Reagan confirms diplomatic relations

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan yesterday confirmed that he has been involved in 18 months of secret diplomacy with Iran and authorized the transfer of "small amounts" of weapons to that country. But he insisted he was not trying to ransom American hostages in Lebanon or tilt toward Iran in its war with Iraq.

After telling reporters he was being forced to speak out by widespread misinformation about his dealings with Iran, Reagan acknowledged he sent his former national security adviser, Robert McFarlane, on a secret, four-day mission to Iran last spring "to raise the diplomatic level of contacts" with Iranian officials.

"Since then," Reagan said in his hastily arranged national broadcast address, "the dialogue has continued, and step-by-step progress continues to be made."

"Due to the publicity of the past week, the entire initiative is very much at risk today," the president told the nation in an address prepared for broadcast from the Oval Office.

Reagan said it was "utterly false" that the weapons shipments to Iran, at a time when the United States had imposed an embargo on such deliveries, were intended to ransom the Americans held hostage in Lebanon. Nor, he said, had the United States "undercut its allies and secretly violated American policy against trafficking with terrorists."

"THE UNITED STATES has not made concessions to those who hold our people captive in Lebanon - and we will not," Reagan insisted.

In authorizing the transfer of what he called "small amounts of defensive weapons and spare parts for defensive systems to Iran," Reagan said he was trying "to convince Tehran that our negotiators were acting with my authority."

And he said he wanted "to send a signal that the United States was prepared to replace the animosity between us with a new relationship."

The president went on to say that "the most significant step which Iran could take . . . would be to use its influence in Lebanon to secure the release of all hostages held there."

"Some progress has already been made," Reagan said. "Since U.S. government contact began with Iran, there has been no evidence of Iranian government complicity in acts of terrorism against the United States."

Reagan said there were four reasons for the secret diplomacy: renewal of a relationship with Iran, which has conducted an ardently anti-American policy since the overthrow of the U.S.-backed Shah of Iran in January 1979; bringing "an honorable end" to the 6-year-old Iran-Iraqi war; elimination of state-sponsored terrorism and subversion, and "to effect the safe return of all hostages."

Mr. Rogers may speak at spring commencement

by Susan McDonald
staff reporter

A television personality most University students remember as the man who always wanted to be their neighbor has been recommended for an honorary doctorate degree, but it is not known whether he will speak at the spring commencement.

Fred Rogers, host of PBS' Mr. Rogers' Neighborhood, was recommended to receive the honorary doctorate in humanities by faculty members and the Board of Trustees for his commitment to humanity and his role in educating children for the past 25 years, Dwight Burlingame, vice president of University relations, said.

Burlingame said that he expects to hear Rogers' decision to speak at the commencement exercises within three weeks.

"Tentatively we anticipate he will be here to receive the degree at spring commencement," he said.

Burlingame said that unlike most commencement speakers, Rogers does not charge a fee.

"His basic philosophy is he wants to share ideas with students, so he has a policy for not charging for commencement speaking," he said.

BURLINGAME SAID most speakers would charge from $2,500 to $25,000.

To measure student response to Rogers as well as other possible commencement speakers, Burlingame enlisted the help of Barry Wurgler, Undergraduate Student Government student welfare coordinator, who conducted a survey of 155 juniors and seniors within the past two weeks with Kenneth Crocker, assistant professor of marketing.

The survey asked students to choose their favorite category or type of commencement speakers. These categories included foreign dignitary, journalist, entertainer, noted educator, sports figure, politician, University professor and a famous University alumnus.

The first choice for a commencement speaker was an entertainer or television personality, which received a 75.5 percent response. A famous University alumnus was the second choice with a percentage of 65.2 percent and the third choice was for a noted educator, which received a 61.9 percent response.

The survey also asked students to respond to the past six spring commencement speakers.

Stars come down to Earth

by Michelle Fisher
staff reporter

When you walk in this room you notice something unusual. The room is round with a domed ceiling. A continuous screen stretches above you, behind you and surrounds both sides of you - much like the universe.

No, it's not something out of Star Trek; it's the University's planetarium, located in the Physical Sciences building.

For some people, their link to the stars begins with an understanding of the universe. The planetarium offers an opportunity to view the stars (or at least images of them) and learn about various aspects of the universe.

To reveal the images of the nighttime sky, a star projector is used to project parts of the universe that cannot be seen with the unaided eye, such as the planets and stars, Dale Smith, director of the planetarium, said. It can also show how the sky looks at any hour of the day, at any time.

"When you see this artificial sky that we can produce with special lenses, we hope you will be inspired enough on clear nights to go and see the beauty of the real sky," Smith said.

THE PROGRAM begins when the lights go out, and you lean back in your chair to capture a vision of the nighttime sky engulfing you.

Smith begins the show with a star talk that shows the current evening sky and points out the major constellations and famous stars.

Planetarium director Dale Smith with some of the equipment which makes the planetarium's visual effects possible.

The second part of the program includes "The Universe of Dr. Einstein," highlighting physicist Albert Einstein's discoveries that changed the scientific world.

Programs such as this one can be seen on Tuesdays and Fridays at 8 p.m. and Sundays at 7:30 p.m.

The winter program beginning after Dec. 12 is titled "It's About Time."

"The first and foremost goal is the link between the universe and the community," Smith said. "We want to bring the excitement of science to the community."

Smith said the planetarium is part of a cultural triad, along with the University's music and theater productions.

Last year, nearly 8,000 people from the surrounding schools, University and community took advantage of the opportunities the planetarium offers, Smith said.

Prof writes book on hunger

by Greg Connel
staff reporter

A newly-published book by a University history professor may create some controversy about aid programs for nations suffering peacetime famine, as it sheds new light on the causes of and cures for world hunger.

Ronald Seavoy, author of Famine in Peasant Societies, said outside attempts to help the hungry can avert the present starvation of the people, but they do not cure the problem.

He said the reason people starve in countries such as Indonesia and India is not from infertile land or lack of agricultural knowledge, but from their social systems and attitude toward labor.

"They live with the subsistence compromise, that is, they grow just enough food to last until the next harvest, on the assumption that every crop year will be normal. When there is a poor crop year, they experience hunger, and when there are consecutive poor crop years they often experience famine conditions," Seavoy said.

In planting minimum amounts of crops to last until the next harvest, they seek to minimize labor inputs, he said. Labor has a low social value, so children perform much of the labor. In India, the landowners transfer the labor to the hereditary landless laborers at the bottom of the Indian caste system, Seavoy said.

IN ORDER for the peasants to raise their standard of living, they must convert to a commercial society, and begin to accept the use and value of money, he said.

"Local governments could make this happen by greatly increasing money-taxes, (taxes paid with currency as opposed to other mediums such as food)," he said. "But the post-colonial governments that run these nations are not strong enough to assert this type of policy."

Higher taxes would force the peasants to either devote more

Celeste picks chief of staff

COLUMBUS (AP) - Gov. Richard Celeste appointed a private management consultant yesterday as his new chief of staff, succeeding Raymond Sawyer, who plans to return to private law practice in Cleveland.

Celeste said at a news conference with his new top aide, Carol Lukensmeyer of Cleveland, that she will join Alex Shumate, his legal counsel, to provide an outstanding management team "and the backbone of the office."

Lukensmeyer, 41, has served as president of Lukensmeyer Associates Inc. in Cleveland and as a management consultant in both the public and private sector.

The Iowa native and Case Western Reserve

University graduate is a consultant for a coal development venture with Exxon Corp. in Colombia.

Celeste said Lukensmeyer also has served his administration periodically as a consultant since late 1982 when he was organizing the office for his first term.

"It is a bonus that her career has included work with governments, small business and large industry," Celeste said.

Shumate will take on additional administrative responsibilities in a manner that will free the governor from some of the day-to-day duties of the office, Celeste said.

Bloodmobile breaks record

by Linda Hoy
staff reporter

This week's bloodmobile has broken the northwest Ohio record for most pints of blood collected in a six-hour period.

On Tuesday, 317 pints of blood were collected, breaking the old record of 291 pints set by a Nov. 8, 1984, University bloodmobile.

For the first time, a publicity campaign was used to recruit donors for this week's bloodmobile.

Judy Goris, volunteer blood chairman for the Bowling Green Red Cross, said the campaign had a big impact on this week's donor turnout.

"I know the publicity helped," Goris said. "It (the turnout) has never been this good before."

Goris compared last April's visit, a five-day bloodmobile that had a first-day turnout of 71 donors, with this week's first-day turnout of 144 donors Monday.

Yesterday, the 27 beds used in the bloodmobile were occupied almost all day long with donors, Goris said.

As of Wednesday, the bloodmobile had collected 706 pints of blood and deferred 50 prospective donors.

Basking in infamy

Is it art?
Or is it just a bunch of rods sticking up out of a marble block?
It's safe to say that everyone has his or her own opinion of the Harry Bertoia wind chime sculpture, ranging from a cultural addition to the center of campus to a waste of University time, space and money.
It's even been argued that the recent vandalism of the structure was intended as a statement on the sculpture's supposed worthlessness as art.
Well, that's stretching it more than a bit.
We suspect that the persons who did their midnight rearranging of the chimes had more beers under their belts than they did art on their minds.
Another possible reason for the chimes' destruction is that the frail metal stalks were easier to bend than, say, the heavy steel plates of Don Drumm's "Bridge Over Troubled Waters," over by the Commons. Or maybe the vandals didn't have a can of spray paint handy.
What's interesting is that someone decided they wanted to be irresponsible, disrespectful or just plain stupid for a few minutes one night, and it's sparked a week-long flood of conflicting opinion and controversy, all because someone wanted to be irresponsible in their treatment of an unorthodox piece of sculpture instead of the side of a campus building.
Forget for the moment the question of whether the Bertoia sculpture is art. It was senselessly destroyed, and that's enough. Bending the chimes into the shape of a metal fountain was no different from spray painting the side of a campus building. Architecture is art, too.
No doubt the vandals are congratulating themselves for their deed, a glow of self-satisfaction growing with each column, letter or cartoon appearing in the pages of The News, or every comment passed around the campus.
They might as well have taken a can of spray paint to the side of a building. It would have taken just as much imagination and creativity.

