides data and research on abortion and contraception, told me, "Women can no longer afford to be prisoners of their fertility." However, it seems that the government is failing to provide funding for abortion - five of them on court order only. No federal law requires public schools to teach students "the facts of life." In fact, the thrust of the moral majority is such that sex education and accessible contraceptives encourage intercourse and are responsible for high birth rates. A study conducted by the Guttmacher Institute has found that the birth rate of the U.S. is markedly higher than four other European countries whose governments encourage contraception and sex education.

Floating around in all these statistics is my point: that the energy and anger between pro-lifers and pro-choicers needs to be directed, not at each other, but at eliminating the necessity of abortion. Doctors concern themselves not only with the curing of diseases, but also with the prevention of them. In the case of abortion, rather than focusing on treating (i.e. aborting) the "disease," we should concentrate on preventing its existence.

Study in Japan

I would like to share my thought and experience as a BGSU exchange student at Nanzan University in Nagoya, Japan during the current academic year. I feel that students are not well informed of the opportunity awaiting them at the University to study abroad. I am grateful that I took this opportunity this year to live and study in Japan. Japan is very different from the United States, but after having lived here for six months Japan seems like home to me. During the winter vacation, I traveled around much of Japan. One of my biggest trips was to Nagasaki, a beautiful city with atom bomb experience. I went with a friend in a car. On the return trip I hitch-hiked part of the way and took a bullet train back to Nagoya. Of course I spent most of my time studying at Nanzan University. However, it seems that I have learned more about myself by coming to Japan. I have learned that studying in a foreign country is more than a cultural experience. It is an experience about oneself. In Japan I am able to look at myself from a different viewpoint. In this way things that I have always taken for granted have drawn my attention.

There is something about Japan that is hard to describe and this indescribable feeling that I have for Japan and its people is driving me to study more about the language and culture. To be able to speak two languages is like looking at life through a variety of windows. Many expressions that can be said in Japanese cannot be said in English. Likewise some English expressions cannot be translated into Japanese. Therefore to speak both of them is to gain an insight into everyday life as well as complex things. I would like to pass on this experience to my friends at the University. If I had my way I would like to see a curriculum requirement for all students to study abroad for one or two semesters. I am grateful for the opportunity that the University has given me through Asian Studies Program to live in a different culture and to learn more about myself.

Life's rough, Ms.

In reply to the Ms.'s who expressed a disconcertment over an ad published by the Pi Kappa Phi organization for their spring date party. Life is a bitch - and then you die. Let's not get too picky now; no one else other than you really cares to hear the extremist views your organizations put forward. The Nazis thought their way of looking at things was the only way too.

Stop generic 'he'

From the "Women For Women Uninformed, hasty" letter of March 19, I quote, "If there were no goals to attain to earn a scholarship, no one would want to improve himself." The writers are specifically addressing the Miss BGSU Pageant - an all female competition. They claim that they are doing women a service, and that they value women for many reasons, not only because of the pedestal of high heels and the self-conscious suffocation of make-up that create an artificial difference between women and men.

However, they undermine their own argument by using language - the generic he - that symbolically annihilates women. Use of language that excludes women, as if we didn't exist, is so common it was probably done unconsciously. This case is a little more outrageous than most, though, because the writers were addressing a pageant for women only.

It brings up a good point. Would anyone have the desire to improve himself by strutting across a stage in a Speedo bathing suit and 3-inch heels in the not yet existing Mr. BGSU Scholarship Pageant? We have viewed women narrowly as sexual objects, instead of as intelligent, independent and valuable human beings who are also sexual for so long. I hope that we never create a Mr. America Pageant with men prancing around the stage in Speedos and pumps, smiling sweetly at the crowd. And maybe someday the largest scholarship fund for women, instead of being the Miss America Pageant, will exist in Women's Studies, Peace Studies, or maybe even in Political Revolution.

Delegates sent to model UN

United Nations simulation conference an educational experience

by Ellen Zimmerli
staff reporter

This Sunday, 17 students and one professor will be leaving Bowling Green and heading for the Big Apple. The trip, however, will only last a week and it won't all be fun and games.

They are part of the National Model United Nations (NMUN), a simulation of the United Nations that involves colleges from across the country who will represent almost 170 countries and territories.

Tsuneo Akaha, associate professor of Political Science and director of NMUN at the University, said he thinks the program provides a variety of opportunities for students.

"They get exposure to parliamentary and political forum. They get experience with difficult and controversial issues facing the international community. They meet with students from all over the country and meet with the real diplomats at the U.N.," Akaha said. "And," he said, "they experience New York."

Participants started preparing for the simulation in early November. Each is responsible for knowing his or her country, the issues that will be discussed, and the organization, function and procedures of the United Nations.

THIS YEAR, the University will be representing Bourkina Fasso, formerly Upper Volta, and New Zealand.

They will be discussing issues such as Kampuchea, military budgets and nuclear testing, Central America, Palestine and racial and sexual discrimination.

Joelle Khouzam, a senior Political Science/German major, will be making the trip for her second time. She said she knows more of what to expect in the program and remembered her trip last year.

"It's interesting. It was a lot of fun. I learned not just about Belgium (the country she represented last year), but about diplomacy and convincing people of what you want in the most diplomatic manner. Plus New York is a great place," Khouzam said.

She also said she does not think the simulation is very true to the real United Nations.

"It's compressed into five days and you have to state your views quickly," she said. "Also, the character of the people is more intensified. For example, the PLO (Palestine Liberation Organization) people are more PLO-like than they are in the real U.N."

"IT IS valuable for people interested in what the U.N. does or in diplomatic or political careers. Besides getting credit for it, you're going to New York for $100, and that's a bargain," Khouzam said, noting that it is the student's option of receiving credit for the program.

The program is funded through the department of Political Science, Alumni and individual contributions, the College of Arts and Sciences and the Advisory Committee on General Fee Allocation (ACGFA).

Each participant pays $100, which covers delegate fees, hotel accommodations (all participants stay in the Grand Hyatt, where most of the simulation is held), travel expenses to and from New York and other necessary materials for the preparation.

Firelands students must pay $500 because they do not receive as much funding, Akaha noted.

Peace research sparks interest

by Deborah Schmook
staff reporter

The interest in peace studies in the United States increased during the last 15 years in response to the Vietnam War, as scholars questioned the use of force as a vehicle to peace.

But the discipline has existed as an international global movement since the 1950s, said Tsuneo Akaha, assistant professor of political science.

Peace Studies is an interdisciplinary field that includes such areas as political science, economics, sociology, anthropology, psychology, engineering, biology and physics. Akaha said the peace studies movement has made people aware of the inequities between individuals in the world and united people from different fields.

"Thousands in the Soviet Union, Japan, and in the United States have regular contact with one another through peace research and conferences," he noted.

Last year, the U.S. Congress authorized the U.S. Institute of Peace, a research and public relations organization for peace studies.

"PEACE RESEARCHERS are trying to identify sources of tension, conflicts, and wars at all levels of society and then provide for ways of solving these conflicts without recourse to war," Akaha said.

Akaha said he has a special interest in peace studies as a native of Japan, since he saw his countrymen deal with the aftermath of the United States' bombing of Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

"There's something wrong in American culture that downgrades the concept of peace," Akaha said. "A lot of people see the people pushing for peace as weak liberals that can't see the hard realities of life."

their campaign until after the deadline.

McGreevey said that he and Krider plan to focus on improving USG relations within and outside of the organization.

According to McGreevey, there is a general belief among the senators of USG that the executive branch is all-knowing on the issues the general assembly faces and this influences the decisions of the senators.

McGreevey said he believes that often decisions are made in USG for personal reasons rather than as a representation of student opinion.

Krider said that emphasizing the role of senators and encouraging the cabinet members to work with committees more are ways he and McGreevey plan to improve internal relations within USG.

Improving relations with other organizations on campus is one way McGreevey and Krider plan to improve communication outside of USG. Working with other organizations on projects and encouraging organizational representatives to report to USG on their activities would involve these groups more in meetings of the general assembly, McGreevey said.

USG's position with University administration is another area where both candidates see a need for improvement, McGreevey said.

Krider said that he and McGreevey also plan to improve relations with students by making them aware of the circumstances surrounding issues.

Brad Krider

McGreevey also plans to set up an Ohio Student Association chapter at the University, which is a state-wide group of University students who lobby for issues concerning students.

Both candidates feel the need for a change is one of the strong points of their campaign and this will give them the support they need to win.

"I think the students feel there's a need for a change," McGreevey said.

Students pledge support

by Jim Nieman
staff reporter

Pledges at the Senior Challenge Kick-Off at the Milet Alumni Center totaled $18,290 as of 10 p.m. last night. The Kick-Off is a chance for senior volunteers to pledge support to the University before seeking pledges from other seniors.

This is only the first step towards a goal of $50,000 the Class of '85 hopes to raise. Seventy-five percent of the donated money will be used to build a gazebo which the class will donate to the University. Twenty-five percent of each donation goes directly to the area or department of the individual donor's choice, Mariann Blake, graduate student in college student personnel and adviser for the senior challenge, said.

Close to 400 volunteers will be soliciting pledges during Senior Giving Week, April 1-5. Each volunteer is responsible for personally contacting five seniors, Blake said. The remaining 1,500 seniors will be contacted by phone workers, she said.

"The whole idea is to get as many seniors involved as possible," Blake said.