A touch of 'the force'

OUT OF WHACK

by Craig Hergert

After all these years of living up to his reputation as the Great Communicator, Ronald Reagan has finally slipped up.
Ever since, in March of 1983, he gave his Strategic Defense Initiative the green light, he has been chiding the media for referring to it as "Star Wars." He's got it all wrong. He ought to be delighted.
Of all people, the president must realize that he has made a basic mistake in communications. He has chosen the confusing, highbrow expression rather than the one that would play better to the people.
When you hear "Strategic Defense Initiative," what do you think of? No doubt something like a khaki-colored chessboard in some old room at the Pentagon with little markers being moved by men who don't know how to dress well. Boring!
But when I say "Star Wars," what's your response? You get excited, right? You picture Obi-wan Kenobi dueling Darth Vader, Luke Skywalker and Han Solo blasting those funny-shaped planes (what are those things on the sides anyway, storm windows?), and the Death Star blowing up entire planets.
Now that's more like it! If we taxpayers are going to be shelling out $80 billion over the next eight years for research and somewhere in the neighborhood of several hundred billion for full deployment (some neighborhood!), I suggest that we have the right to be, if not benefited, then, at the very least, entertained.

Besides, nobody pays attention to a project called "Strategic Defense Initiative." Last spring I gave a questionnaire to seventy-five composition students who had just finished writing their proficiency exam on the threat of nuclear war. Sixty-five of them, a whopping 87 percent, either confessed that they didn't know what SDI was or gave answers that were clearly incorrect. Evidently the term "Strategic Defense Initiative" didn't impress itself on their memories.
But "Star Wars," with the president's hearty approval, would.
All I'm asking from Ronald Reagan is some consistency. The man did come from Hollywood, after all.
In addition, many of his past communication coups made effective use of his Hollywood roots. Who will ever forget the time he declared, "Go ahead, make my day" to congressmen who were considering passing a bill he had said he would veto.
Given this track record, it's downright foolish for President Reagan to embrace the stodgy term "Strategic Defense Initiative." It's time he jilted it and began romancing the other name.

The about-face won't, I think, cause a credibility problem. He can always claim that he's been calling the project "Star Wars" all along and that it's been the press that has been stubbornly referring to it as SDI.
Who among us would care? We like the guy too much. I mean, who are you more inclined to side with: the president of your country or Sam Donaldson?
Now that President Reagan has the wheels in motion for this project, he naturally wants to keep them moving, and that means acquiring the support of the public. Using the name of one of the most popular films of all time would help him do so.
And he could employ more than the first film, or the first trilogy for that matter. The president might recall that George Lucas originally intended to make three "Star Wars" trilogies. After finishing the first one, he squelched this plan and turned his attention to projects that didn't involve intergalactic settings or little green characters who say things like "Hungry I am."
But lately Lucas hasn't been faring so well. I'm not sure President Reagan had the misfortune of seeing "Howard the Duck," (does he have a Bad Films Adviser?) but I did. Whooh-eee! If George is tired of producing bombs like that one, maybe he could return to "Star Wars." Only this time, he could film one for The Gipper.
I can't think of a man who would be more able to convince him than the president. Talk about charm! I wouldn't be surprised if he could get me to do something contrary to every fiber of my being - like cleaning my desk.

What I'm modestly proposing is that George Lucas, the man who teamed up with Spielberg for "Raiders of the Lost Ark" and Michael Jackson for "Captain EO," give us one more dream match-up. I'm proposing that he team up with his president.
While Ron's researchers are busy putting the high-tech nuts to the high-tech bolts, Lucas can be writing scripts, designing sets and coming up with silly names for all the people involved. And think of the artistic challenge! Even Mr. Lucas' celebrated imagination will be hard put to invent something stranger than "Caspar Weinberger."
All the while the project is being tested, Lucas can roll the cameras.
This way, if those know-nothing critics of SDI, I mean of Star Wars, such as, er, Carl Sagan should somehow turn out to be right and the system turns out not to work any better than anything else technology has come up with, at least we'll have some neat films to watch.
I'll even offer a title for the first one: "The Deficit Strikes Back."
Hergert, a teaching fellow in the English department, is a columnist for The News.

Peddling her wares

by Scott Munn

Dana softened the dorm lighting until there was just enough to tease the brushed-aluminum cooking pan which complimented the velvet drop-cloth in the center of the room. Crowding the pan was an assortment of kitchen utensils, a stack of semi-fine china and a gaggle of impressive-looking goblets.
"These," Dana purred professionally, "will make a delightful addition to your post-graduate residence."
She was addressing a hushed assemblage of students who mulled over and examined the word "delightful." The dorm room they each wore like a badly-tailored suit hardly boasted such an adjective. The "residence" they were presently enjoying spared not an inch of extra breathing space.
As they dreamed of the spoils of their diploma, Dana brought them down to earth, peering at a pert young sophomore named Sue.
"Where do you plan on living after school?"
The sophomore blushed. "Dave and I hope to - um - marry, and share an apartment up in Toledo."
There were coy smiles around the room. Dave was her steady.
Dana understood such things. "Of course. And do you plan on moving into an empty apartment? No, I'm sure you don't. Perhaps your parents will be kind enough to lend a helping pan, the odd spoon, a few dishes. Not that I'm knocking Mom and Dad - certainly not. But don't you think it's time you began to plan your future, your way, with a little help from a friend?"
Glowing reassurance, Dana prodded a young, neatly dressed junior. "What's your name?"
"David." More coy smiles.
"Oh, so you're the lucky one. Well, Dave, the fact that you're here shows your responsibility to your future. David - if I may call you David? - what if your plans don't work out?"
He gave her a startled look which she quickly countered with a disclaimer. "Of course they will. But life is full of surprises, you know. This pretty gal may very well leave you for a nice young man she has in her stable back at home. And where would that leave you? In an empty apartment, with no cookware to boot."
Dave gave Sue a dirty look.
"Oh, I'm sure it won't happen," Dana soothed. "But that just shows that you simply must be prepared for life's little eventualities."
She gazed about the room, kindly inquired of another young student "Is your grandmother still alive?"
The student gave her a puzzled look, slowly shook his head in the affirmative.
Dana: "Of course she is, and a strong woman I'll bet. Her years have been productive ones, I'm sure. As her pride and joy, can you think of anything she might desire, any need which is wanting? Think now."
He did. "Well, maybe a live-in housekeeper to help her around the house -"

"Cookware. Right," Dana chuckled wisely. "Anybody who's been around that long has probably worn out something besides her heart. Surely those items she uses everyday - that bent, rusty fork, that dinged-up old cooker. You might consider a wise present to your dear, forgotten old grandmother."
Dana was in full swing now. "But that's just a thought. What you're really concerned with is your bright future, and our place in it."
"A number of local representatives around the country, like myself, visit college campuses because we're concerned about you! That's right! We know what a rough world it is out there and we know our cookware can be a part of your future."
Only one or two of the students were hooked, but no one left for fear some free prize would be given out at the end of the presentation and they would miss it.
Dana burbled on. "Now, Plan One is an assortment of - if I may be frank here - not our top-of-the-line wares, but reasonable facsimiles. Not all of us can afford the very best, so we strive to accommodate those elements of society."
"Plan Two is a little better, a lot more expensive and comes with a lifetime guarantee. The life of our company, that is."
"Plan Three is our super-deluxe edition of the finest we have to offer. It sells for an outrageous amount of money but as you know, you get what you pay for and often much less."
Dana momentarily halted her smooth monologue, keyed to the atmosphere.
"Oh, please don't worry yourselves about something as trivial as the payment plan. Your monthly installments will blend in with all your other bills: Bursar, food, books... I'm sure. And you'll be making a fine investment in your future and ours!"
At this crescendo there arose polite applause. Dana, enthused, began to approach the closest student near her when the door burst open amid startled screams.
"FREEZE! BG VICE! Nobody move!"
The modishly dressed campus security detective strode firmly up to Dana, roughly handcuffed her and shook his head from side to side.
"Dana, Dana, Dana. Trying to cheat innocent young students from their hard-earned money, eh?"
Dana sputtered. "What are you talking about? I'm providing them with a much-needed service. You have no right to do this."
The detective cut her short. "We have every right in the world. You see, the only people allowed to take money from students is the University. You're on private hunting grounds, and you'll have a long time in the cooler to contemplate your scheming and your manicured nails. Let's go."
As they exited the room a dissatisfied murmur ran through the crowd. There was to be no free gift after all.

Letters

Disillusioned by the theft of rings

This letter comes in response to the theft of two rings taken from an Offenbauer East sixth floor bathroom on Aug. 28. Those rings were of great sentimental value to me. One was a pre-engagement ring. It was gold with two very small diamonds on it. My mother gave me the other ring shortly before she passed away. That one was gold too and had one diamond with two rubies on either side. An inscription on the inside read "To BAB 6/5/82".