ONE YEAR, all seniors were contacted by mail only, but there was only a 3 to 4 percent response. Blake says she hopes their system will result in a 50 percent response.

The committee is recommending two sites where the gazebo might be built. One possibility is in the oval in front of the Union, Blake said. "The other possibility is by the Rec Center," she said.

The location of the gazebo "will have to be approved by the president (in four years) - whoever that may be," Blake said. "We can only make recommendations."

Students are not required to pay their pledged amount until one year after they have graduated. The money will be paid in three equal installments, so all the money will not be collected for three years, Blake said. The gazebo will not be built for four years.

"We thought it was something (the gazebo) the University could use," Sue Dillon, senior accounting major and kick-off party subcommittee member, said.

The 18 member executive committee considered setting up scholarship funds or donating money to a department at the University, but quickly decided to donate something "tangible" that the present seniors could view during future visits to the University, Dillon said.

AS PART OF part of the University's 75th anniversary celebration, the class of '85 wants to place a time-capsule under the gazebo to be opened at the University's 150th anniversary celebration. The names of everyone who donates to the building of the gazebo will be in the time-capsule.

"It's the highest goal we have ever set here at the University," Blake said.

Ballot

Wade said that he spoke with election officials to get background for his decision.

Wade said a similar decision was made in Franklin County last year to extend the deadline for petitions for the position of municipal judge. This led Wade to make his decision, he said.

"The legislature (of USG) made the decision and since the legislative branch is supposed to be speaking for their constituency, I've decided not to take any action on their decision," he said.

According to Smith, the USG elections and opinions board was planning to run off two ballots, one listing Wade and Metzger with room for write-in candidates and another listing both teams of candidates.

The ballots will be printed today listing the names of all candidates.

According to regulations set by the USG elections and opinions board, because the deadline was extended by the USG general assembly, McGreevey and Krider could not begin actively campaigning until 5 p.m. the day the petitions were due (yesterday).

McGreevey said he believes Wade's decision will not influence the outcome of the election in McGreevey's or Krider's behalf, because they were determined to educate the students on the procedure for voting for write-in candidates.

"Definitely it's going to help having my name on the ballot," he said. "I think it will increase awareness, but by the time elections would be up, enough people would be out to support us."

McGreevey said he believes that having two candidates on the ballot will be a positive move for USG.

"I think it is going to give us a more credible election - having two people on the ballot," he said, adding that student apathy about the elections would be reduced by having two teams of candidates listed on the ballot.

Wade said that his decision to extend the deadline was made in the best interest of the students.

"I didn't think it would be fair to the student body, concerning the election. I wanted to make sure Mike and Brad could inform the student body of their platform and improve the election by making sure the students are aware of the candidates themselves," Wade said.

Computers installed at library

Twenty-five IBM PC's and 18 Macintosh computers have been installed in the Jerome Library, according to Robert Shontz, computer services data systems supervisor.

These are the only stand-alone PC's and Macintosh computers available to off-campus students, Shontz said. All other stand-alone computers are located in dormitory labs and are for the use of dorm residents only.

The PC's located in the Cardinal Room in the University

Union can be used to input data to be batch processed only, he said.

The lab has software available including Lotus 1-2-3 and Minitab with several others on order, Shontz said.

The lab is located in Room 122

in the library.

The hours for the new lab are 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday and 1 p.m. to 9 p.m. Sunday. Hours will be expanded as student need dictates, he said.

Local history the focus of program

by Patricia Lupica
reporter

History... some consider it boring. But if the topic of discussion can lead to tracing a person's family heritage, the boredom may disappear.

This topic, along with other similar ideas, will be the focus of discussion at the University's Center for Archival Collection's first conference.

The day-long conference on local history will be held April 4 in the Ohio Suite and Alumni Room of the Union.

According to Paul Yon, director of the center, the purpose of the program is to bring together a variety of people in a facet of history, including local history, family history, historical preservation and historical museums.

The audience is aimed at family historians, who study all facets of family life - including economic growth and relationships of members.

Genealogists - those who study dates, names and places about families - also will be involved. Students, as well as teachers, college and museum personnel, are encouraged to attend to find out about northwestern Ohio history.

The conference is expected to attract about 100 people.

The key note speaker will be John Egerton, author of Generations: An American Family. Egerton's specialty is southern history.

Local scholars will also speak, including Joseph Arpad, executive producer for WBGU-TV, David Skaggs, history professor, and Carol Peirce, instructor of interpersonal and public communication (IPCO).

The "Great Black Swamp," one of Arpad's documentaries, is about the history of Northwest Ohio settlement prior to 1840. It discusses how families adjusted to the large amounts of swamp in this area.

"The scholars were chosen by their scholarly contributions within their specific discipline and also on their reputations as professionals," Yon said.

Peirce will present a slide show displaying work she has done on a grant-funded program titled: "Ohio Women: Diaries and Photographs." Peirce utilized sources from the Women's Studies Archives held by the center.

"I hope people in attendance will have a greater awareness and appreciation of local history and will have gained some knowledge about local history," Yon said.

Registration for the conference must be completed by April 1. Students will be admitted free of charge and are not required to register. The fee for all others is $5. For more information about the conference, contact the Center for Archival Collections at 372-2411.

Sandee Horton, graduate student in audiology, puts the earphones on Laura Yenour (left) as she prepares to check Yenour's hearing. Free hearing screenings will be offered today also in room 338 South Hall from 1-4 p.m.; no appointment is needed.

"War has always been legal and a legitimate means of protecting communities. Billions of dollars have been spent to protect that idea," he said. "Peace researchers are convinced that if we continue this way there'll never be peace."

Akaha said the Ohio governor's office is trying to promote peace studies in Ohio, with some urging from Dagmar Celeste, the governor's wife, who spoke at the University last week.

The Peace Studies Consortium of Ohio Colleges and Universities, a group set up last October, is working toward assembling a complete list of Ohio colleges having peace studies programs.

Strong programs in peace studies already exist at the University of Akron, the University of Dayton, Kent State University, Ohio State University and Antioch College. There are no peace studies courses at the University.

University aids handicapped

Campus buildings to be accessible

by Phillip B. Wilson
staff reporter

University students with handicaps may be happy to know that state funds from 1984 should make a "majority" of campus buildings accessible for them, according to Rollie Engler, director of plant operations and maintenance.

Present plans are to modify the restrooms in the Life Science Building, South Hall, the Commons, Jerome Library, University Hall, Memorial Hall, and the College of Home Economics. Requests also include the construction of a wheelchair ramp in front of the Commons. Previous improvements had mostly consisted of curb cuts and ramps at various locations throughout the University, Engler said.

"Many campuses have more difficulty than us because of the difference in elevations and giant steps to get into buildings, but most of our facilities don't present these problems," he said.

The University also plans to make some changes in some of the older campus locations - such as Shatzel Hall - and bring them "up to" the present code, Engler said.

"There is a lot more we can do but we are in compliance with the state and the limited amount of money we receive from them," he said.

THE PRINCIPLE regulation in the present 1985 building code, as stated in the handbook "Creating an Accessible Campus," is that "All new construction on college and university campuses must be in conformance with American National Standards Institute (ANSI) rule A117.1 as a result of section 504."

"This means no otherwise qualified handicapped individual by reason of their handicap should be excluded from their participation," Janet Scottbey, director of handicapped services, said.

ANSI's guidelines determine the regulations of many of the state's boards, Scottbey said.

Universities are permitted to choose their own set of standards, provided they meet the state minimum requirements. The University administration has chosen to comply with ANSI because its rules are stricter, Scottbey said.

"The state guidelines are good because they take into consideration the ANSI standards and still allow us the choice of accommodations. You can do more as long as you meet the minimum," she said.

"OUR MAJOR goal was to make our college program accessible for all handicapped students and we have basically accomplished that," Scottbey said.

Engler said that while the University doesn't have to bring all campus buildings up to code, but they have strived to make this campus more accessible, new buildings and old.

Scottbey said she hopes more elevators will be made available, similar to the one completed in University Hall in 1984. The major obstacle with additional elevators is that they cost over $100,000 to install depending upon the buildings and where they are placed.

Funds from the state are not guaranteed each year so there isn't always enough of a surplus from the capital improvement bill to meet the needs of every school, Scottbey said.

Handicapped services available

by Meg Tierney
reporter

The Rehabilitation Act of 1973 states that universities must be accessible to handicapped individuals.

"This means that we have to provide access (for the handicapped) to our programs," Jan Scottbey, director of Handicapped Services, said.

The University, through Handicapped Services, provides many services so that the handicapped on campus will have the access needed to participate in many of the University's programs.

The programs Scottbey is concerned with include the pre-registration of the blind, the adaptation of the graduation ceremony for the mobility impaired, some orientation of the blind, and the proctoring of tests for the blind and the hearing impaired.

"Pre-registration for the blind means that we make sure they get the classes they need so they can order recordings of their books," she said.

Handicapped Services is aware of the needs of the handicapped by periodically surveying handicapped students to find out what they believe needs to be changed.

THESE RECOMMENDATIONS are then given to the University architects who attempt to adapt the University for handicapped students.

"There has been complete cooperation so far," Scottbey said.

Graduation may be considered a very easy task for a student, but could be more difficult for a handicapped student in a wheelchair to receive their diploma with the rest of the class. Therefore, it was suggested that ramps be installed so the stage is accessible to wheelchairs, Scottbey said.

She said her department also provides some special orientation for blind students on campus.

"Orientation of the blind is mostly done by their mobility instructors from Toledo, but we help them with things such as cafeteria lines," she said.

She said the University also has a Braille map to help the students get used to the campus.

Another service that Handicapped Services provides is the proctoring of exams for students that are blind or hearing impaired.

"We read the test to some students, and if their test is in Braille, we have to take their answers and put them in a form that their instructors will understand," Scottbey said.

She said the only major problem with the University is that although access ramps are provided for wheelchair students to enter buildings on campus, some students chain their bikes to the ramps and the handicapped students then have trouble getting into the buildings.

Rental program presented

The Bowling Green Housing Commission will hear a presentation on the rental rehabilitation program in which the city is participating at their meeting Tuesday night at 8 p.m. at the City Administrative Services Building at 304 N. Church St.

The city is using federal and state grant monies to aid in the rehabilitation of rental properties in the city.

"It should be one of interest to students," Thomas Anderson, Housing Commission chairman, said yesterday. "(Although) it's not just a student program, the majority (of rental housing) in the city is occupied by students."

The presentation will be given by Sandra Mills, city housing specialist, and Carolyn Lineback, city grants administrator.

Toledo avoids possession of securities

TOLEDO (AP) - Officials here say they never heard a Florida securities firm promise them higher interest in return for not taking possession of securities, but avoided taking possession anyway.

Thomas Tew, the court-appointed receiver in a bankruptcy case involving ESM Government Securities Inc., said Wednesday in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., that ESM tried to tell some city investors that their towns would get more interest if they did not take possession of their securities.

Tew said, however, that the move could have been a ploy to sell the same securities to more than one customer after ESM went heavily into debt in 1980.

"One of the problems is the pigeons didn't understand the game," Tew said of ESM creditors, two dozen of which are owed about $320 million. "They hear a sales story that they can get an extra point, and they think they can hire extra firemen or policemen."

But officials in Toledo, which could lose $19 million in ESM investments, say they never heard such promises.

SHELDON ROSEN, Toledo city law director, said he found no signs of such an offer in a review of information relating to the $19.2 million Toledo invested through ESM. Federal Securities and Exchange Commission officials, who have filed civil fraud charges against ESM, say all that money may be lost.

"I talked to attorneys involved in the ESM case, and no mention of such a deal was ever made," Rosen said.

Daniel Hiskey, the suspended city treasurer who dealt directly with ESM officials, said none of them ever mentioned paying higher interest for not taking possession of securities.

"You have to understand that it is common practice with this sort of investment not to take possession," Hiskey said. "Doing so simply creates security problems for you.

"No one ever offered me anything like that, even indirectly, and if they had, it certainly would have made me suspicious enough to ask further questions."

TOLEDO OFFICIALS have filed a $58 million negligence and fraud lawsuit against the Chicago auditing firm of Alexander Grant & Co., which Hiskey said gave positive reports on ESM that led him to trust the Florida firm.

British journalist kidnapped

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - A terrorist group that claimed responsibility for the assassinations of two British diplomats last year said yesterday it had kidnapped British journalist Alec Collett for spying for Israel and the United States.

The Revolutionary Organization of Socialist Moslems made the claim three days after gunmen abducted Collett, 63, at a highway junction south of Beirut while he was on assignment for the U.N. Relief and Works Agency.

He was the latest of nine Westerners seized in two weeks of kidnappings in Lebanon. One victim, British metallurgist Geoffrey Nash, was released unharmed Wednesday, but there was no word about the others.

In a statement to a Western news agency, which provided the text on condition its name was not used, the terrorists claimed "some documents related to spying missions in the service of Mossad (the Israeli secret service) and American intelligence" were found on Collett. It said his U.N. work was "only a coverup for his spying activities."

THE TERRORIST ORGANIZATION claimed responsibility for the killings of British diplomat Kenneth Whitty in Athens, Greece, in March 1984 and Percy Norris, Britain's deputy high commissioner in Bombay, India, in November.

It described Collett in yesterday's statement as an "unbeliever" and said "he identified himself as a recruited member of British intelligence with the rank of consul."

London newspapers have speculated that the Revolutionary Organization of Socialist Moslems is a cover name for the Palestinian guerrilla group led by Abu Nidal, which claimed responsibility for the attempted murder in 1982 of Israel's ambassador to Britain, Shlomo Argov.

Three members of Abu Nidal group are serving long prison terms in Britain for the attempt on Argov, which prompted Israel's 1982 invasion of Lebanon to wipe out Palestinian guerrilla bases.

With the entry of the Revolutionary Organization, five groups now claim involvement in the spate of kidnappings.

THE OTHER FOUR organizations and their claims are:

- Jihad Islami, or Islamic Holy War, which said it abducted Nash; British businessman Brian Levick; Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press; Marcel Fontaine, a French vice-consul; protocol officer Marcel Carton of the French Embassy, and his daughter Danielle Perez, an embassy secretary.

Cancer victim dies, tumors untreatable

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) - Pamela Hamilton, the young cancer victim whose family lost a court fight to prevent her from receiving medical treatment on religious grounds, died yesterday at her home.

Dr. Brian Corden of the pediatric oncology department at T.C. Thompson Children's home confirmed the death of the 14-year-old girl.

In 1983, a state court ordered the girl to undergo cancer treatment over the religious objections of her fundamentalist preacher father.

Treatment began in September 1983, but by then a tumor that had been discovered in her left leg three months earlier had grown to the size of a football and Pamela was a frail 88 pounds.

DOCTORS SAID THEN that the delay in treatment had reduced her chances of surviving from 75 percent to no better than 25 percent. They said that without treatment she would have died within three months.

The treatment ended in September and doctors diagnosed Pamela as being free of the Ewing's sarcoma that had caused the tumor.

However, during a routine check in January doctors found malignant tumors in her lungs and back. They said there was no cure for the tumors, but would not publicly disclose her chances for survival.

Attorney withdraws

Conrail sale unsettled

WASHINGTON (AP) - An influential senator on Wednesday called for a new Justice Department assessment of the proposed sale of Conrail to the Norfolk Southern Railroad after the department's top antitrust lawyer disqualified himself from further involvement with the merger.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, said such action was necessary "to remove any perception of impropriety" since Paul McGrath, assistant attorney general for antitrust, withdrew from the case late in the day in face of conflict-of-interest questions.

In a letter to Thurmond, McGrath said he disqualified himself after discovering that the law firm he will return to next week - Dewey, Ballantine, Bushby, Palmer and Wood - is doing tax work for Norfolk Southern. McGrath said he learned of the link after being questioned about it at a hearing before the committee.

"As I indicated at the hearing, I had not heard previously about any such representation nor have I discussed the Conrail-Norfolk Southern matter with anyone at Dewey, Ballantine," McGrath said in his letter.

MCGRATH SAID his division's analysis of the antitrust implications of the proposed merger was completed in January, before the firm was retained earlier this month to do the tax work. McGrath leaves government service at the end of the week.

Without commenting on McGrath's decision, Thurmond wrote in turn to Attorney General Edwin Meese III suggesting a new assessment of the antitrust implications of the deal.

"In order to remove any perception of impropriety, I suggest you consider having the appropriate official at the Department of Justice re-evaluate the antitrust implications of the proposed sale of Conrail to Norfolk Southern," Thurmond said.

At the hearing, McGrath defended the Justice Department's scrutiny of the merger proposal, telling the committee the divestiture requirements would result in there being "roughly the same competitive situation" as before the merger.

ACLU files lawsuit

LONDON, Ohio (AP) - The Ohio Foundation of the American Civil Liberties Union said Wednesday that it had filed suit against the Ohio State Medical Board and state prison officials over medical care administered to prisoners at the London Correctional Institution.

The suit, filed Tuesday in Madison County Common Pleas Court, charges violation of inmate rights under state and federal constitutions and laws. It asks $300,000 in compensatory and punitive damages on behalf of two inmates the ACLU said received medical treatment by untrained and unsupervised inmates.

While the suit names two inmates, it was brought on behalf of all past, present and future inmates at LCI who have or may receive medical treatment by unqualified personnel. Defendants are Richard Seiter, director of the Department of Rehabilitation and Correction; Bonnie Hubbard, medical services administrator, three officials of the London prison; and the 11 appointed members of the Medical Board.

THERE WAS NO immediate comment from the Department of Rehabilitation and Correction or the Medical Board.

The action charges members of the Medical Board "have acted in bad faith, recklessly, negligently, illegally and with deliberate indifference to the serious medical needs" of LCI inmates. It alleges a history of prison officials' knowing and deliberate "use of inmate labor and other unqualified personnel in the delivery of medical services to inmates at the London Correctional Institution."

The suit claims that two inmates, Eugene Kirk and Scott Powers, were injured in an altercation with another inmate, received treatment which included sutures from an unskilled inmate, and were subjected to X-rays by an untrained person using a machine in need of repair.

It states that Kirk experienced anguish, loss of confidence and psychological impairment from disfigurement of his face by unskilled suturing.

Theories about war varied

Produce arms to avoid war or cut back to avoid 'winter'?

WASHINGTON (AP) - The prospect that nuclear war could create a "nuclear winter" threatening all life on Earth is no reason to change Reagan administration military policies, a top Pentagon official said Wednesday.

Dark theories about a frigid, crop-destroying nuclear winter merely underline the need to search for ways to reduce the risk of war, and "I believe U.S. policy is moving in the right direction," said Fred Ikle, undersecretary of defense for policy.