I am outraged that someone would be so dishonest and not return them, even anonymously. I have not only put an ad in The BG News offering a reward, but I have also posted signs and shown a great concern to the other residents on my floor about their return.

This letter might be another dead end in the fight to have my rings returned, but I hope it will prove that even though we would like to trust those people around us, it is not always possible.

Here is a message to those who have stolen and to those who will steal in the future: Theft could happen to you too someday. Be assured that you will not appreciate having anything stolen from you so think twice before stealing from anyone else!

Murder suspect's status pending

by Don Lee
news editor

Wood County Juvenile Court is expected to determine in the next two weeks whether a former Perrysburg Heights man, charged in the 1980 murder of a University freshman, will be tried as an adult.

Rojelio Garcia, 22, also known as Roy, faces charges of murder and arson in juvenile court. Garcia was the last of five suspects to be arrested for the Nov. 16, 1980, murder of Stephen Bowers, 18, of Canton. Garcia was 17 at the time of the murder.

Garcia was extradited from Houston, Texas, and placed in Wood County Jail on Nov. 5. He was arrested July 31 by FBI agents in Texas.

Garcia had been on the FBI's fugitive list since 1985, when Wood County Prosecutor Betty Montgomery asked them for assistance.

Bowers, a bouncer at the former Redwood Bar, refused to allow five males, whom he believed to be underage, to enter the bar. A fight ensued in the rear parking lot after the five tried to sneak back in.

Redwood is now known as Uptown.

Two of the other four men were arrested the night of the stabbing and a third was arrested Nov. 20, 1980. Two of the three were juveniles but were certified to stand trial as adults. All three were sentenced to life in prison for murder.

A FOURTH suspect, who was 15 at the time, surrendered to police about a year after the stabbing. He was convicted of felonious assault and was sentenced to an indefinite term with the Ohio Department of Youth Services.

The juvenile court has not yet set a date for a probable-cause hearing, a county prosecutor's spokesperson said yesterday. The hearing will be to determine if there is sufficient reason to bind Garcia over to the grand jury as an adult. The grand jury will determine if there is enough evidence to try Garcia for murder.

Last year's speaker, Sydney Harris, a columnist for the Chicago Sun-Times, received a response of 61.3 percent.

The speaker for the exercises in 1985, Charles McDowell, a commentator on Washington Week in Review, received a response of 28.8 percent. Steve Bell, anchorman for ABC News and the spring commencement speaker in 1984, was more popular than those two, with a percentage of 67.8 percent, while author Fran Lebowitz, who spoke in 1983, received a response of 32.3 percent.

Carl Menninger, founder of the Menninger Clinic, a psychiatric hospital in Nebraska and the speaker in 1982, received a percentage of 31. The most popular speaker was television personality Phil Donahue, the 1981 speaker, with an 80.6 percent rating.

A third survey question asked students to choose a speaker if anyone possible would be able to speak.

Bill Cosby received 10 votes, while David Letterman followed with 9 votes. President Reagan tied University alumnus Tim Conway with 7 votes.

A question which asked students their response if Rogers were to be the spring commencement speaker received a positive response of 39.4 percent.

A five-time deferred, two-time donor, Cottle said she will try again the next time the bloodmobile comes.

"I know that somebody out there is going to need blood," she said. "I feel good that I'm helping somebody else."

As part of a program for her floor in Batchelder Hall, Resident Adviser Amy Malaska asked the residents of the floor to donate blood in the name of Heidi Davis, a family friend.

Currently undergoing chemotherapy at Rainbow Babies' and Children's Hospital, the 14-year-

Malaska, a junior administrative management major, knows of 10 girls who donated blood for Davis.

Freshman music education and performance major Cheryl Dodson donated for Davis.

Dodson said she appreciated how the nurses took the time to explain the donating procedure.

Kathy Bell, a freshman music education major, also donated for Davis.

"I was very nervous, but they (the volunteers) calmed me down," Bell said. "I'll do it again."

A coil containing water for a heating and cooling system in the Education building broke yesterday afternoon and flooded Room 115 at about 12:30 p.m., causing an Economics 304 class to be dismissed early.

The class was being taught by Donald Sternitzke, professor of economics.

The coil was located in a machine room near Room 115.

Jim Romaker, supervisor of the plumbing shop, was not certain of what caused the breakage, but he attributed it to the unusually cold weather the area has been experiencing. Highs yesterday were only in the 20s, and today they are expected to reach into the 30s.

"This is the first hard cold snap of the season and this is the first real big event that has taken place this season," Romaker said.

Romaker estimated that 300 to 400 gallons of water leaked from the coil. He said that water was two inches deep near the lower side doors of the auditorium-style classroom.

The spillage was cleaned with a water vacuum by custodians before a 2:30 p.m. psychology class was to be held in the room.

He said that fixing the coil will be difficult since it is placed in an area that is difficult to access. However, it is expected to be fixed sometime soon.

ONE STUDENT who was sitting in the top row of the auditorium when the incident occurred said that the event did not frighten her.

Maree Dennis, a senior marketing major, said, "The students started laughing. I thought it was a mouse or something."

But she then stood up and noticed what looked like water coming through the doorway.

"I stood up and I saw the water. It didn't look like water at all. It was black. I saw it moving like a spilled glass of water or water coming out of an overflowing toilet," she said.

"We didn't stay too long. He (Sternitzke) was almost through with the notes so he let us go early. Usually the class lasts until a quarter to one, but he let us go at 12:15," Dennis said.

While the rest of the building was not affected, Romaker said that there may not be heat for a while in Room 115.

"Usually about half of the audience is from town and the rest from the University. We're hoping for such a mixture," Smith said.

In addition to the star talk, the planetarium offers rooftop stargazing following the Sunday programs.

Though the program is free to the public, the planetarium depends on donations for continued operation and growth.

energy into the production of crops, or to sell their labor to someone else, he said.

Seavoy said industrialization is not necessary for the conversion to a commercial society, and he cited Ireland and Denmark as countries where commercialization has improved the standard of living without the aid of industrialization.

Seavoy said the idea for the book came while he was working as a geologist on the Indonesian island of Borneo in 1970.

"I spent a year and one half there with a crew of four other men, living with the 700 villagers. The peasants did not produce enough surplus rice to feed us so we had to ship food in by helicopter," he said.

Phone service to be updated

by Beth Thomas
staff reporter

Phone service may be discontinued twice in November and December while the Telecommunications Office updates the phone system.

On Wednesday, Nov. 26 and Monday, Dec. 29, between 7 a.m. and 8 a.m., Telecommunications will change the system's hardware and software.

Richard Conrad, director of computer services, said Telecommunications chose those times to update the system because most students will be gone for Thanksgiving and Christmas breaks and most University offices will not be open at that time of day.

"We figured it was the best time in the entire year to impact the fewest number of users," he said.

He said all phones will experience an outage for about 10 or 20 minutes during the updating, and may have problems later in the day if the new equipment needs to be adjusted.

"The possibility exists that there may be service outages during the day," he said. "Everyone will experience outages during the few minutes in the morning."

He said the system must be updated in order to ensure service from the company that sold the system to the University.

"WE NEED to remain current in the operating system to be assured of AT&T's support," he said.

The equipment will be updated Nov. 26 and the programming will be updated Dec. 29.

Conrad said the updating is being done in stages so that if a problem arises, Telecommunications will know which part of the system is causing the problem.

"It is analogous to installing a new computer and may require a period of time to de-bug (adjust)," he said.

He said the system will need to be updated on a regular basis.

"It is something we'll probably do once a year," he said, but added that most updates won't require changing both equipment and programming.

Philosophy B340

Section 3600      2:30-4:00 TR

M. Robins

This course will deal with a new interdisciplinary called "cognitive science," an amalgam of psychology, philosophy, artificial intelligence, and linguistics. The main contribution of this approach lies in the new theory of mind that emerges - the mind as an information processor. An examination of this theory, its conception of the various sciences of the mind and its relation to other approaches, will be the principal objective of the course. A secondary objective will be a look at the influence of cognitive psychology and artificial intelligence on recent work in philosophy, particularly in epistemology, moral philosophy, and action theory.

The following two textbooks shall form the bulk of the required reading:
Paul M. Churchland's Matter and Consciousness, and John R. Searle's Minds, Brains, and Science.

Reason and Decision

Court halts Perry power boost

CINCINNATI (AP) - The Nuclear Regulatory Commission issued a full-power operating license for the Perry nuclear power plant yesterday, but a federal appeals court put the license on hold a few hours later.

The 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati issued a stay late yesterday preventing the plant from going to full power until a dispute over the licensing gets further consideration. The court agreed to give the case high priority.

The northeast Ohio plant received permission yesterday morning to generate electricity at full power for the next 40 years. Even before the appeals court's stay, however, the plant operators indicated they expected further delay in going to full power because of pending legal action by Perry opponents.

The $4.6 billion plant, on the Lake Erie shore 35 miles northeast of Cleveland, has become the 99th U.S. nuclear power plant licensed by the NRC to operate at full power. Approval for the license came last Friday by a 4-1 vote of the NRC.

Russ Marabito, NRC spokesman in Chicago, said the license was signed yesterday by Harold Denton, director of the NRC's Office of Nuclear Reactor Regulation.

PERRY RECEIVED a low-power license last March that let the plant operate at only 5 percent power. A full-power license would enable Perry operators to begin increasing power to 100 percent, a process that would take several months.

Before the appellate court's stay, Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co. spokesman

Lee Bailey said he was pleased to get the license. CEI is the operating utility.

"We'll meet any other roadblocks that might come up as they come," he said.