He spoke at a conference devoted to assessing dangers and policy implications of nuclear winter - the theory that a major nuclear exchange would stir up huge amounts of smoke, dust and other debris that would shield the Earth from the sun's warmth, causing temperatures to drop and ruining food sources.

ASTRONOMER CARL SAGAN told the conference, sponsored by the National Research Council, that such new understandings of potential global damage - as well as fears of still-unknown dangers - make it crucial "to have so few nuclear weapons in the world that you can't have nuclear winter."

"I realize this isn't nearly as radical a proposal as the president's" stated goal of ridding the world of all nuclear weapons, said Sagan. He has been a frequent critic of administration policies, including the new "Star Wars" concept of shooting down or otherwise stopping missiles attacking the United States.

On Tuesday, physicists, weather specialists, biologists and others told the conference that new tests substantially support earlier-stated theories about nuclear winter. But they also said many uncertainties remain about how much devastation there might be and how long it might last. They recommended substantial further laboratory tests.

SEVERAL SCIENTISTS, including Sagan, have said there is ample evidence to fear the potential extinguishing of all life on this planet. And he added on Wednesday that since it took scientists nearly 40 years since the explosion of the first nuclear bomb to discover this new danger, "we may well have missed other things and it's unlikely that what we've missed will make nuclear war better."

Ikle said, "I agree with Dr. Sagan, we do face the question of what have we missed."

He said the nation's leaders had made mistakes in the past but that wise moves included trying to reduce "the sheer megatonnage" of the world's nuclear weapons and proposing the Reagan administration's Strategic Defense Initiative within that context of reducing arsenals.

Sagan, on the other hand, said "a reasonable Soviet response" to a U.S. Star Wars protective umbrella would not be to reduce their arsenal but to build it up in hopes that more missiles would get through.

Iraq shaken by explosion

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) - Western Baghdad was shaken by a huge explosion Wednesday that Iran said was caused by one of its missiles. Witnesses said the blast occurred beside two schools and a bus station, and may have caused hundreds of casualties.

The explosion came shortly after Iran said it had fired a ground-to-ground missile at the Iraqi capital. Iraq struck back with an air raid on Tehran that the Iranians said killed at least 10 people and wounded 50.

Iraqi officials said nothing about the cause of the Baghdad explosion or the number of casualties.

A witness said the victims of the explosion were students, pedestrians and people driving by in cars. About 50 cars and buses were wrecked in the blast, according to the witnesses, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

MILITARY POLICE and secret service agents sealed the capital's western sector, over which a huge cloud of white smoke billowed, and barred reporters.

Iran has claimed to have fired six ground-to-ground missiles into Baghdad since March 14, during an escalation of the 4½-year-old war between the Persian Gulf neighbors. Iraq said two of the explosions were caused by saboteurs' bombs, but has made no comment on the other three.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency said Wednesday's missile attack was retaliation for an overnight Iraqi air raid on Tehran that killed nine people and wounded 14. The report was monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus.

According to the London-based Jane's Defense Weekly, the missiles being fired are Soviet-made SS-1 Scud B missiles, which were introduced about 20 years ago and have a maximum range of about 160 miles. It quoted Western intelligence sources as noting that Tehran announced the missile attacks three to seven minutes before the explosions happened, indicating the blasts were not due to sabotage.

IRAQ SAID THAT, after the Baghdad explosion, it sent warplanes to attack Hamadan, 240 miles southwest of Tehran.

The official Iraqi news agency quoted an unidentified military spokesman as saying the raid on "selected targets" in Hamadan brought to six the number of cities attacked by Iraqi jet fighters since dawn.

Missile research urged

LUXEMBOURG (AP) - NATO defense ministers Wednesday urged the United States to move ahead with research on a space-based missile defense and said the program is in the Western alliance's security interests.

U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said he was "extremely pleased" by the allies' support for the research, which the Soviet Union has said would start an arms race in space.

The ministers, in a closing statement at their regular spring strategy session, also pledged to continue installation of 572 medium-range nuclear missiles in Western Europe unless an arms control pact is reached at the U.S.-Soviet talks in Geneva.

Lord Carrington, the NATO secretary-general, disclosed that 134 of the U.S. cruise and Pershing 2 missiles had been deployed in Europe, including 16 cruise missiles in Belgium earlier this month. Carrington gave no other breakdown of the deployments.

NATO previously had kept the figures secret.

The defense ministers declared their "strong support" for the U.S. bargaining position at the Geneva arms control negotiations, which began March 12. The negotiations involve long- and medium-range nuclear missiles as well as weapons in space.

NOTING THAT the Soviet Union is attempting to develop its own defensive weapons for possible deployment in space, the NATO officials said U.S. research of space weapons - often called Star Wars - was "prudent" and should continue.

"We support the United States research program into these technologies, the aim of which is to enhance stability and deterrence at reduced levels of offensive nuclear forces," the NATO declaration said.

"This research, conducted within the terms of the (1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile) treaty, is in NATO's security interest and should continue."

The ministers also welcomed a formal invitation issued by Weinberger Tuesday for the allies to participate in the multibillion-dollar research of space weaponry.

Michael Heseltine, the British defense secretary, said in an interview that "you can be sure" Britain will join in the U.S. research program.

British officials have expressed mixed feelings about the feasibility of the U.S. space weapons research and about the implications for NATO policy.

Geoffrey Howe, the British foreign secretary, said in a speech March 15 that there were many unanswered questions about the desirability of a defensive system in space. He said it was "liable to be outflanked by relatively simpler and demonstrably cheaper" counter forces from the Soviets.

France, whose skepticism of the U.S. program has been more vocal than the other NATO partners, was not party to the Luxembourg declaration in support of the research. It does not participate in NATO defense planning because its forces are not in the NATO integrated military command.

Australian officials said yesterday their country also would refuse to participate. Australia was one of three non-NATO countries formally invited by Weinberger to join the program. The others were Japan and Israel.

Two convicted for date murder

PITTSBURGH (AP) - Two women were convicted Wednesday of murdering one Turkish student and wounding a second while on a double-date with the men last summer.

Charmaine Pfender, 19, of Pittsburgh, and Sara Mae Richardson, 20, of nearby Imperial, burst into tears when the jury's verdict was announced and were led sobbing from a courtroom.

The women were convicted of killing Engin Aydin, 24, of Bozagic, Turkey, and wounding Suat Erdogan, 25, of Karabuk, Turkey last August. Both men were students at Point Park College in Pittsburgh.

They were also convicted of aggravated assault, unlawful restraint and criminal conspiracy, authorities said. In addition, Pfender was found guilty of a firearms violation and Richardson guilty of hindering apprehension.

"I was shot. I could have been killed. They were punished by the law," Erdogan told reporters in halting English after the verdict. "I'm glad to finish."

ERDOGAN, WHO HAD been shot in the neck when he tried to flee from the women, helped authorities find Aydin's body in a shallow grave Aug. 7 in a rural area.

The women face the death penalty or life in prison, but Deputy District Attorney Christopher said he would not seek a death sentence.

Allegheny County Common Pleas Judge George Ross said he would schedule a sentencing date and ordered the women jailed without bond.

CONRAD SAID he'd been prepared to offer evidence that the two women were "more than just friends." But the judge barred the evidence as "too prejudicial," he said.

Rare disorder diagnosed

Platelet problem found

HOUSTON, Ohio (AP) - Debra Stoner is the seventh person in the world to be diagnosed as having Isolated Platelet Factor 3, a rare blood disorder characterized by bruising and heavy bleeding.

"It is such a relief to finally know what is wrong with me," she said. "At last I finally know."

People with PF-3 have a shortage of blood platelets, which help blood to clot. Because of the shortage, their blood doesn't clot as quickly.

Stoner has a history of bleeding problems. After a 1977 appendectomy, Stoner experienced heavy bleeding.

"I was bruised from my upper stomach to my knees because of the accumulated blood clots. All the blood tests came back normal."

"I was sent to a hematologist in Columbus, but nothing showed up when the tests were repeated. The procedures didn't indicate any type of coagulation problems. I still felt there was something wrong, but there was nowhere else to go," she said.

STONER, who trained as a laboratory technician, understood the test results. She knew there was no need to worry about leukemia or other life-threatening illnesses.

There seemed to be no reason why blood dripped down her arm when she received regular injections for her allergies. Gentle toothbrushing caused her gums to bleed. A simple tooth extraction required a stitch or two to control the bleeding.

"I always had bruises. People must have thought I was really clumsy," she said. "I would notice new bruises, but I could never remember falling or hitting something."

Last December, Stoner had bleeding complications after undergoing gynecological surgery at Wilson Memorial Hospital. She was given two units of packed cells.

"There were enough platelets in that transfusion to stop the bleeding," she said. "My stomach turned black and blue from the accumulated blood. It still is kind of tender, but the bruising is gradually fading."

THE SURGEON CALLED in a hematologist to determine the cause of the bleeding.

"I think I really made his day," Stoner said.

The hematologist, Richard Lanham, ordered rounds of blood tests but results were all normal. In January, he sent the 32-year-old accounting firm secretary to Miami Valley Hospital in Dayton for more specialized blood studies.

"I was beginning to look like a drug addict and feel like a pincushion," Stoner said. "My arms were a mass of needle marks."

On Jan. 15, Lanham told Stoner the illness had been pinpointed as Platelet Factor 3. No treatment was needed, but Stoner was told she would have to wear an identification bracelet for the rest of her life.

Lanham said Stoner's case was the seventh in the world to be diagnosed.

Stoner is taking iron supplements to build up her system. No medication is required, but she makes routine visits to the doctor so the condition can be monitored.

"As far as I was concerned, it was all good news," she said. "After all these years, I finally have a name for my problem."

Columbus officer is convicted

DELAWARE, Ohio (AP) - A Columbus police officer accused of stopping a woman under the pretext of checking her for drunken driving and then sexually assaulting her was convicted yesterday on rape and kidnapping charges.

William Green, 37, was found guilty by Delaware County Common Pleas Judge Henry Shaw Jr., who deliberated for more than three hours. Green had waived a jury trial.

The officer has been suspended from his job since he was indicted in October on charges that he attacked a 20-year-old Sunbury woman.

The woman said she was attacked May 25, 1984, after Green had stopped her car using a flashing police light.

Gymnastics team to compete in regionals

MAC champions led by Kosmerl and Staley

by Steve Quinn
assistant sports editor

One winter sports team still remains active, and tomorrow, Bowling Green's gymnastics team competes in the National Collegiate Athletic Association northeast regional meet in Pittsburgh, Pa.

In order to qualify for the regional meet, the team must have one of the top six average scores of the 24 teams in the northeast region. In figuring a qualifying score, a team must average its top two away scores, and top two home scores with the next best score, home or away.

BG enters the competition in fifth of the six teams with a score of 176.08.

The rest of the field includes Penn State (182.97); Ohio State (182.76); University of New Hampshire (178.15); University of Pittsburgh, and the University of Rhode Island with a sixth place score of 175.12.

The next six top individual gymnasts not on a qualifying team can advance.

The Falcons are coming off a first place finish at the Mid-American Conference championship meet in Mt. Pleasant, Mich., two weeks ago with a winning score of 175.80.

THEY EDGED out favorites Western Michigan and Northern Illinois who scored 174.50 and 174.35. They lost to both NIU and WMU during regular season action.

"Depth and team effort were the key," head coach Charles Simpson said. "Western had some higher up, but not enough all the way down."

They were led by all-MAC performers Shelley Staley and Tiffany Kosmerl. It was their performances on the balance beam that secured their third title in four years.

Kosmerl finished first with a score of 9.45, a school record, while Staley earned a 9.25. The top two performers in each event automatically earn all-MAC honors.

"There's a lot less pressure than MAC's," Kosmerl said. "The girls are real good there (regionals). It's mostly a learning experience. For me personally, I just want to do my best. My friends and relatives are going to be there. They haven't seen me (compete) since the intra squad meet."

Kosmerl's finish came as no surprise since she had led the Falcons most of the regular season. Her winning beam score broke the record she had set only one week earlier.

STALEY'S PERFORMANCE, however, was admittedly somewhat of a shock.

"This year's been a hard year for me," Staley said. "I was busy with my major (education) more this year. I wasn't hitting my routines. My mind just wasn't in the gym. It was sort of a hump year for me. I don't know what happened."

"Toward the end of the year, I started to get my mind into it," she said. "Now I'm so uptight. When I'm in the gym in concentrate on gymnastics; when I'm in school I think about my teaching. It all paid off just right at the end."

"This sport is all mental. A person can be so good, but not set right mentally."

BG will be the only MAC representative in NCAA competition this year. Last year BG and Kent State represented the MAC in the northeast region.

"Our attitude is relaxed," Simpson said. "We want to represent the MAC as best as we can and hopefully maintain our fifth spot, maybe even move up."

BG News/Phil Masturzo

Sports Cap

Baseball: The Falcons open their home season today with a doubleheader against Defiance starting at 1 p.m. on Stellar field.

Women's tennis: The BG netters have their home lidifter today on Keefe courts against Eastern Kentucky and Wright State today at 11 a.m. and tomorrow at 9 a.m.

Gymnastics: After a two week "vacation", the BG tumblers travel to Pittsburgh, Pa. to compete in the NCAA regionals tomorrow. The Falcons garnered the MAC crown March 16.

Women's track: The women travel to Oxford for a dual meet tomorrow with the Miami Redskins.

Men's golf: BG's linksters travel to compete in the Wooster Invitational tomorrow with a 9 a.m. tee-off time.

Tabler down to one glove

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) - Now that he knows which glove to bring to the ballpark every day, the Cleveland Indians' Pat Tabler says he can finally go about the business of fulfilling his potential.

"It helps having just one position," Tabler said from the American League team's spring training camp. "It helps your concentration, knowing you can go out there and work on just one position. You can work on becoming a complete ballplayer."

Manager Pat Corrales handed Tabler the Indians' first base job this spring, despite objections from veteran first baseman Mike Hargrove.

Tabler, who had previously played left field and third base for the Indians, replaced Hargrove as Cleveland's starting first baseman midway through last season.

Now, instead of worrying about chasing after fly balls, Tabler can concentrate on his defense at first base and, more importantly, on his hitting, which is by far his greatest asset.

The 27-year-old Cincinnati resident has hit .290 since he came to the Indians two seasons ago from the Chicago White Sox in exchange for shortstop Jerry Dybzinski.

Tabler had played third base for the Chicago Cubs' Class AAA affiliate in 1982 before being traded to the White Sox and then the Indians in 1983.

In Cleveland, he was shifted between the infield and outfield before Corrales put him at first base for good last year. Yet even early this spring, Tabler was unsure if he could settle in at first base.

"This helps," he said. "Now I can work on my complete game - offense, defense, everything."

Although he still has more trouble defensively at first base than Hargrove, who is one of the better defensive first basemen in the league, Tabler says, "It's coming around."

"One thing that's hard for me is, with a man on first base and a left-handed hitter up, starting a double play," Tabler said.

Soto hurting

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) - Cincinnati Reds right-hander Mario Soto says he's still concerned about his tender right elbow, which forced him out of a spring-training game last Saturday.

Soto passed the first test of the elbow Wednesday, pitching in a "B" game against the Toronto Blue Jays at Dunedin. He went six innings, allowing two earned runs and fanning nine.

However, he said he still felt tightness on the inside of the elbow, the same spot where he suffered a broken bone early in his career.

"It's better, but it's still there," Soto said of the tightness. "It's not as bad as it was, but I'm still concerned. The test is going to be how it feels in the next couple of days."

Soto is scheduled to pitch again Sunday. He came out of the game last Saturday against Philadelphia complaining of pain and tightness. He said he wasn't using the proper pitching form, putting too much stress on the elbow.

Catcher Dann Bilardello said Soto appeared fine Wednesday.

"He threw pretty well," Bilardello said. "The other day (Saturday) he wasn't throwing right while he warmed up. He didn't have that zip. He wasn't like he usually is."

"But today, he didn't seem to have any pain. He just came out and threw well, but he didn't throw any breaking pitches."

Soto threw 96 pitches, 59 fastballs and 37 changeups. His control was excellent - 66 of his pitches were strikes.

"He was a little afraid of his arm early in the game, but then he went after them," pitching coach Jim Kaat said.

Pro Wrestling pins more fans

When most young boys are growing up they dream of one day being the next Babe Ruth or O.J. Simpson.

But I was never like most kids. To me the ultimate hero was the pro wrestler.

Pro wrestlers were bigger than life. I marveled at their great recuperative powers. They were blessed with the ability to cheat death, absorbing a multitude of back-breakers, sidwinder suplexes and piledrivers and still heal in time for next week's show.

Read this

by Tom Reed
sports reporter

So, while my friends were busy collecting those silly baseball cards, I was at the drug store looking at wrestling magazines. You know, the ones which were located near the girlie magazines and had the bloody wrestler on the cover.

As I grew older, I began realizing the punches weren't really connecting and the flying drop-kicks were just grazing the opponent's chin.

But it didn't matter to me - I would always be a pro wrestling fan.

"I'm not taking care of you, feeding you, and paying the bills around here so you can become the next Killer Kowalski," Dad said.

"Tommy, big-time wrestling is about as socially acceptable as picking your nose. There is no place in society for those who like pro wrestling."

But like the cliché states, the times have changed.

And Dad, the recent success of pro wrestling slaps a Cobra-Clutch on your theory.

The popularity of big-time wrestling has spread in epidemic fashion. Wrestling matches which once played before sparse gatherings now draw sell-out crowds in major arenas across the country.

In New York's Madison Square Garden, wrestling atomic knee drops the Knicks and Rangers at the box office, as it has enjoyed 54 straight sell-outs of the 24,000 seat facility.

On cable television, wrestling has applied a figure-four leg lock on the competition.

Wrestling has three programs rated in the top 10 cable shows. Even MTV is broadcasting matches.

And while wrestling once appealed to the lower class only, a deluge of celebrities now think it's chic to be seen at matches. Andy Warhol, Dick Clark, Joe Piscopo, and even Geraldine Ferraro have become fans.

Some of these luminaries, such as Cyndi Lauper, the First Lady of pro wrestling, and Mr. T, have decided step into the ring and grapple with the best of the sport - and I use that word loosely - has to offer.

In recent weeks, wrestling personalities such as promoter Vince McMahon, Mr. T, and world wrestling champion Hulk Hogan have been guests on a variety of talk shows to plug pro wrestling's answer to the Super Bowl: Wrestlemania.

Sunday, a wrestling card from New York will be seen nationally via closed circuit TV. It will be shown in Cobo Hall in Detroit at 1 p.m.