When the appeals court issued its indefinite stay shortly before 5 p.m., Bailey said he had no immediate comment. Even if the plant started going ahead yesterday with its move toward full power, it probably wouldn't have reached 100 percent power until late winter.

Gov. Richard Celeste withdrew state support for the Perry emergency evacuation plan last August and appointed a three-member task force to review it. The team had asked the NRC to delay a vote until the review could be completed.

Aquino ally murdered

MANILA, Philippines (AP) - One of President Corason Aquino's leading leftist supporters was found brutally murdered yesterday, the day she returned from abroad to a capital swept by rumors of coup plots against her.

Police found the mutilated body of Rolando Olalia, president of the Partido ng Bayan (People's Party) and the militant May 1st Movement labor alliance, in a ditch on the edge of the capital hours after his family reported him missing. The body of his driver was found two miles away.

Antonio Cuenco, political affairs minister, said the killing "further aggravates" the crisis in Aquino's government, which has been split by Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile's criticism of her policies.

During her four-day visit to Japan seeking aid for the crippled economy, Manila was rife with rumors that disaffected military officers linked to Enrile would strike against leftists to provoke a violent response as a pretext to take over the government.

Gen. Fidel Ramos, the armed forces commander, declared the military's loyalty to Aquino. Ramos and Enrile, who also was defense minister under Ferdinand Marcos, led the military-civilian uprising that forced Marcos into exile last February and brought Aquino to power.

ENRILE AND Ramos said they knew nothing of Olalia's disappearance. A maid who answered the telephone at the defense minister's home after the bodies were found said he was asleep and she refused to wake him.

Goodyear threatened with takeover

Akron mayor asks community officials to appeal to Congress

AKRON (AP) - Akron Mayor Thomas Sawyer told officials in 36 communities yesterday to go to Congress with their concerns over an attempted takeover of Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.

Sawyer, a Democrat who was elected last week to a first term in the U.S. House, made the plea to mayors of 35 other communities in a teleconference beamed by satellite from New York.

He asked for their help with his testimony next Tuesday before the House Judiciary subcommittee, which is examining corporate takeovers.

Sawyer said Congress and the Securities and Exchange Commission need to examine this country's "hands off" policy regarding hostile takeover attempts by corporate raiders.

Goodyear is the object of a takeover attempt by a group of investors led by Sir James Goldsmith, a British-French financier. Goodyear has been forced to try to sell a number of its holdings, including its Akron-based Aerospace Corp., in an effort to drive up stock values.

The company also is warning of layoffs in a restructuring program.

"Goodyear is under siege and our communities and citizens are caught in the crossfire," Sawyer said. "A major part of Goodyear's stock is now in the hands of a raider and... speculators who follow such activity with all the ethics and morals of sharks."

SAWYER CALLED for legislation that provides for solid, long-range economic planning and investments that will not leave industry vulnerable to "economic terrorism."

"Goodyear is threatened by corporate raiders for all the wrong reasons," Sawyer said. "Our system should reward Goodyear for its long-range outlook, not punish it. We simply can not stand by and be raped."

Goodyear is the largest employer in Akron, with one of every 20 Akron residents working for the company. Sawyer also noted that every Goodyear job supports three to four other jobs in the Akron area.

"It's a frightening prospect for my community," said Sawyer. "There is a crisis level of fear and uncertainty."

The attempted sale of the Aerospace division prompted a lawsuit yesterday by the United Auto Workers union, which claimed in U.S. District Court that the proposed sale to Martin Marietta Corp. would violate a collective bargaining agreement with the union.

Gridders fate determined at UT

by Ron Fritz
managing editor

In his press conference Tuesday, Bowling Green head coach Moe Ankney looked back on his playing days, when he faced the University of Toledo.

In particular, he remembered a game the Falcons won in the last few minutes against the Rockets in 1963. A late touchdown pass by BG's Jerry Ward beat UT 22-20.

But Ankney isn't into reflecting or dreaming - especially California dreamin' - as the Falcons prepare to face the Rockets tomorrow at the Glass Bowl at 4:30.

If BG wins and Miami is beaten by Eastern Michigan, the Falcons will be making a return trip to the California Bowl. However, Ankney said he isn't concerned about the Redskins' game.

"I don't give a damn what Miami does, Saturday," the first-year head coach said. "I don't know what the players are thinking, but I'm not concerned about the Cal Bowl. Either way, I don't know how the players will react."

Ankney said he is more concerned with beating the Rockets and winning a share of the Mid-American Conference title.

"Beating Toledo and winning a share of the championship would be the sundae," he said. "The Cal Bowl would be extra - like the cherry on top. I want the sundae."

THE FALCONS will know prior to game-time if they still have a shot at going to California. Miami hosts EMU at 12:15 p.m. KSU is at Western Michigan for a 1 p.m. contest.

UT finds itself in a similar position. If the Rockets beat BG and Kent State and MU lose, UT will be locked in a five-way tie for the MAC championship.

Rocket coach Dan Simrell said he isn't concerned with the possibilities of a share of the MAC title.

"So many things have to happen for us to share the title. I'm not even going to consider it," Simrell said. "I'd like to take care of BG and end the season on a five-game winning streak."

Anything else that happens, I'll let it take care of itself."

UT is 6-4 overall and 4-3 in the conference. The Rockets have won their last four games, including a 26-14 win over Central Michigan last week.

Leading the Rocket upsurge has been the running of tailback Kelvin Farmer. Farmer leads the MAC with 1,363 yards rushing.

"I'm very concerned with Kelvin Farmer. We have to slow him down," Ankney said. "At this time, he's the best running back in the conference. They'll give him the ball a lot."

"Our defense has to stop the run and force Toledo to pass."

ON OFFENSE, BG has to run the ball well, according to Ankney. The Rockets are second to last in the MAC at stopping the run. They give up 206.4 yards a game rushing. Against the pass, UT is second only to the Falcons.

However, the Falcons are averaging just 92 yards a game rushing. Ankney said the run will open up quarterback Rich Dackin, who needs 218 yards to break Brian McClure's school record for yards passing by a freshman.

"If we give Rich time, I think we can pass on them," Ankney said. "But Toledo has 15 years of starting experience in their secondary. They may be the best in the conference."

Simrell said BG is playing good football and should be up for Saturday's game. He said a share of the title would be quite an accomplishment for the Falcons.

"A lot of people wrote both of us off. But BG came back and has gotten better and better," he said. "Being in the position to win its second straight title is a credit to both their players and coaches."

The Falcons lead UT 27-19-4 in a series that dates back to 1919. BG's last win at the Glass Bowl was a 17-6 triumph in 1980. Last season, the Falcons shut out the Rockets 21-0 to clinch the Cal Bowl trip.

Cagers sign area prospect

Bowling Green women's basketball coach Fran Voll announced the signing of Erin Vick, a 5-10 forward from Maumee, to a national letter of intent.

Vick was named the Northern Lakes League MVP and earned second-team all-Ohio honors last season. She averaged 21 points for the Panthers and set a record-high for points in one game (35) and in one season.

"Erin is an outstanding athlete from an outstanding athletic program," Voll said. "She has played her basketball under the excellent leadership of coach Marty Kalmbach, one of northwest Ohio's most successful girls' basketball coaches."

Swim teams host Eastern Michigan

Bowling Green will take part in a variety of sports action this weekend.

The men's and women's swim teams will host Eastern Michigan tomorrow at 1 p.m. and 4 p.m. in Cooper Pool.

The BG spikers, 22-7, travel to EMU today for a crucial 7:30 p.m. Mid-American Conference match. They finish with Central Michigan tomorrow at 4 p.m.

The nationally-ranked hockey team visits Franklin Park Arena in Chicago to face CCHA-member Illinois-Chicago. Both today's and tomorrow's games begin at 8:30 p.m. EST.

Both the men's and women's cross country teams will visit Normal, Ill. tomorrow to take part in the NCAA District IV competition.

The football team visits rival Toledo tomorrow at 4:30 p.m. in what could bring a second consecutive MAC title to the Falcons.

The weekend ends with the women's basketball team playing the Brown and Orange Classic in Mansfield, Ohio Sunday.

BG icers visit red-hot Flames

by Tom Skernivitz
assistant sports editor

Over the years the Central Collegiate Hockey Association's throne has predominantly been occupied by the league's elite - Bowling Green and Michigan State.

Western Michigan and Lake Superior have sported occasional coup d'etats to the hierarchy, but Illinois-Chicago?

Never.

The notion of a UIC threat might be brushed off as an act of jest.

Yet after 10 games, BG's next opponent is sitting in fourth place in the CCHA and ranked ninth in the nation by the WMEB Radio Media Poll.

The Flames are definitely nothing to joke about and the second-place Falcons (9-1, 7-1) know it as they enter this weekend's series in the 'Windy City.'

"I think we all realize that every team gets up for us," BG's Brian Meharry said. "It's especially true for Chicago because they've had a lot of trouble with us. They're going good right now and I think they'll be up for the weekend."

Evidence to support Meharry's conclusion can be found in the Flames' 5-4 overtime defeat of CCHA-frontrunner Michigan State, last Friday in East Lansing.

"They (UIC) played us very well," Spartans' coach Ron Mason said. "If they play with the same type of intensity and get some good goal-tending, Bowling Green will be in for a battle. They have much more balance this year."

UIC COACH Val Belmonte agreed with Mason's assessment of his team, saying his players have the right mix of talent and have a bright outlook on their future.

"The chemistry between our players is very good," Belmonte said. "We're very positive right now, but anything different wouldn't be right. We're just taking one game at a time."