The main event is a tag-team match featuring Hogan and Mr. T against the ruthless Rowdy Roddy Piper and the egotistical Paul "Mr. Wonderful" Orndorff.

While many will pack arenas nationwide to see this spectacle, there are scores of "closet" fans who will eagerly await the results.

"Closet" fans, come on, you know who you are. You are the supporters who don't publicly admit to liking it, but always watch it when no one is around. And when it's mentioned in conversation, you always seem to know as much as the avid fan does.

Now, for people who haven't been swept up by the recent wrestling craze, all of this must seem very peculiar.

If you haven't seen wrestling in several years, it has undergone a major overhaul.

First, the out of shape beer belly boys of the 70's are no longer doing combat in the squared-circle. McMahon realized that "thin is in" and now has a stable of wrestlers who have eye-popping physiques.

Hogan, who was Thunderlips

the wrestler in Rocky III, has a rippling pair of 24 inch pythons, which are biceps to you and me. And Orndorff has a body which could even make Arnold Swartznager a bit jealous.

Secondly, the new breed of wrestler has a well-built body and vocabulary. He not only has an IQ; he can also spell it. These articulate behemoths air their education on a talk show called Wrestling TNT.

Finally, and most importantly, wrestling has steered away from the age-old notion of selling itself as a legitimate sport.

McMahon's World Wrestling Federation uses showmanship as its foundation.

Matches now have the drama of General Hospital, the excitement of Raiders of the Lost Ark, and the slapstick comedy of the Marx brothers.

However, McMahon has left intact pro wrestling's number one attraction - the good vs. evil plot.

Wrestling is the ultimate morality play.

Good guys such as Hogan, Junk Yard Dog and Andre the Giant, personify all of which is fair about society. These men abide by the rules of the ring and are loved by the fans. They are the types who help old ladies across the street.

On the other hand, there are rulebreakers, the kind of vermon who swerve their car at granny just to watch her blood pressure soar. These men like Piper, Orndorff and the Iranian Sheik, use ruthless tactics to win. Biting, punching, and hair-pulling are their forte.

A fan who has had a bad day at the office can go to the matches and take out his frustration on the villains of the ring.

For those who think pro wrestling is ridiculous, I respect your opinion. However, I always get a big laugh at the amateur wrestlers who think it's more exciting than pro.

One amateur grappler told me that if it had the right publicity, it would be as popular as pro wrestling.

And if Custer would have had a few more arrows at Little Big Horn he would have had a draw, right?

I'm convinced that pro wrestling has caught on, because the last time I went home I saw someone I never expected to be watching it. Like father, like son I guess, huh Dad?

Can anyone beat the mighty Hoyas

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) - Jim Boeheim has some advice for anybody who dreams of beating Georgetown in the NCAA basketball Final Four: "Everyone comes here thinking they can win, but once the ball goes up, you drive the lane and see (Patrick) Ewing, you remember..."

Boeheim knows all about No. 1 Georgetown and No. 3 St. John's - combatants in Saturday's NCAA basketball semifinal. His Syracuse Orangemen lost twice to both Big East Conference rivals this season.

"Georgetown will be awfully tough," Boeheim, whose Orangemen also beat Georgetown this season, said yesterday. "The last two weren't even close. They've been here before and know what it's all about."

Villanova, another Big East team and the surprise of the tournament, plays No. 5 Memphis State, the Metro Conference champion, in the other semifinal at Rupp Arena.

St. John's, 31-3, the Big East regular-season champion, hasn't had a team in the Final Four since 1952 when the Redmen lost to Kansas in the final.

Georgetown, 34-2, has reached the Final Four three times in the past four years.

NO TEAM has beaten Georgetown, led by the intimidating 7-foot All-America Ewing, since Syracuse did, 65-63, on Jan. 28. That came two days after St. John's ended the Hoyas' 29-game winning streak 66-65.

Since the Syracuse loss, the Hoyas have put together a 16-game streak.

They routed St. John's 85-69 and 92-80 within 10 days.

The Hoyas, the Big East tournament champions, have shot 48 percent in posting NCAA playoff victories over Lehigh, Temple, Loyola of Chicago and Georgia Tech.

The Redmen made it here by beating Southern, Arkansas, Kentucky and North Carolina State.

"If it were a series between St. John's and Georgetown, Georgetown would win it," Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton said. "But it's one game. St. John's has a shot. They're capable of winning if they can handle the press, minimize their turnovers and play the defensive boards, stopping Georgetown's second shot."

Even with Ewing on the bench in foul trouble, the Hoyas have been impressive because his backup, 6-11 Ralph Dalton.

They proved it in the Big East tournament title game when Ewing played only 19 minutes.

Master Teacher

Searching for excellence in the classroom and out

by Amy Whiteford

Most students have come to dread the sight of IBM sheets and questionnaires that are passed out at the end of each semester that signal that it's time again to fill out teacher evaluations which departments use to determine promotions and tenure at the University.

Each January, students and faculty are afforded the opportunity to evaluate their professors in a different way. For the last four years, the Undergraduate Alumni Association, the Alumni Association Awards Committee and the Parents' Club have sponsored the Master Teacher Award, an honor given to the professor who is recognized as the top instructor of the year by his students and peers.

COURTESY/Office of Public Relations

It is not yet known who will be selected to receive the honor this year. Past winners include: Dr. Ray Tucker, chair of interpersonal and public communications, 1982; Dr. Steve Ludd, associate professor of public law in political science, 1983; and Dr. Peter Hutchinson, associate dean of the college of business administration, 1984.

At this time, the selection committee is busy narrowing down the list with this year's recipient to be announced on Monday, April 15.

But what does it take to be a Master Teacher?

"Everyone can nominate their favorite professor," says Lisa Van Vleet, vice president of the UAA and chair of this year's selection committee.

tee. "The faculty can also nominate."

According to Van Vleet, nomination forms are placed in student mailboxes in January. Those nominating professors are asked to do so based on knowledge of the subject matter and on ability to stimulate and encourage students' intellect and critical thinking.

Other matters taken into consideration are the instructor's willingness to assist students in solving individual and group problems, availability for out-of-class counseling, and presentation of the material in an organized and effective manner.

The selection committee, comprised of six UAA members and two representatives of the Alumni Association Awards Committee, reviews these forms and selects a portion who will be mailed a questionnaire. The selected instructors are asked to complete the questionnaire based on their philosophy of teaching.

The committee then selects between 12 and 15 semi-finalists who will be observed in their classrooms periodically to see how the teacher interacts with the students. After the classroom observation, the semi-finalists are narrowed down to usually five finalists.

The final stage of the process consists of an interview in front of the selection committee.

"In the interview," Van Vleet says, "we try not to ask really difficult questions. It's different from the questionnaire because there, they get a chance to re-think it. This is on the spot."

FRIDAY/Liz Allen

Finalist in the selection process last year, Dr. John Piper, associate professor of HPER, found the interview

COURTESY/Office of Public Relations

Peter Hutchinson

to be the most enjoyable part. "I sensed a chemistry that was supportive. They wanted to learn what made your classes unique, what made them tick . . . It wasn't like they were grilling me."

Piper says his friend, Dr. Ray Tucker, gave him some valuable advice before entering the interview. "He said, 'Don't be afraid to go in there and tell them you're changing students' lives.'"

Tucker undoubtedly followed his own advice in 1982 when he became the first recipient of Bowling Green's Master Teacher Award. He could almost be called a veteran in the process, as he also received the honor as a professor at the University of Western Illinois.

"You never really feel as though it will all be narrowed down to you," said Tucker. "You never think you're that good . . . No matter what you can do, there's always someone who can do it better."

In 1983, no one did it better than Dr. Steve Ludd. Ludd stresses the need for a Master Teacher Award when he says, "It's an excellent methodology by which to establish credibility in the classroom."

He added that the interview process was most rewarding for him, because it gave him an opportunity to discuss issues that he rarely has time to talk about with his colleagues.

That opportunity to discuss teaching methodologies was welcomed by Dr. Peter Hutchinson, who says being nominated for the award is not only an honor, but a challenge. The 1984 recipient says "It causes you to think about what you're trying to accomplish. It makes you face and think about your goals."

After this year's recipient is named, the selection committee will review comments on the process submitted by the nominated professors. Assistant Director of Alumni Affairs Wendy Luther says, "Each year we look at various details and review how we can improve the process. We don't exactly have it carved in stone."

The selection process may change over the years, but the breed of professor will not. Each winner will have the satisfaction of knowing that he has been elevated to a level above his peers for a brief tenure as the most exciting teacher on campus.

Yet, the opinion of Bowling Green's veteran winners is that the most beneficial part of receiving the Master Teacher Award is knowing they've somehow influenced the education and the lives of their students.

Hutchinson says, "I guess the biggest thrill for me is that my name is going to be in the Alumni Center on a plaque. That indicates I've had some kind of impact on the quality of education here at Bowling Green State University."

Acceptance of the award is the visual sign of excellence displayed by an instructor in and out of the classroom. It certainly beats milling through IBM sheets.

WISDOM BEGINS

by Tracey Batdorf

Besides dance films, rarely is the sound track of the film in sync with the characters and action. "Vision Quest" proves to be just such a rarity.