Despite the Flames' 7-3 overall record and 5-3 CCHA mark this season, history will be working against them as they skate with the second-ranked Falcons.

In 22 games, BG owns an almost perfect 21-0-1 record against UIC. Included are six Falcon' wins last season, two coming in the CCHA playoffs.

Despite the Flames' incompetence against BG, Belmonte said his 1986-87 team has nothing to do with previous squads.

"This team is totally different from any other team," the coach said. "The past is the past. We'll go into the game with the same attitude as any other game."

Sentics: a new science combining music, emotions offered to students

by Jared O. Wadley
Copy editor

A visiting psychology professor from Australia is teaching his unique invention that allows people to understand their emotions.

This semester, Manfred Clynes, a distinguished scientist, inventor and musician, is teaching a new science called sentics — a word derived from the Latin word 'sentir,' meaning to feel.

He said he has taken the seven basic human emotions and has applied them to an cycle that allows the participant to feel each emotion in turn. Clynes said the seven emotions — anger, hate, grief, love, sex, joy and reverence — are expressed during a sentic cycle.

Clynes said a person plays the sentics tape which contains eight words and a series of clicks. He said while the participant sits in a straight back chair, he mounts his finger on a finger rest. The finger remains on the rest during the sentic cycles, he added.

With the lights dimmed and the participant's eyes closed, Clynes said the voice on the tape begins the cycle by saying "no emotion," and begins mentioning the seven emotions at different times.

Between each spoken word, there is a series of clicks, he said. After a click, the person presses the fingerrest in a short motion. This continues until the 25 minute tape is over, he said.

He said the best time to do the sentic cycle is in the morning after getting up, after breakfast or an hour before bedtime. It also should be done three or four times a week, he said.

Doing the sentic cycles is a way of discovering subtle forms of expression and finding a sense of peace and energy, he said.

"This work has a lot of promise for the future in helping people live better lives," he said. "It helps improve the quality of life and reduces unhappiness in the world."

Clynes said sentics cycle helps people become aware of their emotions and makes them feel glad to be alive.

He said he knows several suicidal cases who have practiced the sentics cycle for 10 days. After the sessions they decided to stay alive because they were "no longer prisoners of their emotions," Clynes said.

"The cycles helped them get rid of their repressed feelings," Clynes said. "It also helped them communicate better and gave them a sense of well-being."

He added, "Everyone (who uses the sentic cycle) can be a winner. No one is a loser because we are winners in our ability to express our emotions."

He said the sentics package is available at the American Sentics

Association in La Jolla, Calif., but will be available at Bowling Green bookstores once he makes the necessary arrangements.

Clynes said he took a leave of absence from the New South Wales State Conservatory of Music in Sydney, Australia because he was invited by University President Paul Olskamp; Robert Conner, psychology chairman and professor; and Jaak Panksepp, psychology professor, to be a Distinguished Visiting Professor of psychology.

He said he and Panksepp have been working with chickens to test their emotions and behaviors. Clynes said they separated the chickens and watched their actions.

Clynes said he wouldn't only be in Bowling Green during his stay. He said later this month he will be lecturing at Harvard, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Princeton. He plans to return to Australia at the end of the semester.

Born in Vienna, Clynes said his interest in music and science started at an early age.

Clynes said he had a gifted family who good background in both music and science.

This interest remained with him even though he and his family had to flee Vienna. He said Adolf Hitler was killing people by gas extermination, so his family left the country.

He decided to combine the two into his work because he enjoyed them very much.

He said he was an acclaimed pianist in Australia and began touring at in his early 20s. Today, he is a distinguished pianist in the major cities of Europe and Australia.

Clynes said he has a music degree from the Juilliard School in New York.

He has been presenting his music to many people, including Bowling Green residents. Sunday, he gave a concert commemorating Ludwig van Beethoven's work in Kobacker Hall in the Moore Musical Art Center.

He said he was pleased with his work, and that the music he played was an expression of love. Clynes added that music is "the language of emotions."

University grad turns afternoon anchor

by Kelly Rose
Friday reporter

Making career choices early on in life can lead to living out dreams. Persistence and training led Diane Larson to anchoring the noon news on Channel 13 in Toledo.

Larson graduated from the University in 1982 with a degree in broadcast journalism. As well as being in front of the camera for a half hour each weekday, Larson writes some of the news stories and decides which stories will run. She summed up her job as "putting the noon news all together in a neat little half-hour package."

Larson began her journalism experience in the seventh grade when working on her school newspaper in Canton. During high school, she entered a large broadcast journalism competition and won. She then decided broadcast journalism would be her future.

"I enjoyed telling stories verbally and I liked the immediacy of TV news," Larson said.

She received an internship at Channel 24 in Toledo while at the University. This led to a full-time job at the station after graduation. In the summer of 1983, she became the morning anchor, and after a year and a half at the station, she was named the evening anchor. Larson began working at her present job in December 1984.

Larson said the University prepared her for her career in broadcast journalism in several ways. She praised the writing and editing experience she got while at the university, but she added that there was no way she could have been prepared for the intense deadline pressures or being at ease in front of the camera, which has to be learned through experience.

Larson said she thought of her first job as Journalism 505 because there was still more to be learned after graduation.

Being in the public eye almost every day, Larson has become a recognized public figure in the Toledo area. Larson said she gets her share of mail from prospective broadcast journalists who are asking for advice. Larson said she encourages students to work toward their goal, and she often recommends the University as a good school to enroll in.

Larson's present position is basically a 9 to 5 job with every weekend off. She does have to work holidays, but she said she has grown accustomed to this. She plans to stay at Channel 13 at least a couple more years and is in no hurry to leave the station.

But Larson hopes to eventually move to a bigger television market, such as Chicago, where there are more people and money to work with. She also hopes to become an evening anchor once again before her career in front of the camera is over. She said, "I probably have another 15 years in front of the camera and then I want to go into full-time producing."

Realtor active in local relations

Some people never slow down. Richard Newlove is one of these people.

Aside from being the vice president of Newlove Realty Inc., he participates actively in the University as well as in the local community. He is also a husband and father of three.

Newlove received a degree from the University and today he continues his affiliation with the campus.

In 1983, he was appointed to the Board of Trustees for a nine-year period. This board, made up of nine members, makes policy and salary decisions. Specifically he acts as chairman of the Personnel Facilities Committee. The committee evaluates projects under consideration, gets briefed on the status of various endeavors, and discusses opinions and reports during the board meetings.

He is also a member of the Foundation Board, which determines how money supplied by individual corporate organizations will be spent or invested.

Newlove said he is proud of the University and ranks it at least in the top three of Ohio's colleges.

"Not to say that there aren't things that need to be improved, and they will be improved on. I think they always are. But by and large, anyone associated with the institution can be proud of it."

He mentioned that enrollment has held firm when the demographics say it shouldn't, and one reason for the success of the University is the "good caliber of students" attending.

Along with keeping strong ties with the University, Newlove is the vice president of Newlove Realty Inc., founded in 1964 by his father, Al Newlove. Richard Newlove mainly works to bring buyers and sellers together.

The Newlove Rental Management Company is another business bearing the family name. Newlove plays a small role in this; the day-to-day operations are handled by his sister, Mary Fawcett.

Basically, the business caters to the property owners' needs by managing the responsibilities and "hassles" that accompany their investment. Newlove also has interests in some apartments that are managed by this service.

Sax player 'long-winded' on goals

Student's versatility evident

by Kay Fisher
Friday reporter

One Bowling Green musician has had the opportunity to play with one of Bowling Green's legendary local bands and famous stars at the Masonic Auditorium in Toledo.

Kristi Stringer, a previous member of the local band, "Wet Shavers," has played saxophone for various bands and musical events during her college years. Stringer became a member of the "Wet Shavers" in 1984 and stayed with the band for two years until their break-up.

"I knew a guy from the band and he told me they needed a saxophone player. I came in and played for them and I guess they liked what they heard."

Being a member of the band was a fun experience, according to Stringer (whose maiden name is Niblak). "It was great," she said. "We played at Howards a lot, Toledo bars, weddings and for private parties. The funnest part of the "Shavers" was that we did a lot of humorous, tongue-in-cheek things. It was like a game with the audience."

Stringer has proven her versatility as a musician by playing for performances at the Masonic.

"One of my last performances was for the show, "Stop the World, I Want to Get Off," starring Mitzl Gaynor. Other performances were for Lena Horne, Nell Carter, from "Gimme a Break," Joan Rivers, and "The 5th Dimension."

"Most of the stars aren't too friendly," said Stringer. "They kind of disappear after they perform. But The 5th Dimension and Mitzl Gaynor were pretty nice. Joan Rivers wasn't bad."

In the performances, Stringer serves as a "woodwind doubler." This involves juggling different instruments throughout the performance, switching instruments for different parts. "You really have to be on the ball," said Stringer. "We don't have a lot of time to rehearse — usually only one rehearsal. During the show you could be playing flute one minute, clarinet the next, and then to another."

Stringer and the other musicians are chosen for the performances by recommendations from directors. "I was recommended by the director of the Lab Band I play for on campus."

The recommendation is trusted by the people who are doing the hiring."

The pay rate for the performances is usually around $19 an hour, according to Stringer. "It's really exciting to perform for them, because it's the real thing."

Stringer, now a senior, was a music major her first two years of college, but switched to visual communications technology her junior year.

"This way I don't have to worry about having all of my eggs in one basket."

Stringer was recently married and plans on moving to Florida after graduating in December.

"I'm not sure how involved I'll be with bands there," said Stringer. "In Florida, the Motown thing isn't going on. There's a lot of taped music and a disco-ish type of music, other than a lot of live bands."