The sound track sports two singles from Madonna, "Gambler," a danceable, upbeat tune, and "Crazy For You," appearing in Billboard's top ten and receiving much airplay. Although most of Madonna's past hits have displayed solid strength and her infamous "I don't need you" attitude, she swings to pleading helplessly in this single. Surprisingly, it's a pleasant shift, as her voice seems suited for ballads.

"Change" by John Waite is from the "Ignition" album. If Waite hadn't produced the "No Brakes" LP with the two hits "Missing You" and "Tears," "Change" would probably have been his comeback song, as it is receiving more airplay now than when it was first played in 1982.

Although Journey's commercialized predictable sound is still evident in "Only the Young," the words correlate to the character Loudon (Matthew Modine), a jock who's individual right to "go for it" is shared with other athletes' self-proving ambitions and goals. Only the young can say They're free to fly away Sharing the same desire Burning like wild fire

The Style Council's (you may remember their 50-ish sounding tune, "My Ever Changing Moods" last year) "Shout to the Top" provides a jazzy change. It's a lively, flashy song and adds a different dimension to the album just when you think it's gotten into a rut.

An old hit from Foreigner, "Hot Blooded," also appears on "Vision Quest."

And as if Don Henley needs any more help in exposure, "She's on the Zoom," is a "Grease"-like 50's bebop song. Appropriately enough, Belinda Carlisle and Jane Wiedlin (of Go-Go's fame) sing background vocals. This song coincides with the character of Carla's (Lisa Forintino) personality.

"Went to home economics like all the other girls, studied chicken-ala-king and peanut butter swirls. But she knew in her heart there had to be something better-somewhere."

Dio provides the heavy metal release on the album saying "You're a dreamer, you want it all," with "Hungry for Heaven."

Another old single, "I'll Fall in Love Again," by the Red Rocker, Sammy Hagar, is included.

Reflecting most what the movie stands for is "Lunatic Fringe," by Red Rider. The song, played during Loudon's workouts (to the extreme of fainting at one point), captures the fanatical, giddily foolish determination to satisfy a personal goal, the theme behind "Vision Quest."

Whatever happened to "The Best?"

by Suzan Cline

Philosophers say that perfection is a stagnant state of being, from which changing would mean becoming flawed or displaying some shortcoming. In other words, changing after being the best is going downhill.

But musicians know that change is part of the natural evolution of creativity. Where do you go after you've been the best? You simply go on to the next band, according to former lead singer of The Best, Steve Athanas.

If you're making this your fifth year at B.G.S.U., you probably remember weekend evenings spent at Howard's, listening to the Best, a five piece band formed in 1980 and a local favorite. Specializing in the latest music at that time, they performed staples of Elvis Costello, The Clash, XTC and Motown.

When big name groups like Credence Clearwater Revival and more recently, The Who, broke up, we had albums to keep us company. But keeping track of local favorites that "disband" is pretty difficult.

Athanas views change and fluctuation as a natural part of a musician's life. He said bands are frequently formed and dismantled with new combinations of musicians constantly appearing, hoping to create that something special on stage.

"When we (The Best) started, we didn't know we were the best. It was sort of a cocky thing - I wanted to catch people's attention. For the kind of music we did in this area, I think we were the best," Athanas said.

Playing Ann Arbor, Ottawa and Cincinnati bars, The Best changed members twice and then split up in 1982. "The Best was a lot of fun - even though we fought with each other - we clicked on stage," Athanas recalled.

After joining an intermediate band called PRZ, Athanas formed the Wet Shavers, retaining his brother on guitar and a drummer from The Best. The Wet Shavers will celebrate their third year together in April and, moving toward funk, are musically an extension of The Best.

"We do stuff that's easily accessible to both the ears and the feet," Athanas said. Noting a change in audience tastes, he said the Costello and Clash songs don't get the enthusiastic response anymore that renditions of Prince and The Time receive.

An instrument of energy on stage, Athanas, like any good medium, is relaxed and happy when performing. The Toledo native joined his first band during the eighth grade. "Music, that's all I know," he laughed. So, whatever happened to The Best? Athanas thinks you'll be calling the Wet Shavers the best real soon.

Tina Kneisley: Big wheel packed in a small frame

by Connie Perkins

She skated on to the roller rink floor, less than a year old, a pretzel in each hand, and a rollerskate rigged to fit each tiny foot. Tina Kneisley, at 10 months old, was learning to skate just about the same time she was learning to walk.

"My mom used to take me to the rink because I was such a monster," said Kneisley. "She thought I would wear myself out at the rink and wouldn't be such a terror later. They (her mom and other people at the rink) gave me pretzels to hold, instead of their hands, to help me keep my balance," she added.

Though Kneisley, a senior broadcast journalism major at the University, began skating for her mother's peace of mind, in the past 22 years, Kneisley's many freestyle and pair championships have proven her skating is much more than a way to release energy. Kneisley is the national and world ladies freestyle rollerskating champion, and in the past has won titles as a pairs skater in these categories as well.

"I used to be able to play to the audience and make them more a part of my performance. Now I'm just trying to get to enjoying it myself but my heart isn't in it as much."

—Tina Kneisley

The first time she wore skates was as an infant, but it wasn't until she was about four-and-one-half-years old that Kneisley started taking lessons to sharpen her skating skills. At the age of five, she began competing against other skaters and by the time she was six, Kneisley was competing with her partner, Paul Price, at the Brook Park skating club in Cleveland.

Kneisley competed in Cleveland, yet her hometown is Marion, Ohio. Every weekend she and her mother would travel to Cleveland, stay with Price and his family, and she and Price would practice for about five hours on Saturday and Sunday under coach Lou Panunzio. Kneisley and Price skated out of the Brook Park club for about four years.

Kneisley left the Cleveland skating club after having a slight disagreement with her partner, shortly after he had an operation on his wrist. The two went their own separate ways for a few years, each trying different partners, Kneisley also trying new cities and coaches.

Fortunately the pair realized it just wasn't right when they were skating apart, so they rejoined forces under world pairs champion coach Tim Able at a club in Brighton, Michigan.

The young pair placed third in the National Rollerskating Championship and then surprised everyone with a second place finish at this World Rollerskating Championship in Portugal.

The following year, the pair won the national competition and went on to place second in the world contest in Germany. In 1980, however, Kneisley and Price grabbed their long awaited world victory in Bogota, Colombia. For Kneisley this was also the first year in which she was able to compete as a senior, instead of a junior, freestyle skater. She placed third in the world competition.

"Skating in Bogota was difficult because of the high altitude. We had to train specifically for that," said Kneisley. "Before our performance, we just kept thinking . . . just make it Kneisley continued to excel. In 1983 and 1984 she once again won the freestyle event at nationals and worlds, despite her absence from the pairs competition.

"After winning everything and having so much pressure on me, I realized that it's not the winning, but the competing and enjoying that's so important," said Kneisley.

In the last year or so, there has been a trend toward more difficult pieces of content in performances, according to Kneisley, and the triple jumps are probably the most difficult. Kneisley is one of the only ladies who can do a "clean" triple — three complete revolutions.

"Once you go from double to triple jumps there's an extra strain on you. That took part of the audience inclusion out of the performance for me," ternship in the public relations department of the Red Cross in Toledo and plans to arrange further internships in that field to gain additional experience. Aside from wanting to pursue a career, Kneisley also wants to teach skating and do some coaching.

While still attending classes and working at her internship, Kneisley also squeezes in about 10 hours a week of practice at Ohio Skate, a roller rink in Maumee, Ohio. Peggy Yarnbor is her coach there and has been since 1982. Kneisley said she chose BGSU because her coach was so close and because she heard what a good journalism program the University had.

Though skating has occupied much of the 4-foot-11-inch, 105 pound brunette's 22 years, Kneisley said she is ready to move on. "There are more through the program. Don't fall and don't faint were all we could think," she added.

Kneisley considers 1981 her best year as she not only won the freestyle and pairs competition at nationals, but also skated away with first place in freestyle and pairs at the worlds in New Zealand. "That was definitely the greatest year of my career," remembers Kneisley.

Kneisley and Price also won the world pairs competition in 1982 in West Germany. After that victory, Price left the more than dynamic duo to begin a career as a professional and now teaches skating in Fort Lauderdale.

said Kneisley. "I used to be able to play to the audience and make them more a part of my performance. Now I'm just trying to get to enjoying it myself but my heart isn't in it as much," she added.

Though Kneisley is concentrating more on her performances, she does find a minute or two occasionally to think about school, work and a career. "I want to have a career in public relations even though it's not my major," said Kneisley. "I couldn't quite meet the minimum grade point requirement of PR (3.0), because I was out of town so much and missed so many classes."

Right now, Kneisley has an in-important things to me now, aside from skating," said Kneisley. "If I place in the top three at nationals in August, I'll go to the worlds in Italy in September. After the worlds, I'm looking forward to a quiet retirement," she added.

Kneisley no longer needs pretzels to keep her on her skates. With plans to graduate in May, 1986, what she needs now, as do all students planning to graduate, is passing grades, enough money to pay for next year's expenses, and a diploma that will give her the chance to leave her skates in the closet — even if only temporarily.

'Best of BG' named by readers

by Larry Harris

The polls are closed, the ballots are counted and the readers of Friday magazine have made their decision on who, what and where is the best in Bowling Green.

As part of a survey to determine readership opinion, Friday advertised the poll March 21, 22 and 26 in the News and in Friday. Over 300 ballots were received by the deadline on Wednesday, March 27.

Of course, this survey is not statistically representative of the University population as those polled were not randomly selected. But for many, it was an opportunity to express thanks and give a pat on the back to the "best."