Student jocks stir the early birds

by Betsy Smith
Friday reporter

While most students are asleep in bed, a few brave souls are up and on their way to the radio station. They are not necessarily bright-eyed and awake, but after a few cups of coffee they are ready to wake up the rest of the campus.

These students are the disc jockeys for a "Rude Awakening," the morning show broadcast Monday through Friday from 6 a.m. to 10 a.m. by AM 680 WFAL.

The DJs arrive at the station at 5:30 a.m. to get ready to go on the air. They have to pull the music that they want to play and plan some of the script for the show. They also spend a few minutes getting each other psyched to go on the air.

Dale Stead, program director for WFAL said, "The morning show is the core of the day. When the morning show goes good, it kicks in the rest of the day." Stead also said that if a DJ has a bad morning, the listener cannot know it. The station is a service to the campus and their job is to make people happy.

Rick Clever, a junior business major and also a DJ for a "Rude Awakening," said it is a good experience. Clever also said it is a chance to experiment with different ideas. "We do the 'News from the Trashcan' and the 'Cafeteria Report' on Thursday mornings," said Clever. He also said it is a time when one can be crazy and get away with it.

The purpose of the morning show is to broadcast to the student. "We try to be campus oriented, we give BGSU weather, news and sports information," said Stead.

One aspect about the "Rude Awakening" is that the show can be a little more outrageous than Toledo stations. This is possible because they only broadcast on campus. Stead said, "We try to go to the limit without pushing it to far. We have a lot of fun in the morning." Clever said that as long as they use good taste, they are pretty much on their own in the morning.

There are 10 different DJs that work in teams of two people per morning. Most of them are the better DJs, according to Stead. They are outgoing, creative and know their music well. They are also able to interact with comedy and the student body, Stead said. Although all of the disc jockeys this semester are men, next semester it will be almost half men and half women.

Music plays an important part of the "Rude Awakening." Stead said, "We do not want to blow people out of their beds in the morning." They play a variety of music such as Steve Winwood, Bruce Hornsby, Led Zepelin, Genesis and Boston.

Balloon delivery an expanding art

by Beth Murphy
Friday reporter

Walking scantily dressed into a roomful of people is a way of earning money for several University students.

Costumed balloon deliveries have inflated in popularity over the last few years in Bowling Green. A wide range of options are available — from the services of a French maid to the deceptive sophistication of male dancer Gentleman John.

The unusual nature of the job lends itself to some strange circumstances. Sue Van Schoyck, senior interpersonal and public communication major, has made about 30-40 deliveries so far this semester for The Balloonman. She dresses as a French maid, Playboy bunny and a kitten. Although she said the embarrassment has worn off, the memory of one delivery as the Playboy bunny still makes her blush.

"I had to go to some cowboy bar on Route 6," she said. Her boss sent a male employee with her for safety reasons, but she was still nervous. The delivery went smoothly, but the worst part didn't come until she returned home.

"When I got back, my boss noticed there was a rip in the costume on both sides vertically down my ribs. I don't think anybody noticed, but I was really embarrassed," she said. However, she added her worst experience came when she delivered to the junior high school.

"They were snapping and pulling my hose. It was like a little army after me," she said.

Van Schoyck's co-worker Bill Litty, junior graphic design major, had an even wilder situation to relate. Sometimes he makes his 15-20 weekly deliveries as a gorilla; but being Flex, the muscle man, dressed in tight black pants and a black bow tie, has been his specialty for two years.

One night he presented a birthday message in a bar to a woman in her late 40s. After giving her the balloons, he struck some exaggerated muscle man poses which included getting down on one knee. That's when he got his surprise.

"She dove on me and put her hand right down my pants!" he said.

Wild crowds don't surprise Jim Tutorow, freshman theater major, anymore. He is a male dancer for Balloon Busters and has two aliases — Ninja week are on campus, and last week Gentleman John, clad in a tuxedo with red accessories and "shades," helped celebrate one girl's birthday with a half-strip before a journalism class.

"The teacher was really great

Amy Hallenbrook, senior elementary education major, also works for Balloon Busters as a French maid, Cottontail Cutie and a clown. Her most memorable delivery was a birthday message to a middle-aged man at a Pemberville factory. It was during lunch and there were about 150 people standing around. At first she was embarrassed but said, "It went over so well because everybody got involved. Everybody realizes it's something special."

The delivery job appealed to Hallenbrook because she was tired of working in the cafeteria and wanted something different. She went to Student Services and found the position listed on the off-campus bulletin board. Tutorow said he heard of the job through his best friend, who did babysitting for the owner. He "pockets" up to $30 for each delivery.

Instead of applying for such work, opportunity came knocking for Litty. He was weightlifting in Eppler when a woman walked in, looking as if she needed help. When he offered assistance, she asked him to consider delivering balloons. After overcoming the initial embarrassment, he said, "Now it's really easy to do this. I have a good time, no doubt."

The students agreed it's a good way to make money and feelings of being nervous or embarrassed disappear quickly. Van Schoyck commented that it's easier going into a delivery than leaving because the balloons help explain the unusual attire.

Owners of both establishments require escorts for their employees into bars and any other time safety is a question. Julie Magnusson, co-owner of The Balloonman, said she receives calls for a male to deliver to another guy or a group of guys. These are politely refused. Balloon Buster owner Lisa Shuler said she gets the same type of calls which she also will not honor. However, the strangest request she ever had was for balloons to be sent to a funeral home.

So the next time you see a gorilla or a Playboy bunny drive by with a car full of balloons, laugh but remember they have tuition to pay too.

Costumed balloon deliveries are fun and profitable for Sue Van Schoyck, senior IPCO major, and Bill Litty, junior design major, of The Balloonman.

Nick and Gentleman John.

"I usually go in and sing 'Happy Birthday.' Sometimes they don't know what's going to happen next," he said. "Then I strip." After a 10-minute dance, he is left wearing only a G-string.

Most of his two or three deliveries a about it and thought it was a neat idea. I distinctly remember one guy's reaction though. Every time I took something off, he'd say, 'I don't believe this! I don't believe this!'" Tutorow said. "Then this weekend I had to do one (delivery) in Founders where they had no heat yet. We heated up the room pretty well."

Lord of flies at drosophila lab

by Deanna Griffith
Friday reporter

More than 2,000 varieties of fruit flies live at the University, and they're supposed to be here.

Now before you break down the doors of K mart trying to buy up a lifetime supply of fly killer, let me explain why the University is all abuzz.

These 400 species are maintained at the National Drosophila Species Resource Center. In layman's terms, a Drosophila is a fruit fly. The resource center is located in the Life Sciences building, but is a research center independent of the Biological Sciences department.

The center is headed by Jong Yoon, professor of biological sciences. Yoon became involved in Drosophila research while at the University of Texas at Austin. At the time, the University of Texas also had a Resource Center, but when Yoon came to the University in 1978, the National Science Foundation asked to have the center transferred here because of a lack of scientists at the University of Texas at Austin.

According to Yoon, the role of the Species Center is threefold. The center was founded "one, to maintain fruit fly stock; two, to supply scientists throughout the world with specimens and answers to research questions; and three, to continue developing techniques on how to raise fruit flies," he said.

Yoon said the research from the center is used in the "study of evolutionary biology, aging and especially genetics." Yoon added that the main reason for studying fruit flies is genetics because each species has its own physiological and biological characteristics.

The research is supported by a grant from the National Science Foundation in Washington, D.C.

In addition, the center is governed by the American Society of Naturalists. Yoon commented that the Society sets guides and collects ideas from the research. The society also recommended the University as a site for the Resource Center.

Yoon said that in addition to the two previous reasons, the University be-

Secret group promotes band spirit

by Kelly Vaughn
Friday reporter

"One, two, burp, four." This may mean nothing to most people, but it sent many a marching band member rolling in laughter on the practice field.

The laughter was a result of a sign BUFFO had put near the field mocking the director who burped during his counting a few days earlier.

BUFFO is the BGSU Marching Band's version of Sic Sic. It began in 1976 when four band members put a sign on the practice field to spark enthusiasm before a home football game. They developed rules and guidelines in order to continue the tradition.

This secret society, which consists of two seniors, two juniors and two sophomores, disguise themselves in masks and derby hats when they "harass band members" on Thursday nights, according to BUFFO No. 3. The group is not supposed to speak when they are out hanging up signs in the music building and on the trailer in the practice field. However, if they must, they speak in a "high chirpish voice — two to three words at a time," said No. 3.

The signs BUFFO hang up are "psych-up messages that usually don't make sense to anyone but band members," according to Dave Kuhar, president of Kappa Kappa Psi, the band fraternity.

Trumpet player Martin Loveless said, "Before home games, Mark Kelly, director of bands, reads a poem written by BUFFO."

No. 3 said the only requirements are that "it rhyme and be stupid." Last week's poem mentioned the people who contributed to the band this season, the soloists, the percussion section, since it was featured, and jokes about the songs in the show.

Kuhar described BUFFO as the "spirit of band embodied in people." The senior members have their choice of being unmasked either at the final concert or at the banquet in December. This year it will be the latter. The remaining four will choose two sophomores in the fall. No. 3 described likely BUFFO candidates as being "dedicated and committed." They need to be spirited, but in a calm way so they will not be "as easy to pick out." The members' identity usually stays secret, although a "small circle of people may guess."

The name BUFFO is derived from the Italian word buffare meaning "comic opera." According to No. 3, he lives up to the name. His reasoning is that "calm people can be radical under the guise of a mask." He referred to BUFFO as an "unorthodox way to serve the band."

BUFFO members meet in a secret hideout, which changes every year, to plan their weekly onslaught of signs and visits. No. 3 found the clarinet section received the most ribs. Freshman Brian Kleffer, mellophone section, feels BUFFO keeps up spirit — they're like "cheerleaders of the band."

Freshman flag corps member Ann Preston finds the signs with "BUFFO sez" in the upper left corner and a derby hat in the lower right to be "obnoxious, but funny."

Band members should beware that their every move is being watched; no one escapes BUFFO's watchful eye.

Keeping grounds in top form

by David Skorupski
Friday reporter

Every place has its heroes and stars, but not one of them could be where they are today without the people of the backstage: the unsung heroes.

The University has its own "department" of unsung heroes — those dedicated individuals who make up the maintenance staff.

Kelth Pogan, associate director of plant operations and maintenance, has been with Bowling Green for the past 10 years.

Pogan said that there are four divisions of personnel who work for the University: Plant Operations, Grounds Crews, Maintenance and Trades. In all, there are 320 workers for the University, including 18 full-time employees at the heating plant on Thurstin Avenue.

"Those are the real unsung heroes," said Pogan. "They work 24 hours a day, seven days a week keeping this University going."

He said the maintenance workers work in either academic buildings or in residence halls. There are about 100 buildings that they are responsible for keeping clean.

Pogan is especially proud of his crews because of their hard work. "The second most-quoted reason that students come here is because the campus looks nice," he said.

The maintenance workers begin their day at either 4, 5 or 6 a.m., with the late shift starting at 11 p.m. in the Musical Arts building and the Rec Center.

Pogan said the maintenance crews get much of their work done in the afternoons in the residence halls since that is when most of the students are in classes.

He also said that at WBGU Channel 27, the workers start at 4 a.m. to make sure the station is clean. "They have to get started early before the station goes on the air, or else it will get kind of noisy," explained Pogan.

The "Trades" are the carpenters and plumbers of the University who have, perhaps, the most diverse of jobs.

"They'll go anywhere we need them," Pogan said.

The University also hires part-time help to work on weekends.

Darlene Gallagher is a custodian

"rover."

Gallagher has been working for the University ever since she graduated from high school 18 years ago.

She works in 13 academic buildings, dusting, sweeping floors, cleaning blackboards and bathrooms, not to mention emptying wastebaskets.

"I like meeting the different kids. I got to meet the whole swim team before they built the Rec Center." She said students haven't really changed all that much since she first began working, but they do seem younger.

She also said you can tell a lot about how the rest of the year will be after the first few days of classes.

"You know it's going to be a rough year if the classrooms are dirty. Some kids take pride in where they go to school more than others, I guess."

Virginia Langley is a custodian for Founder's Quadrangle.

She said her busiest days are on Mondays since that's just after the weekend parties. Langley likes the students in Founder's because she said they are pleasant. Her only complaint is cleaning the showers every Monday because they get quite dirty after a week.

Kevin Stanlon has been a groundskeeper for 11 years. His morning begins at 7:30, and he works until 4 p.m. Stanlon likes his job because he gets to be outdoors.

He said one of his hardest jobs is raking leaves and shoveling snow because he has to use hand tools, not the heavy equipment. He is responsible for tending the lawn from the library to the heating plant.

Maybe there is a substitute for experience.

After you're done with school, you face one of the hardest lessons in life:

Without experience, it's tough to get a job. And without a job, it's tough to get experience.

At The Wall Street Journal, we recognize that experience is something you don't start earning until after graduation.

But while you're waiting, we can give you a head start by providing some of the same competitive advantages that experience brings.

For instance, our wide-ranging news coverage gives you a clearer understanding of the whole complex world of business.

Our tightly focused feature reporting prepares you for your more specific ambitions — whether in management, accounting, finance, technology, marketing or small business.

And our in-depth analysis helps you formulate your ideas in a sharper and more persuasive way.

Olscamp: active career, social life

by Betsy Smith
and Deborah Gottschalk
Friday reporters

Although much has been published about Paul Olscamp, both positive and not-so-positive, many students still claim they know nothing about their University president.

By visiting his office, or the office of public relations in the Administration building, all of Olscamp's accomplishments can be researched. However, little has been said about his personal life.

Olscamp was born in Montreal, Canada. The oldest of three children, he has one brother and one sister. He attended the University of Western Ontario, where he received his bachelor of arts and master's degrees. In 1962, at the University of Rochester, he earned his doctoral degree in philosophy.

After earning this degree, he accepted a position as an instructor at The Ohio State University. He was soon promoted to assistant professor, and later to associate professor. In 1969 Olscamp was "unexpectedly appointed the associate dean of the college of humanities at Ohio State University," he said.

Because this position gave him a feeling of accomplishment, Olscamp decided to leave OSU and seek a higher administrative position. Later opportunities came in the form of a job as executive assistant to the chancellor of Syracuse University, and later vice chancellor for student programs.

At age 37, Olscamp became president of Western Washington University. He spent seven years at WWU before coming to Bowling Green.

The University has several positive aspects. According to Olscamp, the University has not only a much larger campus in comparison with Western Washington, but "the problems at BG have solutions whereas the problems at Washington do not." However, just like many Bowling Green residents, Olscamp prefers the beautiful mountains to these flatlands.

As the eighth president of Bowling Green State University, Olscamp has specific responsibilities. He states that he basically does four things as president. The first is to supervise the work of the five vice presidents of the University. Secondly, he personally participates in the establishment of the goals that the University administration wants to accomplish. These goals are published in his annual report. Thirdly, he represents the University to all constituents such as the state legislature, alumni, the business district and the city of Bowling Green. Lastly, he is responsible for raising money for the University.

Although Olscamp is busy with both on- and off-campus duties, he still has time to lead an active personal life. He enjoys both sports and leisure. An avid downhill skier, Olscamp enjoys watching and participating in ski jumping. In addition to skiing, he also bikes and plays platform tennis.

Not only does Olscamp have accomplishments in education, but he has both a black belt in karate and his pilot's license. He enjoys flying for both business and pleasure.

As a native Canadian, one would expect Olscamp to take interest in the sport of hockey. In fact, he is a devoted hockey fan. As he said, "Canadian hockey players are my favorite minority group."

When not working at the University, skiing the slopes or sailing, Olscamp spends his time reading or writing poetry. "I never sit down without something to read," said Olscamp.

Although it may seem that this man is incredibly busy, he takes time out each semester to teach one class in philosophy. "I enjoy teaching a great deal," Olscamp said.

In the future Olscamp would like to return to teaching full-time. Although he is not sure of the time or college, he would like to return to the West Coast. He appreciates the area, and his two children, Adam and Rebecca, also live in the Seattle vicinity.

Gordon does it all for magazine

by Denise Brickner
Friday reporter

With an encouraging word or just a friendly smile, James Gordon may seem like the average college professor. However, to students in the department of journalism, Gordon is much more. He is the one-man editor and production staff for News Photographer magazine, an official publication of the National Press Photographers Association, published monthly for its 8,300 members nationwide.

Graduated from Bowling Green State University in 1956 with a bachelor's degree in journalism, Gordon continued graduate studies at Ohio State University and received his master's degree in journalism in 1966.

In addition to being a member of the University journalism faculty, Gordon has also been a staff photographer for The Blade, Columbus Star, and various other newspapers. He was presented with the NPPA's highest award for photojournalism in July

As editor, not only is Gordon responsible for the content of News Photographer magazine, but also for typesetting, preparation of camera-ready copy, printing and second class mailing. This entire process occurs in his basement, which is complete with a darkroom.

"I was always interested in photojournalism. I grew up in Rochester, New York, near Life magazine. Photographers of Life magazine were the heroes of people interested in photography in my generation."

Many students, photojournalism majors notwithstanding, wonder what the future holds for them after graduation. Professor Gordon believes that if students don't make a mark for themselves as college students, such as in student publications, they're going to have a rough time after graduation.

"People hire you on the basis of what you do as a college student and as an intern. Before you can get an internship, you have to be able to show your interest in your field," he said.

came the site of the center because "BGSU is recognized as an administrator supporting the two foundations."

Yoon added, "We have another small Molangaster Mutant Center. The purpose was to put the two centers together."

In addition to Yoon, the center is staffed by a curator, two staff technicians, two graduate students and 12 undergraduates. Their jobs range from recording statistical data to stuffing test tubes with the special food for each kind of fly.

This special food is one of the things that makes the center unique. According to Yoon, the flies from Mexico eat meat while those from the zrain forest eat fungus.

He added that the center is unique because it is the only such center in the world. The center also has 20 species already extinct in nature.

Vol. XVII, No. 7

Bowling Green University

November 14, 1986

Pulitzer Prize-winning author Alex Haley will deliver the keynote address of the Third Annual Conference on Ethnic Studies Wednesday and Thursday (Nov. 19-20).

Author of "Roots," the top bestseller in U.S. publishing history, Haley will present the annual Hollis A. Moore President's Lecture at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the Lenhart Grand Ballroom, Union. His talk, which is free and open to the public, is entitled "The Family: Find the Good...and Praise It."

Haley is one of five speakers who will take part in the conference, which will also include a series of panel discussions. The theme for the two-day event is "Crossroads to the 21st Century: Cultural Diversity."

Other conference participants are Dr. Carlos Cortes of the University of California, Riverside; actor J.A. Preston; Dr. Charles V. Willie of Harvard University; and Dr. Mary Jean Moseley of Fort Lewis College in Durango, Colo.