Best Local Music Group

A special mention to those with a sense of humor who made the monotonous task of tallying these results a little more interesting. Here are a few responses:

The Best Professor contest received entries for Dr. Seuss, Mr. Wizard, Professor Plum (of "Clue" game) and the "professor on Gilligan's Island."

Best Class entries included: "class of '86" and "the middle class."

The cult favorite for Best Rock Group was "sedimentary."

Best Sub nominees included "second-string quarterback" and "U-boats."

"Test pattern at 4 a.m." was cited for the Best on T.V.

Best Restaurant received one vote for "Alice's" (before our time), and Best Party nominations included Republican, Whig and "Reverend Jed on the Oval."

And to all you geniuses who attempted to stack the deck, we at Friday may be dumb enough to run such a contest, but even we can pick out 50 neatly-stacked ballots with identical responses, handwriting and ink color.

As for this editor's choice on the Best of BG... you're holding it in your hand.

The Best

Book of Bests pinpoints the creme de la creme

by Leane Costello

COURTESY/Andrews, McMeel & Parker Inc.

BEST-(best), adj. 1. above all others, as in worth or ability; most excellent, most fit, most desirable... -Webster's New World Dictionary

In these times when personal drives seem to have usurped the larger societal concerns and the term "yuppies" has replaced preppies as the era's new catchword, think of The Book of Bests (Andrews, McMeel & Parker Inc.) by the editors of The Best Report.

It stands alone as an extravagant and comprehensive guide for those who diligently seek the BEST the world has to offer, an entertaining yet expertly-written manual for those consumer-oriented Americans who desire to experience and acquire only quality.

A true "success-story" lifestyle goes far beyond the fancy car and designer clothes. It lavishly embraces all facets of living from dining out to cultural recreation to buying furniture to vacationing.

Some avidly watch such programs as "Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous" or devour the pages of high society magazines for real life examples to model themselves after. But the wisest turn to this neatly-detailed work in their quest to purge the mediocrity from their lives.

Stanley Marcus, who wrote the preface to this classy compilation, says the book "attempts to systematically and unequivocally qualify the best in a wide range of categories from art museums to wine events, from sterling silver to hot dogs and from classic wallpapers to jigsaw puzzles." And, as is most always the case, the best of anything is usually the most expensive of anything.

The Book of Bests not only shows the reader how to judge and get the most out of the best, it provides the factual information needed to contact those who sell the best merchandise or provide the quality services. It also gives the background behind the bests, highlighting how they came to their esteemed positions.

The reader will find the unique bests as well as the useful bests. The book's editors say their publication is an investment in excellence - they've researched the globe to find beaches unequalled in beauty, the finest restaurants and resorts, unparalleled shops in the most interesting locales with the most exquisite goods, the choicest wines, beers and coffees, the most luscious chocolates, the best museums, symphonic orchestras and art galleries, top-of-the-line sports and luxury automobiles and much, much more.

The Book of Bests does not promote a hedonistic lifestyle, although self-proclaimed hedonists are probably its number-one purchasers. It's simply an exploration of the world of quality, a reference for those who stoically strive for near-perfection in every area of their lives - for that's what the best truly is.

Pumping iron with Mr. BGSU

Don't kick sand in this man's face

by Laura S. Myers

Everyone is familiar with the old "95-pound weakling" story - a skinny wimp laying on the beach gets sand kicked in his face by a heartless brute. This incident causes the wimp to decide that muscles are the answer to his troubles.

Although the story is trite, it illustrates a universal truth - little people are intimidated by big people. According to Randy Wilson, the reigning Mr. BGSU, the sand-in-the-face story characterizes the reasons he became interested in body building.

"In high school, I was always pretty skinny," Wilson said. "I felt intimidated just going into bars." So, in order to give his confidence a boost, he began working out about three years ago.

Wilson, a junior construction technology major, began his body building campaign by reading a number of books written by professional body builders. He emphasized the need for knowledge of the subject. "The more you know, the easier it is," he said. "I try to make a science of it - you can't just go in and start banging plates around."

that he takes care not to set his goals too high, that they must be challenging, but attainable. "Otherwise, I get too discouraged."

To keep pace with his goals, Wilson works out in the Eppler gym six days a week for about two hours at a time. "It's a lot of work," he said, "and you have to stick with it to make it pay off."

But the dedication isn't just apparent in the weight room. To keep both his body weight and energy at high levels, Wilson takes in a whopping 4,000 calories a day. "I just don't stop eating," he joked.

But while he's in training for a contest, he says he cuts his calorie intake to about 2,300 a day. During this time he eats mostly fresh fruits and vegetables, which are rich in carbohydrates.

Wilson said that during training about 65 percent of his diet is carbohydrates and about 35 percent is protein. "I try not to eat any fat, but that's impossible. Almost everything has a little fat in it," he said.

The reason for cutting down so drastically on fat intake is to get body fat below 5 percent so the muscles are more visible. "It's like when a hilly terrain is covered with snow," Wilson explained. "While the snow is there the hills are blurred. But when the snow melts, the hills are more pronounced, you can see them again." And so it is with body fat.

While Wilson puts a good amount of time into his body building, it is not the center of his life. At 29 years old, not only is Wilson determined to finish school, he is also a husband and father. With a wife and a daughter at home, and a 3.47 grade point average, Wilson hardly fits the stereotypical image of the "dumb jock".

Wilson simply looks at his body building as a matter of self-confidence. "The bigger I got, the more confident I felt in every situation, physical or not," he said.

Wilson said he does not plan to make a career out of body building, he looks at it as more of a hobby. When he graduates, he plans to work in the construction field and move away from Bowling Green. "I want to go where it never snows - maybe California or Hawaii," he said.

With his dedication to perfection and his ambition to be the best at what he does, Randy Wilson should certainly meet his goals.

Laura S. Myers is a junior public relations major from Findlay, Ohio.

Although Wilson's original goal was simply to get out of the "skinny" classification, he's gone far beyond that realm. "I can't do anything in moderation," he said.

Apparently not. In just three short years Wilson has gone from being the 95-pound weakling to being a 215-pound picture of success. And he's not stopping there. He says his goal is to put about 35 more pounds on his 5'10" frame, boosting his weight up to 250.

Wilson says he sets goals for everything he does. "I have to set a goal to make sure I do it," he said, adding Shinew and her friends will enjoy three free days with a videocassette recorder and four films of her choice provided by Video Spectrum.

The contest drew over 40 entries from students and faculty. And for the curious readers that missed the awards, here are the winners that Shinew and Hergert chose:

- Best Actor: F. Murray Abraham, "Amadeus"
- Best Actress: Sally Field, "Places in the Heart"
- Best Movie: "Amadeus"
- Best Original Song: "I Just Called to Say I Love You" - Stevie Wonder
- Best Supporting Actor: Haing Ngor, "The Killing Fields"
- Best Supporting Actress: Peggy Ashcroft, "A Passage to India"

FRIDAY/Tim Dehnhoff

Main St. stages monster live music event

by Jeff Keane

Their names sound like fragments of conversations, dreamt up by people obviously under the influence of "something."

The Immediate, Earful of Dirt, Nobody's Perfekt, The Drummers, The Pudgy Little Guys, and IQ6 are their names, and this Wednesday, April 3, at Main St. all six will be turning on Bowling Green to music as diverse as those names suggest.

"This is probably the musical extravaganza of the century," proclaimed "Rabbit," drummer of the headlining band IQ6.

Whether or not these six bands will provide a "musical extravaganza" is a point of speculation; perhaps "musical conglomeration" would be more appropriate. Little is known about any of the bands, and all but IQ6 are making their live debuts. The Immediate, a local band who are "excited about the chance to open the show for IQ6" will lead off the gala event at 9:00 p.m.

According to Mike Brosco (a.k.a. Bosco), guitarist for IQ6, Wednesday night's show will be a one-of-a-kind event.

"Basically, we just wanted to get a bunch of different bands together for one night." Perhaps stating the obvious, he added, "You can't go to a bar and see this mixture of bands anywhere."

Bosco is especially excited about the American debut of The Pudgy Little Guys. Much secrecy surrounds the band, and Bosco said they are relatively unknown outside their native Tibet.

"They're a little group of people from Tibet... an 'all Tibetan band,'" he said.

But trying to categorize the sound of any of these bands is difficult, if not useless. "Junior," bass player for IQ6 had this to say about their band: "We've been compared to a religious experience. We write songs about things that make us mad. Personally, we're just a bunch of swell guys."

For those who have not yet been initiated to IQ6's music, Junior said their influences have been "Kiss, Marvin Gaye and heavy metal god Ronnie James Dio." Vocalist Keith Snyder believes professional wres-ting is the key to IQ6's unique sound. Is Bowling Green ready for something like this? "Heck yeah," said Bosco.

Nancy Donahue, drummer for the all-female group Nobody's Perfekt said, "Our music is not perfect, just like all women in society cannot attain the media concept of a perfect woman."

Doug Kerr and Brett Pilarski of Earful of Dirt described their music as "esoteric, eclectic, and funky - if that makes any sense." They added that to appreciate Earful of Dirt is to appreciate one of the finer things in life.

And if you're still in the dark about what to expect Wednesday night, then grab a friend or two, keep an open mind and immerse yourself in what could only be called an experience.

Jeff Keane is a junior news editorial major from Lancaster, Ohio.