"The purpose of the conference is to address higher education's commitment to the recognition of ethnic pluralism and the need for expanding cultural diversity in the curriculum," said Dr. Ernest Champion, an associate professor of ethnic studies at the University.

All conference sessions will be in the Assembly Room on the second floor of McFall Center.

The conference will begin at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday when Cortes, chairman of the history department at Riverside, will discuss "Villains, Victims and Victims: Hollywood's Ethnic Stories Textbook." He has written and lectured extensively on the ethnicity of blacks, Mexican-Americans and American Indians and is the author of three major book series: "The Mexican American," (21 volumes); "The Chicano Heritage,"

Alex Haley address to highlight two-day conference

(55 volumes) and "Hispanics in the United States," (30 volumes).

Dr. Alice Tait of Central Michigan will respond to Cortes' talk and her response will be followed by a panel discussion.

At 1:30 p.m., Preston will present some dramatic monologues about "Milestones in the Black Theater." He has made appearances on numerous television shows, among them, "The A Team," "Magnum P.I.," "Amazing Stories," "Hardcastle and McCormick," and "Roots, The Next Generation."

His film credits include "Remo Williams, The First Adventure," and he co-starred in "Body Heat" and "Americathon." He also starred in "White Lions."

Preston has also performed Shakespeare and several plays including "The Death of Bessie Smith," "Freeman," and "Black Visions."

Thursday's program will begin at 9:30 a.m. with Willie's talk entitled "Gifts to America from the Black Experience." A highly-acclaimed sociologist and specialist in race relations, Willie has actively resisted racist and sexist oppression in several sectors of our society.

Very active in the Episcopal Church, he participated in the ordination of women priests in that church, considered at the time to be a controversial issue.

Willie's talk will be followed by a response from Dr. Robert Newby of Wayne State University and a panel discussion.

At 1:30 p.m. Thursday, Dr. Mary Jean Moseley, director of the division of intercultural studies at Ft. Lewis College, will speak on "A Model for Cultural Diversity in Native American Curriculum."

An expert on American Indians, Moseley has received more than $2 million in funding to support her research.

Bowling Green ethnic studies faculty members Dr. Robert Perry, Dr. Win Stone, Dr. A. Rolando Andrade and Champion will preside over each of the conference's sessions. Discussants include Dr. John Scott, resident-playwright at the University; Errol Lam, a library research specialist at the University; Susan Pauly, a teaching fellow in ethnic studies; Dr. Michael Marsden, associate dean of the College of Arts and Sciences; Dr. Charles Corley, a recent doctoral graduate of BGSU; Dr. Edmund Danziger, professor of history at the University; Dr. Adella Peters and Dr. Conrad Pritscher, both education professors, and Dr. Joe Somerville of the University of Toledo.

Pinafore sets sail for musical adventure

Spend an adventurous holiday on the "H.M.S. Pinafore" as the University Theater, in conjunction with the Student Arts Association, presents Gilbert and Sullivan's famous musical at 8 p.m. Thursday through Saturday (Nov. 20-22) and Thursday through Saturday (Dec. 4-6). The show will be staged in the Eva Marie Saint Theater, University Hall.

The show's director, Rich Helldobler (Ph.D. student in theater) says that "Pinafore is an exciting production packed with beautiful songs and a lot of fun."

As H.M.S. Pinafore begins its adventure, we find that Ralph (senior Eric Perkins) has fallen in love with Josephine (senior Lori Kuntz), the daughter of his commanding officer, Captain Corcoran (senior Thomas K. Kieffer). Likewise, Little Buttercup, a buxom peddler-woman, has fallen in love with the Captain himself. Class pride, however, stands in the way of the natural inclinations of both the Corcorans to reciprocate Ralph's and Buttercup's affections. The Captain has, in fact, been arranging a marriage between his daughter and Sir Joseph Porter (senior Greg Thomas), First Lord of The Admiralty, who is of the social class above even the Corcorans.

Josephine finds Sir Joseph insufferable, so when Ralph again pleads his suit and finally threatens suicide, she agrees to elope. Upon learning of this, the sailors rejoice at Ralph's success.

Sir Joseph tells the Captain that Josephine has thoroughly discouraged him and that he wishes to call the match off. All seems lost for the Captain, but, as luck would have it, Buttercup possesses information that turns a dismal condition into a festive occasion for all.

Tickets for "H.M.S. Pinafore" are $2 for students and senior citizens and $4 for all others. Reservations can be made by calling 372-2719. Tickets can also be purchased at the door performance nights as well as at the Chamber of Commerce, 139 W. Wooster, during regular business hours.

Green Sheet

Green Sheet is published by the Bowling Green State University Office of Public Relations for students, faculty and staff.

The next issue of Green Sheet will be the last for the semester. It will be published Dec. 5 and will cover events occurring Dec. 8 through commencement. The deadline to submit information for that issue is noon Wednesday, Dec. 3.

All events must be submitted in writing to the Green Sheet editor, 806 Administration Building. There is no charge to have an item listed.

Harlem choir presents America's musical history

Getting inner city boys off the streets of New York City and onto the stage to give them a creative outlet is the philosophy behind the Boys Choir of Harlem, which will perform as a part of the 1986-87 Festival Series at 8 p.m. on Friday (Nov. 21) in Kobacker Hall, Moore Musical Arts Center.

The choir was created to help youngsters realize their creative potential through music and has evolved into one of the finest boys choirs in the world, with a repertoire ranging from classical, contemporary, gospel and spirituals.

The program will include "Christ Lag in Todesbaden" by Johann Sebastian Bach; "Battle Hymn of the Republic, arranged by Peter Wilhousky; "Celebration" by Kool and the Gang; and "Take Me Back" by Andre Crouch.

Choir members are between the ages of nine and seventeen and are under the direction of Dr. Walter J. Turnbull. Membership is open to all children regardless of race, creed, color or sex and most participants are from all five boroughs of New York City. The choir consists of three separate choirs: performing, training and girls choir, for a total of 125 young people.

The group was founded by Turnbull and Ruth Nixon in 1968 as the Ephesus Boys Choir, named after the inner-Harlem church where they sang. It was incorporated into the Boys Choir of Harlem in 1975 and in 1979 a girls choir was added.

According to the New York "Times," "The Boys Choir of Harlem is a testament to discipline, high standards and commitment. The thought of these young people joyously embracing the sort of challenge their music requires is nothing less than a clarion call to optimism."

The group has travelled extensively throughout the United States and has sung at the Official Recommendation of the Statue of Liberty on Liberty Island on July 5, 1986. They have also appeared at the White House, the opening session of the United Nations General Assembly, as well as having given concerts at Avery Fisher Hall, Alice Tully Hall, Carnegie Hall and Radio City Music Hall.

Tickets for the Festival Series event are $5.50, $8, $10 and $12.50 and can be reserved by calling the ticket office at 372-8171 weekdays between 10:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. Tickets can also be purchased at the Chamber of Commerce at 139 W. Wooster during regular business hours.

Rush tickets will be available for students for $2 at 7:45 p.m. the night of the performance in the Kobacker Hall lobby.

SUNDAY NIGHT - AT LIBRARY...

Festival features feast

Students will have the opportunity to experience as many as 17 different countries at the International Festival being held from 6 to 11 p.m. Saturday (Nov. 22) in the Amani and Northeast Commons.

Food from Indian curry to baklava to tortillas will be available from 6 to 8 p.m. in the Amani. Booths will be set up to display a part of each country's culture; souvenirs, clothing and music will be shown off.

Entertainment, beginning at 8 p.m., will be provided by students with songs from the Philippines, England, China and Russia. Dances will be presented from Spain, India and Italy.

International students will be exposed to American culture later in the evening. Everyone is invited to participate in square dancing at 9:30 p.m.

There is no admission charge, although donations will be accepted. The proceeds will go to the Save the Children fund.

The event is being sponsored by the World Student Association, USG and the Graduate Student Senate. Other clubs and organizations participating in the Festival will be the African Peoples Association, Malaysian Student Association, German Club, Spanish Club, Italian Club and Russian Club.

University dance clubs perform ethnic art

On Saturday (Nov. 22), a pair of ensembles from the College of Musical Arts will join forces with two University ethnic dance clubs to present a special evening of world music and dance entitled "East Meets West Meets East."

The concert will open with the University's Balinese-style Lila Muni Gamelan Ensemble. Next on the program will be examples of Spanish, Italian and Armenian dances by groups led by Linda Francescon, an instructor of Spanish and Italian in the department of romance languages.

The program begins at 8 p.m. in Bryan Recital Hall in the Moore Musical Arts Center and is free and open to all.

World hunger topic of film

Is our food bought at the price of famine in the Third World?

That's the question documentary filmmaker Robert Richter tries to answer in his latest film, "Hungry for Profit." The 87-minute film will make its Bowling Green debut at 7 p.m. Tuesday (Dec. 2) in Joe E. Brown Theater, University Hall. It is free and open to the public.

The film showing is being sponsored by the Environmental Interest Group, the Center for Environmental Programs and the departments of biological sciences and political science.

East meets West in paper exhibit

A lecture-demonstration on "Traditional Hand Papering Techniques: Japanese and Western" will be given at 7:30 p.m. Friday (Nov. 21) in 204 Fine Arts Building.

Tim Barrett, director of the paper mill at the University of Iowa, will present the program, which is being sponsored by the School of Art, the Medici Circle and the College of Arts and Sciences. It is free and open to all.

Barrett will also conduct a lecture-workshop from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday (Nov. 22). Interested persons can sign up at the School of Art.
